CHAPTER XXIII.

Paying a Debt.

When, on the fourth day of the great storm, the flood had climbed almost to the castle walls, a great anxiety arose among the royalists, for surely it seemed that if the waters continued to rise twenty-four hours longer the Castle of Salvarez itself would cease to be habitable. But when, on the following morning, the rains ceased and the floods stopped rising, the lower floor of the castle was still dry.

The relief that Philip and his followers felt at this was very great. Philip at once turned his attention to his neglected plans, and while Gomez and Don Juan Garza resumed the plan for pressing forward to the Orinoco, to cross it and extend their power.

They were thus engaged on the day that the waters had fallen away from around the castle, when Francisco burst in upon them, frantic in some new excitement.

"Your majesty!" he cried. "Gomez! Don Juan! A traitor has again come near us!"

"What do you mean?" asked Philip, starting up and placing his hand on his sword-hilt. "Has Salvarez returned?"

"Nay, not Salvarez," replied Francisco, "and never will, I fancy, for where would he have gone to have survived the flood?"

"Then who? If not Salvarez, who is the traitor of whom your speak?"

"I know not. Yet that some one has been here there is no doubt. The horses are gone."

"The horses? Gone!"

"To be sure," said Gomez, with a gloomy smile. "We might have expected such a loss, though not by the hand of a traitor. Above the storm I heard the poor beasts shrieking in their fear, and no doubt they had broken bounds and stampeded through the water to look for high ground and safety. Of course they were safe enough, for the stables were not flooded by more than a few inches of water. But they didn't know that, of course."

"Such was my explanation when the thing was reported to me," said Francisco, "but unfortunately there is proof that I was wrong and you are wrong. The halters have been cut—every one of them."

"Cut!"

"Cut with a sharp knife. Every severed end is smooth and free from the ragged appearance of a break. The horses have been set free."

"This is a great misfortune," said Philip. "The flood has either drowned or driven off most of the herds in this vicinity, and we shall have difficulty in moving north."

"There will be more—plenty of them," said Francisco. "On my own fields I have two thousand, and there is high ground enough to give all my beasts safety from the floods. It is not the loss of the horses concerns me. It is the presence so near of an enemy."

"That enemy must be found," said Philip.

"The place is full of mysteries," said Francisco. "Do you remember, your majesty, how even your own knife was secretly taken from this room and conveyed to the hand of Salvarez?"

"True," replied Philip. "We found it sticking between the ribs of the murdered sentinel. I brought it here."

He disturbed the maps and papers on the table in an absent way, as if to pick up the knife.

"By the hole saints!" he exclaimed, "it is gone again! Is the thing bewitched?"

"I knew a knife had been used," he said, "and now it would seem to have been your majesty's own."

Philip strode to and fro excitedly.

"Some one assuredly has access to this room," he said, "and visits it when none of us are present. The matter must be investigated and that immediately. Have the guards that have been on duty at this door since the beginning of the flood summoned before us that we may hear their statements."

While Philip, Gomez and Don Juan were engaged in questioning the frightened and bewildered sentinels, let us see what another member of the band was doing.

When Lola Garza had been lying on her sick bed, attended only by her father, whose reports of her condition were anxiously listened to by Philip and Gomez, Mattazudo was as anxious as either of them. When he had been ordered to bring Namampa, the herb-doctor, a gleam of triumph had illumined his ugly face.

And when Don Juan was plunged in grief and Philip mourned the loss of his queen, and Gomez cursed the fate that had taken the beautiful victim from his when he might have succeeded in getting her in his power, Mattazudo alone—Mattazudo the half-breed—smiled and was happy.

And now, while Philip and his officers were engaged in a long and fruitless task of trying to wring information from sentinels who had none to give, Mattazudo, having seen that miles of the treeless plains were free from water, quietly left the castle and took his departure toward the south.

He made his way through the woods on the high bank of the river, striking a path that led off toward the hut where he had found Namampa, the herb doctor.

As he approached the spot where the Indian had had his dwelling, his heart gave a great bound, and a sensation of fear come to him.

The hut of the Carib was gone.

The four posts which had supported it were there, having been sunk deep enough in the earth to make them firm. But of the house itself not a vestige was left.

The flood had torn it from its place and carried it—no one could tell how far—and the face of Mattazudo reflect-closed lips did not dare to utter.

While he stood gazing ruefully and anxiously at the bare spot where once the dwelling of Namapa stood, he was startled at hearing a chuckling sound behind him, and his own name spoken in the Indian voice. He turned, and beheld the Carib himself coming toward him.

"Namapa," he exclaimed, "You are safe, then! My heart stood still when I saw the desolation the flood had brought. I was in terror."

"For me?" asked the Indian, with a knowing leer.

"Yes, for you, you old rogue; but more for—her. What have you done with her? Trust you for a wily Carib to defeat the flood of the most precious prey of all. Where is she? Where is she, I ask?"

"Slowly," replied the Indian. "Your impatience will get you nowhere."

"Curse you! Why do you not speak and relieve my anxiety? Have I not borne enough? Was it all pleasure, do you think, to see the beautifull girl I had sworn should be by own lying as if dead, and Don Juan and Philip and Gomez—those fools!—sniveling and groaning over her? Was it all pleasure to know that she was buried in the ground to wait for darkness, and that her fate depended upon you? If you failed to take her out in time, she would die of suffocation, even if the drug did not kill her. And if you bungled or blundered, the sharp eyes of one of Philip's men would see you, and that would end the thing for you and her and all of us. Come, tell me what I want to know. Where is the girl?"

The Carib chuckled.

"Only you and I knew that the body they thought was useless clay still held the spirit of the girl, and that I—I alone—had the secret by which she could be restored. And then at night, when the crazy soldiers of the pretender were drunk or were at their endless games of chance, I stole to the grave and dug her up and brought her here. I placed in her mouth the powerful drug that brought the blood into motion again, and in an hour she was a living, breathing, beautiful girl, uninjured, the same as before, but without a thought of the grave into which she had been thrown, and demanding to know why she had been stolen from her room while she slept. Ho! That was good. I enjoyed her talk. You chose well—she is a beauty. But you were to come and take her away. Why did you not come?"

"You know why I did not come?" replied Mattazudo, roughly. "The flood prevented me. I have been torn by anxiety to know how you succeeded—whether you saved her from the flood as well as from Philip and Gomez."

"And she is safe?" said Mattazudo. "You swear it? Take me to her at once."

"Not yet, my impatient lover," replied the old Carib. "She is safe enough, I swear; but there is a matter of business between us. I have kept my promise. How about yours?"

"Curse you again! You keep me here at such a time as this to talk of gold?"

"You promised me gold if I got the girl for you. A man pays for what he is eager to get. If I give you the girl first, in your happiness you may forget your debt. Come, where is the gold that was to be mine if I saved her for you alone?"

With an impatient curse Mattazudo pulled a leathern pouch from his pocket and flung it into the Indian's hand.

"There is your gold," he said. "Now, where is my sweetheart?"

"Slowly! Slowly!" muttered the Indian, carefully emptying the gold out into his palm and counting it.

"It is good," he said. "You have kept your promise."

"Hang you!" roared Mattazudo. "You have your gold, what more do you want? Where is the girl?"

"Listen!" said Namampa. "Do you know the ruin of the ancient temple on the hill of the Caribs, where we go once every moon to worship the gods of our people?"

"I know! I know! The old stone ruin on Carib Hill."

"The same," same Namampa. "Go there. Go there at once. You will find the girl there."

"Safe?" asked Mattazudo again, starting off in the direction of Carib Hill.

"Safe!" replied Namampa. Then, in a muttered tone too low for Mattazudo to hear, he added: "Safe! I think so. Safer than you could expect. Farewell Mattazudo my lovely half-breed. We shall not meet again. Namampa, the herb doctor, moves northward to the Orinoco; for if the Englishman does not kill you, it is certain that you will kill me. Therefore, farewell!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Mattazudo's Reception.

Without a suspicion of the surprise in store for him, Mattazudo, the half-breed, tramped on toward the old ruin, where he expected to find the beautiful daughter on Don Juan secreted and bound by Namampa for him.

It will be remembered that Lola, upon being taken from the Carib by Lord Chungmough, fainted. When, under the Indian's care, she at last revived, she opened her eyes, looked wildly about her and exclaimed:

"Where am I? O, my father! Is he here?"

Lord Chugmough bent over her, took her hand in his and said in a soothing voice:

"Be calm, senorita. You are in the hands of friends. I am on a hunting expedition and was driven by the storm to seek this place for shelter. You were brought here by this Indian, who claims that he brought you here to escape the flood also. Rest a while, and when you are stronger you shall tell me your story and I will restore you to your friends."

"No, no, not to the castle!" she exclaimed, growing excited and feverish.

"Well, then, whatever you wish shall be done," he answered. "Be calm now. Later we will talk. Fear nothing, for I have a man with me, and we are well armed."

"Thank you," she murmured. "I—"

She would have continued, but Lord Chugmough had moved away from her.

The Englishman touched Namampa on the shoulder and the Carib knew he was wanted.

He followed the Englishman to the farther end of the old temple, where there was a little more light coming in through the entrance, and, sitting down upon a stone, stolidly watched Lord Chugmough fill his pipe and light it, also keeping a furtive watch on William, whose exact status he did not understand, but whose stalwart proportions were enough to make the withered old Carib doubly cautious.

"William," said Lord Chugmough, when he had lighted his pipe, "how is the supper coming on?"

"Quite ready, me lord," was the reply. "Savory, sir, hand juicy."

"Very well. See that the young lady has plenty. Encourage her to eat. Nothing like a good meal to restore courage, William."

"Werry true, me lord. 'Ansome lady, sir. Will you 'ave yours now, sir?"

"Not just yet. I wish to chat awhile with our interesting friend, here. Now, then," he said, changing from his native tongue to Spanish, "my Indian friend, tell me your side of the story, and if I find you have not told the truth, you'll be a dead Indian, as sure as you are this minute alive."

He puffed on in silence, while the Carib told the story, which was later on verified in part, by Lola Garza.

On the day that this happened Lord Chugmough was standing just outside the ruin, when he saw a swarthy, dirty looking ruffian coming toward him.

"Hello! What do you want?" asked the Englishman.

"Senor is rude," replied the fellow. "In my country we are more than polite. I beg of you to let me pass."

Lord Chugmough stood aside and watched him curiously as he entered the ruin, keeping close at his heels.

As soon as Lola saw him she screamed:

"That is Mattazudo! His presence here explains why I was taken from the castle."

Mattazudo was much surprised to find Lola in such good company. He was more surprised when he received Lord Chugmough's clenched fist in his face and went sprawling on the ground with a cut lip. He was still more surprised when, without a word of explanation, Lord Chugmough picked him up and rained blows like those of a sledge-hammer all over him. And his surprise reached its highest point when the stalwart and irate English lord seized him violently with both hands and sent him hurling through space to fall, terribly bruised, some ten feet or more outside the temple. * * *

Some Vital Statistics.

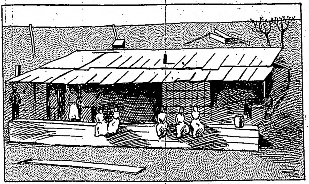
The population of Great Britain is 41,454,578, an increase in ten years of 3,721,656, this itself being an increase of 873,582 over the increase of the decennium 1881-1891. This increase is due to the fall in the death rate, the birth rate, in fact, having decreased from 37.56 in 1871 to 31.57 in 1901. There are over a million more women in the country than men, and this excess is still on the increase. The economic basis of civilization is thus becoming painfully evident. Although Irish emigration has slackened, its population shows a decrease of 248,204 since 1891. The excess of females in this country is much smaller relatively than in England. In view of the great number of females in the richer countries and the increasing disproportion according to wealth, it is evident that the work and dangers of civilization are unduly thrown upon men, a fact the women suffragists and "emancipators" should ponder over. The birth rate is also diminishing everywhere. Despite the lessened death rate, the population of France, since 1896, has only increased 330,000, and in fifty years has increased only 3,000,000, although the French people emigrate less than other European nations. In the same time England has gained 14,000,000 and Germany 21,000,000. The explanation given for France is ascribed to the unlimited division of land and the demand of a dowry of all marriageable girls. But, back of this arises the natural question why her people demand the division and the dot. This brings out the fact that the ruling cause in such matters is the character of a people.—American Medicine.

Blackberry Growing for a Profit

The Kind of Soil That Is Best, and the Manner of Cultivation.

By C. W. STEIMAN.

Blackberries do nicely on all well drained fertile soils that will grow thrifty apple or cherry trees. Thorough drainage is of more importance than fertility. I have gathered many fine berries on clay upland, too poor to raise corn. In a few years the blackberries had brought this land back again to fertility, so that a fair yield of corn could be again produced.



YAKIMA VALLEY FRUIT PACKING HOUSE.

To grow blackberries for profit, commercially speaking, they should be planted in combination with some vegetable or fruit crop. Potatoes, cabbage or other farm vegetables may be profitably raised between the rows. Or gooseberries or currants planted at the same time in separate rows between would probably be better.

If possible, plow the ground very deep, late in the fall, preparatory to early spring planting. Plants, if to be brought from the nursery, should also be ordered and held in the garden, covering them up entirely with fine earth and tramp firm. Early in spring, replow, and harrow until firm and smooth, then lay off rows with lister plow. The rows for such varieties as Early Harvest should be eight feet apart, and rank growers, as the Taylor or Snyder, should be 12 feet apart.

This much done, bring the plants to the field in a wagon filled with wet straw to keep the roots damp. One man places the plants in the row, while another, with a bright hoe, draws the loose soil around them. The plant roots should be tramped firm by man No. 1, while No. 2 is hoeing the loose soil over them. The proper distance apart in the row is about three feet, for most varieties.

The wide space left between the rows facilitates easy cultivation and picking. This space, as noted above, can be planted to currants or gooseberries, then the entire plantation would be in berries. If one variety does not yield much, perhaps another gives a good yield. All the rows can be easily cultivated the first year.

Late in the fall the whole patch should be mulched with wheat straw. If planted in localities where hot winds prevail during most of the summer, the mulch should not be removed for cultivation before the berry season. This is very important for late varieties, which often dry on the cane before they ripen. All canes that have borne fruit should be removed from the patch and burned as soon as through bearing. Also break off all new canes three feet above ground.

Early varieties are most profitable where wild berries still grow in woods, for they are ripe and gone before the wild ones are fit for use. For general planting, Early Harvest, Snyder, Taylor and Illinois are profitable. In marketing, sell only choice berries, not too ripe. Build up a home trade. You will be surprised at the end of the berry season to find how many berries you sold to your friends, neighbors, or in your home town.

Use only square wooden berry boxes which fit into crates which hold tiers of boxes. They are made and sold by all berry box manufacturers.

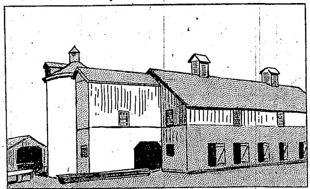
Treat all customers courteously even though a few buy only one quart each. Perhaps next year these very persons may buy gallons upon gallons. Always give full measure in each box. You expect that much even from your groceryman. Keep a memorandum of each purchaser and the amount purchased. If you have other berries or fruits to sell, when making deliveries, tell your customers what delicious fruit you will next have in store for them.

Be an enthusiast. Tell the people what you are doing, and I assure you they will become hungry for what you have to sell. Last but not least, do not disappoint anyone, if on your part it can be avoided.

Convenient Location of the Silo

By PROF. WILBER J. FRASER,
University of Illinois.

In the construction of a silo the question of having it near to the cows is important. Silage is heavy stuff, as it has in it all of the original juice. If it has to be carried far, the labor becomes considerable. In the early days of silos in this country, many silos were built away from the barns, the builders not appreciating the amount of work that would be required to carry the silage to the cows.



THE CONNECTION OF SILO WITH THE BARN.

After that some went to the other extreme and constructed their silos inside of their barns and within a few feet of the rows of cows to be fed. This was a convenient arrangement, but it filled the barn with the odor of silage, and this odor got into the milk. In most cases now the silo is being built in connection with the barn, but not inside it. Our illustration shows such an arrangement, that is very good where it is not desired to store hay in the dairy barn.

The silo is connected with the barn by means of a short extension from the barn. The opening in the silo is on the inside, and in cold weather the doors can be shut, and this will in most instances be enough to keep the silage from freezing. Through the open door in this extension is seen the truck used in conveying the silage from the silo to the cows. When the silage would be likely to affect the milk the door to the barn can be closed to keep out the odor.

Economy in Harrowing Land

By H. M. OLCOTT.

"It frequently happens that I wish to harrow a field corner both ways before planting. If the field is nearly square I start from one corner and drive to the opposite corner and back, then cross over to the other side of the first round, then cross the field and over as before.

"By this plan I harrow the field both ways at the same time and do no more turning around than I would to harrow it once. In this way I save more time than a person would think, especially where the fields are small. It is much easier for the team."

From the fact that half the turning is saved, this system of harrowing is worth considering, says the Farm and Fireside. An observing driver knows that turning the team on an implement is hard on the horses. Frequently implements with tongues blister the hind legs of the horses. Not infrequently short turning has tangled the traces and whiffletrees so that one or both horses have been thrown onto the drag or harrow with disastrous results. Mr. Olcott's plain is worth investigating.

Schools Compared.

Being dissatisfied with the results obtained at other schools, I enrolled at the Aaker's Business College, Fargo, N. D., and to say "I am pleased with the results" is expressing it mildly. After comparing the Aaaker's Business College with other schools, I think I can truthfully say it is the best in the Northwest.

Education.

The principal of one of Washington's high schools relates an incident in connection with the last commencement day of the institution mentioned. A clever girl had taken one of the principal prizes. At the close of the exercises her friends crowded about her to offer congratulations.

"Weren't you awfully afraid you wouldn't get it, Hattie," asked one, "when there were so many contestants?"

"Oh, no," cheerily exclaimed Hattie, "because I knew that when it came to English composition I had 'em all skinned alive!"

In the Wedding Month.

Bishop Olmsted of Colorado was talking at a dinner party in Denver about June weddings.

"June is a lovely month," he said, "and that it should be the month of all months for weddings is a fact easily understood.

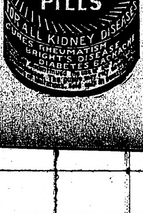
"I was amused by the remark a jeweler made the other day.

"The jeweler said that at this season it is a very common thing to see a well dressed, handsome, intelligent looking young man come into his shop and say, in a painfully nervous way:

"'Um, ah, er—er—ah, er-ha, um—'

"In this contingency the jeweler simply calls to his clerk:

"'Get out that tray of engagement rings, Jackson.'"



Ariadne.

BY CLINTON REVERE.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"By criminy!" observed Riley Heckathorn, "ef cotton don't go up some day we-all is shore goin' to starve.'

He drove a bony fist at the cotton bale on which he was sitting. It was one of the five he had sold that morning.

"Now what I got to show fer it?" came his whimpered query. "Arry don't git no new dress, an' them shoes 'll have to do the ol' woman, onless—" The whimper became a stare of defiance. His pale, milk-blue eyes were leveled on the body of his new cooking stove lying near the edge of the station platform.

He slid off the cotton bale, glanced hastily about, and with half a dozen slinking strides reached the side of the stove. Jerking open the door he drew out the bundle of stove legs. With a quick tug he tore one out and tossed the others back into the oven. Another lean, slinking stride and he was off the platform. With a smart blow he shattered the cast-iron leg on the gleaming steel rail.

"Hit him again!" popped a clear voice behind him.

Riley's long legs quivered as he straightened up.

"Howdy!" he quavered. "Dern my time!—it's you, Mr. Weldon."

"The very same," returned the young schoolmaster.

A brave grin betokened Riley's returning confidence.

"A stove don't need more'n three laigs." The glint of polished steel flashed for an instant in his pale blue eyes. "Ef you-all was to see a hoss with three laigs it might do to talk about. But it don't do to talk about a stove with three laigs."

"Don't worry," laughed Weldon. I get a chance to do all the talking I care for in the schoolroom. I suppose Ariadne and Manny think I don't do much else."

"Arry says you're a boss teacher," said Riley, now softened to the mood of compliment. "She says you've learnt 'em all a heap."

"Ariadne is a fine girl," returned the schoolmaster, warmly. He did not add, however, that he once had kissed Ariadne.

That incident belonged to himself and the elfin, dark-eyed girl who furnished the single glow amid the dusk of the sodden intellects he presided over. He had often found life dull at the little hamlet, whose only link with the outer world was the water tank at which all trains stopped, and one day he wandered far into the woods on a hunting jaunt.

Squirrels were shy, and he lay down by the side of a bayou to rest. If it had not been for the smoke that floated in a blue column from a thicket on the other side of the water he would have thought himself out of touch with work-a-day mortals.

"Are you lost, Mr. Weldon?" The saucy inquiry swept the cobwebs from his brain.

He mumbled something about hunting squirrels.

"I think you had better go home if you don't want chills and fever," she said in pert command. "I am going home, too." She flung a sidelong glance at the column of smoke across the bayou.

He picked up his shotgun and followed. Without a word they fought their way through the tangled underbrush to the railroad bridge.

"It is almost time for the express," said Ariadne. "Shall we wait for it to pass?"

"No. let's go on," he replied, half sullenly.

Too late—half way across the bridge—he saw his error. The screech of the whistle sent a chill to his heart. Blindly he seized Ariadne's hand.

"Quick!" he cried.

He dragged the girl to the side of the bridge where a projecting crossbeam jutted out over the trestle work. He leaped to a seat beside her just as the engine thundered upon the bridge. The crazy piling reeled from the shock of the pounding drivers, and the locked wheels flung out long streamers of fire as the train crashed by.

Ariadne was pale, but she quelled the trembling of her lip with a smile.

"By Jove! You're a wonder!" cried Weldon. "Not a whimper, not a scream. I'm going to—" And he did, right on the brave little mouth.

A week later the secret service raided an illicit still on the other side of the bayou.

The spirit of unrest brooded over Merton.

From the heedless lips of the children, Weldon learned the cause of the furtive looks on the brows of their elders. Merton was stirred over the raiding of the still on the other side of the bayou. The traitor was undiscovered. and the community felt unsafe until it was purged of treason. As if further to deepen the cloud of dread, the revenue officers made another descent. One of the deputy marshals asserted that "moonshining" had not even been checked by the former raid, and that another still would have to be found.

In the idle babble of the other pupils Ariadne took no part. As the days passed she grew strangely distant. She never spoke to Weldon except to answer his questions.

Several times he caught her looking at him. He had admired her eyes. They seemed to have the soft depth of old brown velvet, the leaping light of long-cellared wine. For some reason there was a change. Now they gleamed with the surface brilliance of polished agate, dry, shallow, impenetrable. Yet he found something fascinating in that fixed, impersonal stare. It seemed to flaunt a challenge, and it stirred him.

"I'm going home with you to take supper at your house," he said one afternoon at the close of school.

"I know father will be glad to see you."

She turned to him with that hard, agate stare. "I am ready. Come on Manny." She held out her hand to her eight-year-old brother.

Conversation halted during that walk of a quarter of a mile.

Weldon was driven to the personal.

"I don't know why it is," he hesitated, "but you seem to distrust me."

"Do I?"

He tried no more, and felt relieved when they reached the house. Mrs. Heckathorn was implanted beside a washtub. She was a worn little creature, with tired black eyes and the hump of drudgery heavy on her shoulders. She shifted her "snuff stick" to greet Weldon.

"You must stop to supper," she panted as she wrung out one of Manuel's shirts. "Riley's away though, helpin' Jeff Cole down to his sawmill. Set down. Thar ain't much more to this wash."

Manuel sidled up to him, and soon Weldon's knife was busy on a "Figure 4" trap for quail.

Riley had not returned by suppertime. It was a coarse, meager meal, one that would have set hungry troopers grumbling.

Weldon showed no haste to leave. He would wait for Riley. While Ariadne helped her mother, he sat in the kitchen, which served as dining room as well. He saw the new stove installed in comfortable domesticity in a corner. A big wash boiler, topped by a lid of glistening tin, loomed proudly at the back. Three bricks, laid flat-wise under the rear, gave sturdy underpinning in lieu of the cast-iron leg that Riley had destroyed.

The evening was somewhat lacking in social gaiety. Upon Manuel fell the cheerful duty of entertaining the guest. He took full advantage of the slackened reins of discipline—played horse with a broken chair, imitated a dog fight, the sound of a saw mill, and stood on his head in a corner.

"'N' I kin dance, too," he crowed.

"Now, Manuel," protested his mother, "'tain't polite fer you to give one o' them hoe-downs them onnery niggers learnt you."

"Let him dance," urged Weldon. "I would like to see him. Go ahead. Get over there by the stove where you have room and give us a regular plantation breakdown. Ready."

Manuel's heels began thumping out their noisy tattoo. The rough floor gave out a hollow sound that Weldon's ears seemed to have been waiting for.

A crowded moment followed. In the whirl Weldon saw Manuel bowled over by his mother as if he were the presumptuous cub of an ill-tempered lioness; saw him jerked to his feet and dragged out of the kitchen, shrieking his terror. Ariadne arose, trembling and mute, her pallor deepened by the yellow rays of the lamp on the table before her. At the shrill summons of her mother she ran from the room without glancing around.

Weldon tip-toed to the side of the stove. He knelt down and tugged at the topmost brick of the three that did service for the missing leg. He moved it around but could not pull it out. He got up and cracked it with a heavy kick. His heart gave a pulse of conquest. A hole had been drilled through the center of the brick to permit the passage of a slender copper pipe—the worm of the still.

A slight sound dulled the keenness of his satisfaction. Ariadne stood in the kitchen doorway.

"I have made an interesting discovery." He rolled it out with glib impudence.

"So that is why you came to supper," she said.

He could have kissed those blazing eyes.

"I suppose you will tell?"

"I shall do my duty."

"You have seen how poor we are," she said slowly. Her tone was pleading, yet it had more than the bald appeal of the suppliant. "You know how my father has tried. My mother and I have worked in the fields—"

"Don't," he interrupted. "I am a hired spy, but I must be worthy of my pay. I must tell of this still. If I can avoid implicating your—"

"Arry."

Mrs. Heckathorn saved him the promise of indulgence.

"There will be no school to-morrow," he said, hurriedly. "I must leave before I get too unpopular."

The softer note gave warning of farewell. She could not face it, and with a rush of sobbing fled to answer her mother's call.

When he reached the shabby, one-story house where he boarded, he made his preparations for flight. They took little time—a few clothes, a few books, stowed into the maw of a capacious valise.

The sound of hurrying footsteps pulled every nerve taut. He grabbed his revolver and blew out the lamp. His silhouette on the curtain might prove an easy target. Then came a tap on the pane. Ariadne was calling him in a low, trembling tone. He threw up the window sash and saw her standing bare-headed in the light of the full moon.

"They are coming to kill you! Mother told father when he came home a few minutes ago. He is coming with Jeff Cole and the three Garley boys. I slipped out of the house and came through the woods ahead of them. Oh please hurry and go."

"I am going—on that train." The growing rumble carried a tale of deliverance. He stepped through the window with his valise and the letter he had just finished. "I am not going to tell about the still. I wrote my resignation instead."

"That won't make any difference," she moaned. "It is too late. They know you told about the other."

"Do they know you came to warn me?"

"They will find it out."

"And they will kill you?"

"Perhaps not."

"Ah, little one, you must go with me—away from here."

"I can't," she sobbed.

"Do you care for this life?"

"I hate it."

"Don't you love me?"

He had to read his answer in the quivering, upturned face. Then, for the second time, he kissed her.

The engine was puffing and wheezing at the water tank. The conductor stood by the caboose ready to give the signal.

"We want to go to Little Rock," said Weldon.

"Can't," came the grim negative. "No passengers on through freights."

Ariadne gave a start of terror.

"They see us. They are coming!"

She pointed to the skulking shadows on the edge of the pines.

"Conductor," cried Weldon in a voice of command, "you must take us. It is a matter of life or death. Those men are moonshiners. I am a secret service officer. You must take my word. If I don't prove it you can drop us at the next station."

"It looks more like an elopement to me," said the conductor. "But that's the way I got my wife. Get aboard."

From the edge of the pines came a chorus of hoarse shouts, followed by the spiteful staccato of rifles. The splintering of glass brought a mild oath from the conductor.

"There goes one of our tail lights," he exclaimed. "They must have wanted you." He looked at Ariadne nestling close to Weldon. "I don't blame you, though. This crew don't go any farther than Milvale, but if you'll stop off there, we're open to invites to the weddin'."

Crafty Count.

"Do you remember how Count Cashnaught sympathized with America when he was wooing the daughter of the New York millionaire?"

"I should say so. Why, he used to sing 'Yankee Doodle' two or three times every day."

"And does he still sing 'Yankee Doodle' now that he has won her?"

"No, now he sings 'Yankee Boodle.'"

COTTONSEED OIL ICE CREAM.

Prof. Stillman Made It Without Milk or Sugar.

When Prof. Stillman of Sevens institute gave a dinner to two friends, at which most of the viands were made artificially by chemical means, he had small idea of the furore his efforts would produce. But he has received hundreds of letters asking how different dishes were produced—so many that he has not had time to answer many of them.

The chemical processes which he employed were some of them simple and some quite complicated. To make vanilla ice cream by artificial means, for instance, the alchemist took some triple refined cottonseed oil, placed it in a centrifugal machine which revolved at a velocity of 3,000 revolutions a minute. A beautiful emulsion was thereby produced, which was then frozen, chemically, of course, The flavor was obtained by the addition of vanilla, glucin and nitro-benzol. They say that ice cream composed as above is sold in many Southern states where cottonseed oil is more plentiful and consequently cheaper than milk or cream. It is far from harmful, tastes good, and does not melt as quickly as the genuine ice.

Driven to the Suburbs.

The rapacity of landlords in New York city is driving tenants to the suburbs. It is impossible to get a small flat at a figure reasonably within the average clerk or workingman's means, and such tenants are finding it extremely difficult to meet existing conditions.

TORTURED WITH ECZEMA.

Tremendous Itching Over Whole Body—Scratched Until Bled—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"Last year I suffered with a tremendous itching on my back, which grew worse and worse, until it spread over the whole body, and only my face and hands were free. For four months or so I suffered torments, and I had to scratch, scratch, scratch, until I bled. At night when I went to bed things got worse, and I had at times to get up and scratch my body all over, until I was as sore as could be, and until I suffered excrutiating pains. They told me that I was suffering from eczema. Then I made up my mind that I would use the Cuticura Remedies. I used them according to instructions, and very soon indeed I was greatly relieved. I continued until well, and now I am ready to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one. Mrs. Mary Metzger, Sweetwater, Okla., June 28, 1905."

A Speculator, of Course.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, in an address to a delegation of farmers, won hearty applause by the following observation:

"I overheard a dialogue between two well dressed men at lunch the other day.

"The first man, as he helped himself to asparagus, said:

"'By the way, you said Johnson was a farmer, didn't you?'

"'Good gracious, no!' returned the other man. 'I said he made his fortune out of wheat. Did you ever hear of a farmer doing that?'"

Different.

"Why don't you elope with her?"

"But, good gracious, man! If you are perfectly willing for me to marry your daughter I cannot see any object to be attained by our eloping."

"Can't you? How will it be if I offer you half of what I save on the wedding?"

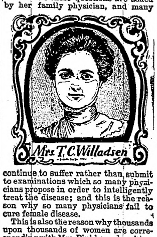
A blush is one of the few things that cannot be counterfeited.

A WOMAN'S ORDEAL

DREADS DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS

Thousands Write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and Receive Valuable Advice Absolutely Confidential and Free

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions in regard to her private ills, even when those questions are asked by her family physician, and many continue to suffer rather than submit to examinations which so many physicians propose in order to intelligently treat the disease; and this is the reason why so many physicians fail to cure female disease.



Mrs. T. C. Willadsen

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass.. To her they can confide every detail of their illness, and from her great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female ills, Mrs. Pinkham can advise sick women more wisely than the local physician.

Read how Mrs. Pinkham helped Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Ia. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude in words. Before I wrote to you telling you how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady, and spent lots of money in medicines besides, but it all failed to do me any good. I had female trouble and would daily have fainting spells, backache, bearing-down pains, and my monthly periods were very irregular and finally ceased. I wrote to you for your advice and received a letter full of instructions just what to do, and also commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I have been restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you I would have been in my grave to-day."

Mountains of proof establish the fact that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for restoring women's health.

I often had to get up a dozen times at night to urinate. Retention set in, and I was obliged to use the catheter. I took to my bed, and the doctors failing to help, began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The urine soon came freely again, and the pain gradually disappeared. I have been cured eight years, and thougn over 70, am as active as a boy."

A Case of Bathos.

Bliss Perry, the new occupant of the chair of English at Harvard, said of bathos recently:

"A good example of bathos came within the experience of a Boston clergyman.

A Boston fisherman had lost his little son, a boy of four, his only child, and the poor fellow was well nigh beside himself with grief. The clergyman went to see him.

"As the clergyman talked to him, the bereaved father wept. His grief intensified itself. The clergyman, before such parental suffering, was more and more moved.

"And suddenly, rocking himself two and fro, with tears trickling down his brown cheeks, the fisherman said in a voice hoarse and broken with emotion:

"Do ye think, sir, I could have the little beggar stuffed?'"

MIGHT READ THE LAW

Crookston Authorities at Sea on Case of Insanity.

The following item, relating to a Red Lake county insane person who was examined in and committed from Polk county, is taken from the Crookston Times:

Considerable trouble has been caused Judge of Probate Morken on account of the fact that Dolfis Clement was brought to this city instead of Red Lake Falls for examination as to his insanity. There seemed to be some misunderstanding on the part of the relatives who brought him to this city who possibly thought that the Polk county officials could do a better job than the up river people. At any rate he was brought to this city and the judge was about to refuse to take the matter up at all but his condition was such that the court thought it would not have been right to send him back where he belonged. Now the matter of paying the bills arises and of course Polk must stand everything and take chances on getting something out of the sister county. At the present time there are several counties that are in debt to this county.

If the authorities in Polk county had taken the trouble to inform themselves as to the law, there would have been no trouble at all. But it is not surprising when it is known that the authorities there even telegraphed to the superintendent at the Fergus Falls asylum to charge the keep of the insane party to Red Lake county. Some one should tell them over there that the asylums are state institutions and the keeping of an insane person is a state charge. It would likewise be an excellent idea to take them out to some quiet spot and read the law over to them every five minutes before eating. Section 2863 of the new code, which covers the case, is as follows: "Whenever the alleged insane person is found to have his legal residence in some other county, he may, nevertheless be examined, and, if found insane, commitled to a state hospital. The necessary costs and expenses of such examination and committment shall be certified by such court to the auditor of the county found to be his legal residence, and shall be paid as other claims against such county.

IN FAVOR OF RAILROAD

Judge Watts Decides Wylie Farmers' Elevator Case.

On Monday Judge Watts handed down his decision in the case of the Wylie Farmers & Mercantile company against the Great Northern Railway and in it he orders judgment for the defendant.

The action was brought to compel the railroad to permit the plaintiff to construct an elevator on the railroad's right of way at Wylie. The case was tried and argued in this city last week, Judge Watts taking it under advisement.

The court held that the plaintiff had not described the property with proper sufficiency and ordered judgment for the defendant.

Another petition will probably be filed to overcome the difficulty.

INSTRUCT FOR STEPHENS

Republican County Convention Held Here Yesterday.

At the Republican county convention held in Red Lake Falls yesterday the delegates chosen were instructed to cast their votes for A. D. Stephens for governor at the state convention to be held at Duluth next Wednesday.

The delegates are H. E. Ives, Charles Johnson, O. M. Skomedal, Lars Bakke, D. I. Anderson, C. W. Latta, Theo. Garceau, Dr. N. M. Watson and J. A. Duffy. A fight was made by northern delegates to have the delegation go uninstructed. It was a move for Jacobson and Jacobson is probably the second choice.

Dr. Watson called the convention to order; H. E. Ives was chosen permanent chairman and A. P. Toupin, secretary.

Committee on credentials—J. A. Duffy, Jos. Pigeon, O. M. Skomedal, P. D. O'Niel, John Eastman.

Committee on resolutions—Lars Bakke, Theo. Garceau, C. W. Latta, K. O. Gigstad, S. M. Sivertson.

The convention resolved for Theodore Roosevelt, Knute Nelson, Halvor Steenerson, A. D. Stephens and indorses L. O. Simons for state senator.

There were bunches of inharmonious talk lying around loose and the friction seemed to have generation in geographical lines, the north end of the county against the south end. The Thief River Falls sentiment being clearly for Jacobson. Only 45 delegates of the 103 entitled to seats were present.

BRUTAL ASSAULT AT CASS LAKE

Charles Armstrong, Superintendent of the J. Neils Sawmill Badly Hurt.

Recovery Probable—Injured Man Brother of J. B. Armstrong of this city.

Charles Armstrong, superintendent of the J. Niels Sawmill at Cass Lake, and a brother of J. B. Armstrong of this city, was most brutally assulted last Wednesday and that he still lives is probably no fault of the assailant. The attempt upon his life was at once cowardly and unprovoked. About noon on Wednesday Mr. Armstrong had asked James Marlow, oiler at the mills to do a peice of work. On his return from dinner the work had not been done and was asked about it in a quiet way. He responded that he 'didn't have to do it and was told if he didn't do his work some one else could be found who would do it and was directed to go to the office and get his time. Mr. Armstrong then turned his back to Marlow and proceeded to make out a time check. While he was doing it Marlow seized a piece of gas pipe about five feet long and struck him a vicious blow on the back of the head, felling him to the ground. As he attempted to get up, Marlow struck him again but the blow glanced and spent its force on Mr. Armstrong's shoulder. Marlow was about to strike a third time but was prevented by timely interference. Mr. Armstrong was immediately taken to the hospital where life for him was uncertain quantity for several days.

Dr. Watson of this city and Dr. Dunlap of Crookston accompanied J. B. Armstrong to Cass Lake, Thursday night to render such assistance they could to the end that the injured man is well on his way to recovery.

It is said to be the third time Marlow has committed an offense of a similar nature. He was at once arrested and hurried to Walker as there were very strong indications he wouhh have been lynched had he been kept at Cass Lake.

A BALL GAME TOMORROW

Fertile Will Try and Beat Out Red Lake Falls.

Weather permitting there will be a game of ball in this city tomorrow between Fertile and the first nine of Red Lake Falls. Healy and Richards will be the points for the home team and a good game can reasonably be expected. Play will be called at 2:30.

HIGH SCHOOL-HAVE BEENS.

The high school nine and the have-beens settled their dispute last Friday evening and the have-beens had decidedly the best of the argument being much too fat for the youngsters. The score was 14 to 5. Buse and Healy officiated for the Have-Beens and Ralph Healy and Ernest Toupin for the Highs.

Arrangements have been made at Thief River Falls for the use of the the schools, text books and apparatus for those attending the summer school to be held four weeks beginning July 5. COMMENCEMENT OF CLASS OF '06

Eleven Young Ladies and Gentlemen Make Their Final Bow on Tuesday Evening.

Elaborate Exercises Mark an Event in High School Life in Red Lake Falls.

Amid flashing lights and odorous flowers, with music and song, with salutatory and valedictory, with class prophecy and class history, with class poetry and oration, surrounded by relatives, friends, well-wishers all, the graduating class of 1906 was ushered from the school life to the life school Tuesday evening.

The Metropolitan opera house was brilliantly decorated in vari-colored bunting and the front of the stage was banked in a mass of ferns and cut flowers. In a semicircle upon the stage were seated the graduates, members of the school board and high school faculty and the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity.

The exercises were begun with a selection from the Wizard of the Nile by the Orpheus Quintette, and the Rev. Mr. Nauman delivered the invocation. Then followed the orations by the graduates which were of an unusual excellence, showing care in preparation, precicion of instruction, ease and grace of delivery. Two songs by the high school chorus sweetly sung and a charming solo by Miss Iza Tibbetts interspersed the orations. The diplomas were presented by Supt. Chamberlain with an appropriate address, Mr. Nauman pronounced the benediction, the Quartette played again and then—"End and Beginning."

BACCALAUREATE.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church by the Rev. Neil Gilchrist of Crookston, pastor at large of the Adams Presbytery. He spoke of Truth and Error setting forth the fallacies that obtain in a numerons objection to the higher education. Mr. Gilchrist declared that even the man, who worked upon the streets, found his labor lightened and performed with a broader intelligence who had the advantage of education. It was a splendid effort and so directed that it made a profound impression upon his auditors. During the evening the pleasures were greatly added to by the Orpheus Quartette's rendition of the Sextette from Lucia. The prayers were offered by the Rev. Conrad Nauman.

SEND MESSAGE ON PACKERS

PRESIDENT WILL SEND IN NEILL-REYNOLDS REPORT ON CONDITIONS.

Washington, June 3.—President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon received the last section of the Neill-Reynolds report on the Chicago packing houses. This comprised the findings summarized. He at once began work on a special message to congress, with which he will transmit the report to that body Monday.

The special message will be vigorous. It will deal plainly with the conditions described by Neill and Reynolds and will urge, in the strongest terms, that the house shall adopt the Beveridge inspection amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill.

President Roosevelt decided yesterday to send in the report, notwithstanding the efforts that have been made to suppress it. He was willing to withhold the report, but he discovered, after the Beveridge amendment reached the house, that the opposition of the leaders to the amendment was so strong that it would be beaten there and a modified inspection amendment passed.

Representative Wadsworth, chairman of the house agricultural committee, and Representative Lorimer of Chicago, backed by Speaker Cannon, have declared the Beveridge amendment shall not pass in its present form. The president is not sure he can force it through the house, but he decided yesterday to play his trump card on Monday, and the report, depicting the foul conditions found by the president's investigators, will go in.

CONGRESS.

Senator Stone Attacks President as Weak and Wavering.

Washington, June 2.—The senate yesterday passed the bill regulating the liability of railroad companies for injury to employes, but Senator Daniel gave notice of a motion to reconsider, which, if it prevails, will have the effect of again bringing the question before the senate for consideration.

The remaining time of the open session was devoted to a speech by Senator Morgan in support of the assertion of American control in the Isle of Pines, and to a discussion of the resolution prescribing a policy for the government in the purchase of supplies for the Panama canal. Senator Stone opposed the amendment as useless and attacked the president as weak and wavering in policy.

CONGRESSMAN TAKES HIS LIFE.

Robert Adams of Pennsylvania Commits Suicide.

Washington, June 3.—Representative Robert Adams of the Second congressional district of Pennsylvania died yesterday at 11:30 a. m. as the result of a pistol shot fired through his mouth into his head with suicidal intent. The act was committed at the club chambers of the Metropolitan club, where Mr. Adams had resided for several years. At 8 o'clock he was found by Horace Clark, one of the negro bellmen, whose habit it was each morning to carry water to the room. On opening the door of the room Clark found Adams entirely nude and sitting upright in an armchair. He was unconscious and the physician who was summoned pronounced the wound necessarily fatal. It is general knowledge among Mr. Adams' assistants in the house that he was a dealer on the stock market and had been for many years. He had, however, met reverses in this connection in the past.

ONLY TWO POINTS IN DISPUTE.

Conferees on Rate Bill Agree on All But Two Amendments.

Washington, June 3.—Only two amendments remained to be settled when the conferees on the railroad rate bill adjourned yesterday, and it is expected these will be decided today. The amendments in dispute are those relating to "Jim Crow" cars and the one prescribed that no hearings of applications for injunctions setting aside orders of the interstate commerce commission shall be had without five days' notice to the commission.

BEEF REPORT IS COMING.

President Decides to Send It to Congress Next Week.

Washington, June 3.—President Roosevelt has decided to send to congress the report made to him by Prof. Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor, and James B. Reynolds, of their investigations into the conditions of the meat packing houses of the West. It has not been determined definitely when the report will be sent to congress, but it probably will go early next week and will be accompanied by a message from the president.

Fire Causes Heavy Loss.

South Boston, Va., June 3.—Fire here yesterday afternoon entailed a loss estimated at between $250,000 and $300,000. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been a lighted cigarette or match thrown in a stable.

GLOOM SHROUDS WEDDING FETES

TRAGIC EVENTS OF THURSDAY FILL MADRID WITH SINISTER FOREBODINGS.

SEEKS TO REASSURE PUBLIC

KING AND QUEEN RIDE OUT IN OPEN AUTOMOBILE UNATTENDED BY GUARD.

Madrid, June 3.—The nervous tension of the populace of Madrid has been wrought up to the highest pitch by the terrible events of King Alfonso's wedding day. The wedding fetes are proceeding officially but the city is filled with sinister forebodings. The king and queen sought to reassure the public by appearing yesterday in an open automobile unattended by a guard. They had the outward appearance of serenity and were wildly acclaimed as they passed through the Puerta del Sol, but this was mingled with cries of fear from women who felt that this was another invitation to some miscreant to scatter death and destruction.

Fails to Lift Gloom.

Last night the heavens were red with illuminations from the Segovia bridge to the Atocha walk, and from the palace the royal family and their guests watched the lurid play of rockets and Roman candles. But all the brightness failed to lift the gloom that has fallen on the community and seemed but a reminder of the terrible events of the wedding day. Lines of cavalry guarded the entrance to the royal palace. Lights sparkled in many of the windows of the palace, but the vastness of the structure gave a somberness corresponding with the prevailing feeling of awe.

Ball and Bull Fight.

King Alfonso wishes to postpone the royal ball set for to-night, but the ministers are seeking to dissuade him. The ministry probably will prevail and every effort will be made to efface by the splendid spectacle of to-day's royal bull fight and the wedding ball, the memory of the tragedy.

Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, husband of the Infanta Maria Teresa, visited the hospital yesterday afternoon on behalf of Queen Victoria.

English Suspect.

The police yesterday arrested an elegantly dressed Englishman as he was boarding a train, as the person nearest fitting the description of the author of the outrage. But a lengthy interrogation of this prisoner in the presence of the proprietor of the chamber from which the attempt was made gave no satisfactory results.

A member of the civil guard yesterday afternoon recognized Hamilton, the English suspect, as a companion of Manuel Morales on the balcony from which the bomb was thrown at the royal carriage. The two men were also seen together at Barcelona.

Funerals of Victims.

The funerals of eight officers and men, the Marquise of Tolasa and her daughter and the Countess of Ordereres took place yesterday in the presence of a vast concourse. At the cemetery military honors were rendered. The king and government were represented.

Yesterday's program of receptions and banquets at the palace was carried out, but the spirit of gaiety which should have marked the occasion was absent. By direction of the ministry no flowers were received at the palace yesterday in consequence of the danger of missiles being concealed in bouquets.

To Suppress Anarchism.

The ministry is considering stringent measures for the suppression of anarchism, and probably bills will be presented in the cortes to stamp out the movement. Arrests are being made of all known anarchists without reference to their whereabouts at the time of the bomb explosion Thursday, and each suspect is required to establish his innocence of connection with the outrage.

Count Romanones, minister of the interior, says the attempt on the lives of the king and queen may be definitely ascribed to anarchy, both in its preparation and execution.

An examination of the royal coach shows it to be badly scarred and damaged. The lamps were shattered.

Alfonso Struck by Bomb.

King Alfonso had an even more miraculous escape than generally known. A fragment of the bomb struck his breast, but the force was broken by the chain of the king's Portuguese Order of Santiago, which he was wearing. The chain was broken, but it stopped a piece of steel which might otherwise have pierced the king's breast.

ITALIAN GIRL IS INNOCENT

JURY ACQUITS HER OF MURDER OF AUNT—GETS OVATION FROM CROWD.

New York, June 3.—Josephine Terranova yesterday afternoon was acquitted of the murder of her aunt, Concetta Riggio. She was, however, not released, being remanded to the Tombs to answer to the charge of murdering her uncle, who was killed at the same time as his wife. Assistant District Attorney Ely, who has conducted the prosecution, was unable to say definitely last night whether or not the second charge would be prosecuted. The jury returned their verdict within sixteen minutes after the court's charge, agreeing on the innocence of the refendant without discussion.

The prisoner received the announcement with perfect composure. As she was being led out of court on her way back to the Tombs the girl was followed by a crowd of women, many of whom thrust the officers aside and embraced and kissed her. Outside the Tombs cheers were raised by a throng of hundreds of Italians to whom the news of the acquittal was made known by the prisoner waving her handkerchief as she crossed the "Bridge of Sighs" leading to the Tombs.

St. Paul, June 3.—Yesterday was a day of variety for the women attending the biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The morning at the armory was devoted to the hard routine business of the organization, in the afternoon the women were guests at receptions at St. Paul homes and in the evening at the armory again they heard some of the addresses they came to St. Paul to hear. It was a day of going from hard work to enjoyment and finally to instruction. The number of people that have come to St. Paul as delegates and visitors is conservatively estimated at 1,200. More will come to-day and there will be arrivals until Tuesday. Committee reports occupied a large part of the session yesterday.

Wadena, Minn., June 3.—Owing to the fact that the Republican county conventions are to be held on June 5, the convention of the Minnesota Drainage league, which had been called to meet here on that day, has been postponed until June 26. Many prominent public men and politicians, as well as citizens who are interested in the subject of drainage, wrote that they would be unable to be in attendance June 5, as they would have to remain at home to attend the county convention. The executive committee then decided to change the date so that the convention would come after the Republican state convention is out of the way. The secretary has sent out notices of the postponement.

45 AMERICANS KILLED IN MEXICO

BLOODY RACE WAR BREAKS OUT BETWEEN AMERICANS AND MEXICANS.

RIOT FOLLOWS A STRIKE

GREAT EXCITEMENT PREVAILS IN ALL TOWNS ALONG THE BORDER.

Naco, Ariz., June 3.—Forty-five Americans were killed yesterday at Cananea, Mex., forty miles south of here, where is located the great copper camp of Col. W. C. Greene. The camp is on fire and it is reported that the Mexicans are defying all authority. They are reported to be using dynamite in blowing up the great smelters and mills owned by the Greene company. The trouble arose at Cananea over the demand of the Mexicans for an increase in wages from $3.50 to $5 per day.

Mexicans Open Fire.

Persons who left there at 1:30 yesterday afternoon said Col. Greene was addressing practically the entire population of the camp in an effort to pacify the excited Mexicans. However, between 4 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Mexicans opened fire on the Americans and forty-five are reported killed.

Col. Greene wired at once to Bisbee for all the armed men that could be sent to protect the Americans and their property in Cananea. The population of Cananea is 23,000, of which 5,000 are Americans.

Flee by Train Load.

The family of Col. Greene arrived here last evening, but the colonel remains with his property. Two trains loaded with refugees are now en route here from Cananea and will go to Bisbee.

Gov. Ysabel of Sonora is hurrying here from Hermosillo, the capital of the state, and will be met here by the Bisbee force who will accompany him to Cananea.

There has been bad blood at Cananea for some time, and only a month ago the home of the superintendent of the mine was dynamited by unknown persons. Yesterday one of the policemen of the city was killed by an American who claimed it was a personal grievance he had against the Mexican.

Rangers Arm for Fray.

Capt. Tom Rynning of the Arizona rangers arrived here last night from Douglas with a posse of his men. All the arms obtainable in Bisbee, Douglas and Naco are now in the hands of picked men who are ready to go to Cananea. It is believed that the Mexican officials at Cananea are doing all they can to save life and property. There is great excitement in all the towns along the border as hundreds have relatives and friends in Cananea.

At 11:30 last night a train load of refugees arrived here from the scene of trouble and confirmed the stories received earlier in the evening.

It is known that at least a dozen Americans have been killed and fully fifty Mexicans.

NEWS OF INTEREST.

ROCHESTER HAS FREAK ROBBER.

He Wanted Only $30 and Took No More.

A robber who seemed to have a hankering for just $30 visited the home of Mrs. B. Hackett at Rochester recently. Although there was much money in the pocketbook which he opened, he took only three $10 bills, ignoring the silver which was wrapped in the bills.

The thief visited no other part of the house than that where the money was kept. There was much loot which an ordinary burglar might have been tempted to carry off, but this man of mask apparently desired exactly $30, and when he had gotten what he came for made his escape without disturbing any more of the contents of the house.

Entrance was effected through a dining room window, and not the slightest disturbance was made, the family upstairs not being aroused. The thief apparently was familiar with the habits of the inmates of the house. No arrest has been made.

PROSPECTING FOR IRON ORE.

Systematic Explorations Under Way in Crow Wing and Cass Counties.

There have been sporadic efforts made to investigate the prospects of iron in nearly every portion of Crow Wing county, but it is only recently that there has been any effort to develop these finds in any definite and systematic manner. Attention now, however, is being turned to Cass county as well. It has just been learned that Richilieu & Whiteside, one of the heaviest firms in Duluth, has purchased about 17,000 acres of land between the known western edge of the Mesaba range and Pine river. This firm is said to be running several diamond drills in that section. Other firms owning land or options in that vicinity are also beginning a systematic search for iron and the land lying between the Mesaba and Cuyuna ranges is being thoroughly worked over.

DITCH BOND CASE SETTLED.

Authorities of Crow Wing Concede a Demand for Interest.

The hitch between Crow Wing county and King & Co., the purchasers of the ditch bonds, is settled, and it is expected the bonds will be sent to Brainerd for execution next week and that the money will be ready in the next ten days.

The hitch arose because of a resolution passed by the board to pay interest only from date instead of from October last, the date on which the bonds were sold. King & Co. contended that the money had been held in hand awaiting the fixing up of formalities in the proceedings, and that they were entitled to interest thereon for the full time. The county finally conceded this point, and there is not likely to be any further delay.

HYDROPHOBIA IS FEARED.

Mad Dog Caused a Panic in Moorhead, Minn.

A mad dog created a panic during the Memorial day exercises at Moorhead.

The dog seized a smaller dog on the outskirts of the crowd, which he shook vigorously. A policeman shot him in the throat. The dog then started through the crowd for Fargo, but was headed off at the bridge and killed by William Crossman. An investigation showed that the dog had bitten several dogs in Fargo before going to Moorhead. An epidemic of rabies is feared.

LIVED OVER A CENTURY.

PAYS TOO MUCH INSURANCE.

Fire Marshal Says Minnesota Contributes More Than Average.

In proportion to the average paid in the United States, Minnesota has paid in ten years $5,971,251 more than her just share for fire insurance. According to a table prepared by State Fire Marshal Edward Peterson, Minnesota has been paying a higher rate than the average in proportion to the losses incurred. The table gives separate figures for United States and foreign companies, but the excess of Minnesota over the United States average is found in both. A third table shows the combined total of the two.

The comparison of Minnesota premium rates per $100 with United States premium rates per $100 for ten years, is as follows:

	Minnesota.	United States.
1895	$1.57	$1,09
1896	1.51	1.06
1897	1.39	1.01
1898	1.27	.96
1899	1.24	.97
1900	1.30	1.00
1901	1.34	1.06
1902	1.48	1.15
1903	1.48	1.18
1904	1.42	1.16

The Minnesota ratio of losses to $100 and the United States ratio of losses is given thus:

	Minnesota.	United States.
1895	$52.26	$55.73
1896	44.24	53.37
1897	45.50	49.29
1898	46.80	57.68
1899	52.15	66.43
1900	69.72	63.29
1901	48.95	59.10
1902	41.43	52.48
1903	36.90	48.61
1904	54.19	61.78
Average	$49.08	$56.70

The excess of Minnesota over the United States average premium is given as follows:

1895	6.21	$228,027
1896	17.09	636,047
1897	7.68	270,472

$50,000 FUND HAS BEEN RAISED.

Albert Lea College Is Placed on a Sound Footing.

There is rejoicing among the friends of Albert Lea college, for the debt has been discharged and the first $25,000 of the proposed $50,000 endowment has been secured. The $25,000 offered by Mr. Carnegie when the first half was raised becomes available and will be put at interest for the support of the institution. However, the management of the college is not satisfied, and the acting president, C. B. Augur, is working to secure the second $50,000 and has quite a nest egg toward that amount.

If an even hundred thousand dollars are secured for the endowment fund, the future of the institution will be assured. Miss Mary Marquis, the principal, is absent in Europe for the summer, better preparing herself for her important duties. Prospective students are making inquiries, and the expectation is that the next year will see a large enrollment in the various departments.

BIDS ARE TOO HIGH.

Contractors Ask More to Build Cottage Than State Can Spare.

Bids have been opened by the state board of control for a new cottage at the Hastings asylum for the insane. There is an appropriation of $40,000 for the structure complete, but the bids were all in excess of the proportion of this amount available for the bare construction. The bids were as follows: John J. Wahl, St. Cloud, $31,600; Ambrose Wahl, St. Cloud, $32,000; W. S. Kingsley, Faribault, $32,850; C. Ash & Co., St. Paul, $35,192; O'Neil & Son, Faribault, $31,980; Olaf Swenson, Minneapolis, $33,480; James Leck, Minneapolis, $41,000; J. J. Daly, St. Paul, $35,446.

State Makes Loans.

The state board of investment approved of applications for twenty-six loans from school districts, townships and counties, aggregating $200,000. Of these loans $100,000 was for drainage and will draw 3 per cent interest. The balance of the loans will yield 4 per cent.

C. H. Warner Quits.

C. H. Warner, superintendent of immigration in the department of the state auditor, has filed his resignation, to take effect at once, in view of the fact that the year's appropriation of $7,000 has been spent and there is not even money left with which to meet his salary.

Mr. Warner is now devoting his time to the care of the Cole gubernatorial campaign, with headquarters in the Ryan hotel, St. Paul. Mr. Warner's work in the auditor's office will be divided among the other clerks.

Restoration of Northwestern National Funds Demanded.

Minneapolis, May 27.—That $50,000 was illegally paid out of the funds of the Northwestern National Life Insurance company to influence legislation in 1901 and $30,000 more in the session of 1903 is one of the allegations made in a complaint filed in the Hennepin county district court yesterday by James Robertson in a civil suit against the former officers of the insurance company. The purpose of this suit is to compel a restoration of the funds of the company involved in the alleged illegal acts of the former officers who are now under indictment on criminal charges. The complain is directed against William F. Bechtel, Dr. Jacob F. Force, Fred J. Sackett, Wallace Campbell, A. F. Timme, H. B. Willia, George Heywood and the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

WILL OPEN BADGER LAND.

Railroad Deal Is Consummated by Milwaukee Company.

Superior, Wis., May 27—For the purpose of opening up Northern Wisconsin cut-over lands to farmers a Milwaukee land company has closed a deal for purchase of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Ashland railway. The road has served as a logging line for a number of years. All the timber has been cut, and the road will now be turned into a passenger and freight line between Ashland, Port Wing, Bayfield and Cornucopia. It will open farming lands which are now practically isolated. It is the intention of the company, it is said, to build spurs at various points along the main line.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, May 27.—Realizing that Sunday baseball has come to stay in his parish, Rev. Father Theodore Waring of Dyersville, faces the situation boldly and announces a change in the hour of his church services so that the fans can attend divine worship and afterward can go to the baseball game. Sunday baseball in Dyersville has become a fixture through long years of practice, so the pastor has agreed with the management of the ball games to hold his services in the afternoon a half hour earlier and the baseball magnates will call the game a half-hour later.

The loss is estimated at $114,000; covered by insurance.

HEGIRA TO TRONDHJEM.

Old Town Will Swarm With Foreign Tourists.

Although the coronation of King Haakon and Queen Maud is almost a month away, Trondhjem is already growing in population. Doubtless the majority of the advance guard are enterprising dealers who expect to do some business during coronation week, but a large number have announced themselves as sightseers, pure and simple, and declare their intention of remaining until after the ceremony.

Even in April the hotels were fairly swamped with inquiries for accommodations, and it is evident that the city will be unable to care for the great army and provide much comfort. Happily a great many parties will come by chartered boat or on excursion boats, which will lay in the harbor while the festivities are on.

Inquiries have come in large numbers from England and Denmark, but also in large numbers from Germany, France and Italy. Even Sweden will be represented, one party of 100 having already secured quarters.

One of the Wilson line boats will be devoted entirely to a large party of English tourists.

TO QUELL SEDITIOUS SPEECH.

Stringent Laws for Suppression of Anti-Military Agitation in Sweden.

The Swedish government has submitted amendments to the existing laws, with a view of combating the growth of the anti-military sentiment and punishing those engaged in the movement. Public encouragement to riots and disturbances is to be punished with fines and imprisonment up to four years. The ranking officer at all places where troops are stationed is to have authority to refuse permission to soldiers to attend gatherings at which there is likely to be remarks advising the conscripts to disregard the conscription, and encouraging hatred against the army. Such utterances are treasonable, detrimental to discipline, and will have a tendency to ruin the efficiency of the army in the event of active service.

The public prosecutor has made official complaint against Hinke Bergegren for his seditious and incendiary language in the large mass meeting at Stockholm on April 3, and also against Axel Holmstrom, the young socialist agitator.

GREAT FAIR AT NORKOPING.

A Swedish-American Day Will Be One of Its Features.

Norkoping, Sweden, is to have a large exposition this summer and one of the innovations will be a Swedish-American day, which has been set for June 30. The initiative in this movement was taken by the Swedish-American society of Stockholm, in co-operation with the Swedish-American society of Gothenburg. These organizations will have charge of the arrangements for the parade and other observances of the day. The parade will include the members of the two societies and visiting Americans, allegorical floats and decorated wagons, and, besides making a tour of the exposition grounds, will also parade through the principal streets of Norrkoping.

Returning to the exposition, there will be an interesting program of addresses, choral and instrumental music, games and athletic sports, closing in the evening with a banquet. Americans who happen to be in Sweden on June 30 will find it worth their while to be in Norrkoping.

LIGHTS FOR FISHES.

Conger Eels in the Little Belt to Have Electric Lights.

According to the Biological society of Copenhagen, an interesting and novel experiment is shortly to be made in the northern portion of the narrow straits known as the Little Belt.

Electric lamps are to be fixed at the bottom of the sea with a view to preventing the conger eels from making their way out into the open sea, to the great detriment of the coast fishing industry. Among the peculiarities of the eel is a marked fear of light—so much so, in fact, that the conger eel will not migrate to the open sea when the moon is at the full.

This idiosynchasy is to be turned to good account by the Danish fishermen who, by illuminating the northern egress of the straits by means of groups of powerful electric lamps, hope to control this point of exit and confine the congers within the limit of the Great Belt.

Labor Day.

Gray, cold and rainy was the day, just as it had been every day for two weeks. Tnd streets were wet and slushy, and therefore but little inviting for parading. Nevertheless the labor day parade came off, with an attendance of about the usual size, about 5,000 people.

Dr. Erikson, the well-known socialist, delivered the oration of the day. Everything passed quietly.

The recruits of the year have just been ordered to the military drilling grounds.

Norwegians in Frisco.

Although the number of Norwegian-born persons in San Francisco was small in comparison with that of many other American cities, the news of the sad disaster has brought sorrow and anxiety to this country. Out of the 2,000 Norwegians supposed to be living at San Francisco, a great number must have hailed from Christiania.

Ever since the news reached here the newspapers, the American consulate and all other places where information was expected to be obtainable, have been overrun by anxious inquirers. While by this time several parties have received direct cables from their relatives, informing them of their escapes, there are still many who know nothing of the fate of their dear ones in that ill-fated city.

The Norwegian press has devoted much attention to the catastrophe, and all the leading papers have printed reproductions of scenes of interest in San Francisco. The Christiania dailies have perhaps been doing better in this line than many other European cities, even of larger size, for the reason that one of the Christiania photographers formerly lived in San Francisco and had in his possession a great number of views from that city, all of which have been reproduced.

The report that no aid from abroad is needed is not understood here. A fund had been planned when the news came. Norwegians are unable to grasp the extent of America's power of recuperation.

Crisis in Sweden.

A crisis is imminent in Sweden as a result of the unfavorable action of the riksdag on the universal suffrage bill. All hope of securing a large enough majority in the second chamber to offset the vote in the first chamber was dissipated when the vote was taken. The bill was passed by a vote of 134 to 94, but inasmuch as the first chamber defeated the measure by a vote of 126 to 18, the joint vote will be against the bill unless there has been a decided change of heart in the upper house.

Only two courses are left to Premier Staaf, either to resign the ministry or dissolve the second chamber and call for the election of a new representation, and with it begin another campaign for suffrage reforms.

Minister Vogt Finds Favor.

The appointment by Norway of B. Vogt as minister to Sweden is as satisfactory as any that could be made, and while the position is both delicate and responsible, it is believed that Mr. Vogt will be equal to the task. Svenska Dagbladet, one of the most influential papers in Sweden, speaks very kindly of the new minister, and welcomes his appointment as one who understands the Swedes much better than the majority of his countrymen. In his boyhood days he attended school in Sweden, and later was a student at Upsala. His conduct as a member of the Karlstad commission is also approved.

Norwegian Athletes at Athens.

The Norwegian turners who went to the Olympic games have done well. In competition with troupes from eight other nations in free gymnastics they came out as number one.

As indicated in a former letter, the sharpshooters held their own. They came out as a good second, having only two points less than the winners og the first prize.

Taken individually, the Norwegians came out ahead, as Mr. Skattebo made 980 points, which was 38 points more than any other competitor. Therefore the troupe has every reason to be satisfied with the results.

Where Andree Was Lost.

Prof. A. G. Nathorst, the Swedish Arctic explorer, in a book on the ill-fated Andree expedition, seeks to prove that the ill-fated balloon party was lost in the open sea a few miles from the coast o fthe Kola peninsula. He has reached this conclusion from a careful study of the places where relics of the expedition have been found, in connection with the air and ocean currents.

Flour Output Reduced.

The Swedish millers, at a recent meeting in Stockholm, voted to reduce their output during the coming year by 20 per cent, or close their mills for a period of ten weeks. The employes will be hit hard by this unexpected decision. As an explanation of their action, the millers say there has been an overproduction in the past and the business is not on a satisfactory basis in consequence.

Speculators Outgeneral Government.

Speculators are taking advantage of the Swedish government's plans for securing control of the country's waterpowers to purchase everything in sight with the hope of selling out at a big profit. Syndicates have purchased large interests in Krangede and Hemsjo falls. The government proposes an appropriation of 50,000 kroner for the use of the railways in changing from steam to electric power on certain lines.

Red Lake papers have been speaking about having a "pastor-at large" there recently. Are the reverend gentlemen as far gone as that in Red Lake?—Minneapolis Tribune.

Worse than that; the last we heard of one of them he was headed for Minneapolis.

Some one has more or less kindly sent us a marked copy of the Olberg Journal which argues thru two columns that the contests for the nomination for governor at Duluth may bring on a factional warfare and that the Republican party is in danger. Well, what of it?

When a man has held good paying public positions for a score of years and amassed a handsome competency he should be ready and willing to retire and give some one else a chance.—Princeton Union.

And this from Bob Dunn who still has a mighty itching to be governor!

A multitudinous lot of Republican papers have taken up the refrain and are singing any number of parodies and paraphrases on, "Gov. Johnson's bad break in nominating Bryan for the presidency." To really please these poor starvelings he should have nominated Aldrich.

To a Democrat the Duluth convention at this distance looks like Jacobson against the field. His full strength must appear on the first ballot for with the field against him he may not be the second choice of any other candidate's following. Block has no qualifications for the position; Summerville and Lord look like purely local candidates; Cole has raised a fuss over state development that no one takes any stock in at partisan campaign doctrine; Andy Stevens—well stranger things have happened but there is no particular demand for any one of the present candidates and by the same token there is no especial reason why any one of them shouldn't be nominated save as men's opinions are colored by personal interest or preference.

Delays are very serious. If your eyes need attention call at once and have them examined.

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Effect of Colors on Body.

The investigation made from time to time upon the effects which certain colors seem to have upon the human organism have recently been supplemented by Prof. Regard of Geneva, who has been making researches with a view of using the physiological effect of colored light in surgery. A number of experiments showing him that he could obtain a deadening of the nerves, which was sufficient to allow of making some local operations of short duration. To build up a strong nervous system you should drink golden grain belt beer. This beer has wonderful curative powers and will build up the system. It's very nourishing and actually a liquid bread. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

SCROFULA AN INHERITED MISFORTUNE

Every one has a hereditary right to a pure blood supply, which insures a strong, healthy body; but how many do we see who have inherited that greatest of all misfortunes, Scrofula, and are struggling under a legacy of disease and suffering? Scrofula is a constitutional trouble handed down from parent to child, a curse from generation to generation as long as the scrofulous matter is allowed to remain in the family blood. As the very foundation of the blood is diseased we see this awful affliction manifested in many ways, such as enlarged glands or tumors about the neck, which often burst and become discharging ulcers, weak eyes, chronic Catarrh of the head, skin diseases, etc. This blighting disease being so firmly intrenched in the blood often attacks the bones, resulting in White Swelling, or hip disease, while a pallid, waxey appearance of the skin, loss of strength, and often lung affections show that the disease is entirely destroying the rich, nutritive qualities of the blood. There is but one way to cure Scrofula and that is to purify the blood and rid it of the germs of disease, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. Its purifying and building-up properties make it the ideal remedy for Scrofula. S. S. S. searches out and destroys all poisons and germs, gives strength, richness and vigor to the weak, polluted blood and cures Scrofula permanently. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine, made from roots, herbs and barks and may be taken with absolute safety by young or old. It so thoroughly removes the poison from the blood that no signs of it are ever seen again and posterity is blessed with a pure blood supply. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

CHAPTER XXV.

Namampa Meets a Man.

A solitary horseman was traveling slowly across the great llanos that stretched from the Coroni westward, wending his way toward the valley where the Castle of Salvarez was situated. There was this peculiarity about this horseman; He had neither saddle, blanket nor bridle. Sitting awkwardly upon the bare back of a clumsy little horse, he clung to its mane, and prodding it constantly with a stick to accelerate its pace, he jogged along as a sailor on horseback always jogs.

Suddenly the horseman bent his head and looked eagerly in the near distance. He saw a man afoot making toward the north with neither rapid nor steady steps.

Drawing nearer to the lonely foot traveler the horseman's eye lit up, for he had recognized the face.

"Hang me if that isn't old Namampa, the herb doctor," he said. "I saw his wizened old face at Lola's funeral and I never could forget it." Then shouting in Spanish: "Ahoy there, Namampa! Whither bound?"

The Carib—for it was really he—looked askance at the stalwart fellow who had thus addressed him, and seemed about to quicken his pace. But it occurred to him that, whether on foot or mounted, the younger man was more than a match for him in speed, so he paused, as if hesitating.

"I do not know you, senor," he said. "You have called my name, but many know the herb-doctor of the Caribs whose faces are not remembered by me."

"Well, your face is remembered by me well enough," was the reply. "No man who once saw it could easily forget it. Not that it is so wonderfully beautiful either."

The thin, withered lips of Namampa cracked into a smile.

"Namampa is old," he said. "He is no longer good to look upon. But as the outward beauty passes away with age, then comes the full development of the soul—the brain. No, Namampa is no longer young nor handsome, but he knows many things."

"A false estimate of your knowledge, old man," said the horseman. "I've heard it said that an Indian charm-doctor, by his arts and humbugs, can make his tribe believe he is a great medicine man, but that he could impose on men who call themselves intelligent was a surprise to me."

"Was a surprise to you!" repeated the Carib, stung with curiosity to know who the stranger was, and resentment that his own skill should be so belittled. "What do you mean? Who are you that you do not believe in Namampa's skill?"

"Well, as to that," replied the horseman, "my name is Tempest, and I am one of those Americans that are not over-much loved by his Royal Highness Philip the Fraud. I've just taken a canter cross country for my health, and now I'm returning to the Coroni Valley to look up my friends. What I mean by doubting your skill is this: A girl was lying ill in the Castle of Salvarez, and you, of all the people this side of the Orinoco, were chosen as the wisest medicine-man and the most likely to pull her through. Did you do it? No. You mumbled your prayers and charmed the men who were well, but failed to affect the girl who was ill. That's a sore point with me, old Carib; not that I loved the girl herself, but I loved her lover, and when she died his heart was broke and the light went out of his life. That was the result of your failure, Carib. I've a mind to cut your lying tongue out with this beautiful knife I stole from the fellow who calls himself king."

Namampa jingled the gold he had received from Mattazudo, and looked calmly and contemplatively at Tempest, as if considering some weighty question.

"American," he said, "the skill of Namampa is for him who pays the best. I knew nothing of your friend. It was Philip, whom they call king, who wished to marry the girl, but Philip offered no gold. There was another who——"

"Confound you!" exclaimed Tempest, leaping to the ground and springing upon the Carib. "Do you mean to say you took the gold of Gomez to murder Lola Garza "

As Jack relaxed his grip, the Indian whispered:

"Let me up! Let me up! I—I can tell you something."

Tempest took the Indian by the hair and raised him to his feet.

"Tell on," he said; "and unless you tell something that pleases me better than what you have told already you might better be saying your prayers."

"Listen, then," the Carib began. "It is true I was called to the sick senorita. I gave her the powder I make from the bark of the cinchona tree. She got well. But suddenly she seemed to die. It was not I that gave her the drug. I knew nothing of it. She was buried. You must have been there, for you say you saw my face at her funeral. It is true, I was there. I have lived long, senor, and I know the faces of men. You saw Philip weeping. You saw the grief of Don Juan. You saw the gloomy face of Gomez. But did you see the gleam in Mattazudo's eyes? No. Only I, the Indian, say that. I suspected a trick. There is a drug that suspends life for twenty-four hours. The half-breed must have known it, for the girl was not dead, but drugged. I said to myself that I would watch Mattazudo and save the girl. I did watch him, and saw that, instead of grieving, he was exulting. I knew that he would dig up the senorita at night. But I got ahead of him, dug her out of her grave, and took her to my cottage and gave her powerful medicines that brought her back to life. The flood came before I could take her to her father, but she is safe, and I am the one who saved her."

It has already been noticed, perhaps, that Namampa had a delightful way of telling just enough truth to suit his purpose, and strengthening it with a little skillful lying.

"Well, I'm blessed," ejaculated Tempest. "Where is Lola now?"

"Look, senor. Can you see that hill far to the south?"

"Yes," said Tempest.

"When the flood came the land where my poor hut stood was under water. I took Don Juan's daughter up on that hill. There is an old stone temple there, high enough to be beyond the reach of the flood. There I found an Englishman. I explained all to him, and he promised to take care of her, and I left her with him. Mattazudo had learned that I outwitted him and has sworn to kill me. He is very powerful among the Zambos, and I am fleeing from him. I want your horse, senor. If the half-breed follows me on a horse he will surely overtake me and kill me."

"Are you telling the truth?" asked Tempest.

"I am, I swear it. The senorita is safe."

"By Jove! Well, old man, you came nearer death to-day than you ever were before. Here's the horse, take it and go."

Namampa, chuckling at his own ready wit, mounted the horse, and Tempest started off toward Carib Hill.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Another Battle.

It was quite a journey to the hill, and after Tempest had trudged awhile, he began to regret that he had allowed the Carib to take his horse. But, he reflected, if the Indian's story was true, Lola was safe enough, and there was no need to hurry. It was not as if she were again in danger and he was hurrying to her assistance.

He was rejoiced, after a tramp of several hours, to see the wooded slope of the hill before him, and in his eager hope to find Lola still unharmed and in the Englishman's care, he forgot the fatigue of the journey and hurried up the hill.

Suddenly he was startled by hearing a shot and shouts as of a skirmish. Another rifle-shot—two, three in quick succession, and the shrieks of wounded Zambos.

"An attack!" said Tempest. "The scoundrels have discovered the place of refuge, and have come to recapture Lola. I wish I had a gun. But, gun or not, I must have a hand in this."

Armed only with the knife, the gallant American sprang up the hill toward the sound of battle.

The course he had taken brought him up in front of the ruined temple, and before his presence was discovered he had ample opportunity of seeing what was going on.

He saw a crowd of at least a dozen of the dirty horde under Mattazudo, led by that worthy himself, who had, true to Lord Chugmough's prediction, returned to recover his lost victim. They hid themselves behind trees or rocks, and shot into the open end of the ruin, now half barricaded with stones and logs piled up by Lord Chugmough and William.

Behind this rude fortification he could now and then catch a glimpse of a head, and the quick aiming of a rifle as one of the Zambos showed himself, thereby drawing upon him the unerring fire of the Englishmen.

Mobs like that led by Mattazudo lean mostly to guerrilla warfare, and the bravest of these followers of the half-breed chose rather to shoot from ambush than in a fair fight.

But, numerous as they were, they were at a marked disadvantage when pitted against the two Englishmen, for the repeating rifles inside the ruin were aimed by men of nerve, whose hands were steady and whose eyes were sure, whereas, probably, not one of Mattazudo's heroes would have hit a man in full view one hundred yards away.

When a Zambo fired, he was compelled to show enough of himself to give Lord Chugmough something to shoot at, and this mark was generally hit.

It did not take Mattazudo long to discover that at the rate they were going the Englishmen would eventually wipe his force out of existence.

It became necessary, therefore, to boldly attack the ruin in a body. The Englishmen would no doubt kill a few, but two men in a hand-to-hand fight must give way to overwhelming numbers, and the lives of a few wretches like the Zambos were not to be considered when the object to be gained was the possession of Lola Garza.

So, keeping well under cover himself—for the pleasure of possessing a beautiful girl would be naught to a dead man—he gave the order to charge.

With a shout the Zambos dashed forward, two falling by the rifles of the Englishmen at the very entrance; but Tempest, as he saw one after another of the gang leap into the old ruin, knew that the gallant defenders of the temple and Lola Garza were doomed unless he, alone, could aid them.

Gripping his poniard tightly, he uttered a wild yell, and, rushing forward, he hurled himself over the barricade and into the very thickest of the fight.

"Here's one for Medworth!" he shouted, as he drove his knife into the heart of a fellow whose gun was aimed at Lord Chugmough's breast.

"Here's another for Crespo and the Republic!" he shouted again, giving another Zambo his death-blow.

"Take one in the name of Uncle Sam while we're at it!" he yelled, and another of the fiends of Mattazudo bit the dust.

His sudden advent disconcerted the Zambos and gave Lord Chugmough and William an opportunity to recover. But even now they were outnumbered four to one, and the fight seemed hopeless.

Tempest seemed endowed with the strength of seven men. With the knife in his right hand he felled one after another, while his left was busy hurling his enemies from him.

He felt a stinging pain in his side, and knew that he was wounded, but still fought on, unmindful of the hurt.

Lord Chugmough managed to get close beside him, and so well did they work together, with William's calm and experienced assistance, that eight men were lying dead and dying upon the earthen floor of the ruin, when the others, panic-stricken and defeated, fled from the place.

"William," said Lord Chugmough, calmly, with his usual drawl, as soon as the last enemy had disappeared, "that was quite a little skirmish." Then turning to Tempest, he said: "And our success, sir, is due to your timely—Oh, I say there, old man, brace up! William, the brandy—he has fainted."

Tempest, who had turned to speak to Lola, who was cowering in a corner during the progress of the fight, had reeled, staggered and would have fallen to the floor had not Lord Chugmough caught him in his arms.

"It is Jack Tempest!" cried Lola. "Poor Jack! Poor fellow! Place him here on these skins. There—make him comfortable. Poor Jack! How nobly he fought!"

"He is a good one," said Lord Chugmough, working over Tempest as he spoke.

In a short time Tempest revived enough to open his eyes. He looked up at Lola and smiled.

"Ah—I'm—glad—you're safe," he whispered.

She knelt down by his side.

"Brave Jack," she said. "Is Arthur with you?"

"No," was the whispered answer. "He's gone—we—you know the castle—you died—we saw you put—grave—Namampa told—me all—I was alone—Arthur—Jacinta—the General's daughter—gone—together—boat—I—I—"

"My heaven!" exclaimed Lord Chugmough, startled out of his iron composure, "the wound is bleeding afresh!"

A gurgling sound in Tempest's throat had choked further utterance, and the poor fellow's fingers gripped Lord Chugmough's. He was conscious, apparently, for he looked at Lola as if he wished to say something. But the Zambo had struck too deep. In a few minutes the weary eyes closed, the great chest gave a heave, and the life went out of Jack Tempest.

MEN WHO REFUSED TITLES.

Distinguished Englishmen Who Regarded Rank as an Empty Honor.

Not all Englishmen are seeking titles of nobility. At least there have been many subjects of the crown who might have worn coronets, but declined to accept them for varying reasons that were at least sufficient to themselves. The late William Ewart Gladstone was a notable example of the latter order of humanity, for the peerage which time after time was held out to him was always rigidly rejected. Swinburne might have han a "Sir" before his name had he chosen to accept the baronetcy which was offered him some years ago, but with true democratic independence he refused to accept a title which, after all, could do little to enhance his fame. Similarily, Mr. Watts, R. A., whose pictures are known the wide world over, could have ranked with Lord Leighton had he stoutly asserted his objection to titles and elected to remain as he was. Lord Tennyson, when first approached on the question of accepting a peerage, was strongly opposed to the idea, but eventually succumbed to the offer on the ground that his son would inherit the title and that he was therefore justified in taking it. It is rumored that the late Professor Huxley was offered a knighthood by Mr. Gladstone—an offer which was politely but firmly declined. A similar honor was proposed to his distinguished contemporary, Professor Tyndall, and was also declined without hesitation. It is an open secret that Charles Dickens might have added "bart" to his illustrious name had he chosen to do so. A few years before the demise of Verdi, the illustrious composer, the late King Humbert sent for the maestro and offered him a dukedom in recognition of his services to music. Verdi refused the gracious offer with dignified courtesy, whereupon the king admitted that he was quite right. "For," said his majesty, "all the titles in Italy could not make you greater than you are."

IMAGINARY DISEASE

CASES THAT CALL FOR OPERATIONS OF "FAKE" NATURE.

Hallucinations Cured by Humoring Whims of Patients—Singular Case Cited in Illustration.

According to a Detroit surgeon, there are many sane persons who, believing that they are threatened with some dangerous disease, insist on undergoing severe operations in order that their lives may be saved.

"We do not really perform these operations," he explains in the News-Tribune, "but I have assisted at many imaginary ones to gratify the whim of a patient suffering from some form of hysteria.

"We had a young girl here a year ago with a most obstinate attack of hysteria which took a very curious form. She would never lie down in her bed, but invariably sat bolt upright with her back against the foot rail, constantly turning her head from side to side like an automation.

"I had watched her do this many times, and one day I asked her why she continued it, to which she replied that there was a string in her head which pulled it from side to side, and that until it was cut she would have no rest.

"This remark gave me an idea, and I asked if she would allow me to examine her head. She was perfectly willing, and after an inspection lasting 20 minutes I gravely announced that she was quite right, and that the only cure was a slight operation in order to sever the string.

"She clapped her hands with delight like a child and declared that it was what she had told several doctors, but that they had all laughed at her. Would I perform the operation at once? I thought it better, however, to defer doing so until the morning, after I had consulted the visiting surgeons.

"Having explained the circumstances, the imaginary operation was agreed upon, and the following morning the young woman was led into the surgery, placed upon the operating table and anaesthetics were administered. Part of her luxuriant brown hair was cut off and a portion of the back of the head two inches above the nape of the neck was shaved smooth.

"Then, in order that there should be something to show for the imaginary operation, the scalp was lanced until the blood ran, leaving a cut about two and a half inches in length. This was bound but not strapped and the patient was conveyed back to her bed, where she remained for 40 minutes before returning to consciousness.

"Meantime I had taken a piece of an ordinary E violin string about four inches long and soaked it in water until it resembled a raw sinew, the object of this, of course, being to show the patient the actual string taken out of her head. When she returned to consciousness she was told how entirely successful the operation had been and shown the string which had been the cause of all her trouble, after which she fell into a natural sleep and awoke perfectly restored. From that day to this she has been entirely cured of her hallucination."

The "Corn Gospel" Train.

"Is it really true, I want to know, that them blue-sky farmers can actually make an extra kernel grow on an ear of corn?" A farmer in Nebraska was asking the question, says Eugene Lyle, in World's Work. He was half contemptuous of the "blue-sky" farmers. They were young men a third of his age, professors in the agricultural school of the state university, with education and linen collars. Never in their lives had they driven a load of produce to town. And what could they know about farming, anyhow? But despite the old veteran's sniff, there was a waver of credulity in his tone, and in his look positive eagerness. What if, after all, the vague and disdained thing, book learning, held secrets to make his land yield more than its usual crop?

School Tasks in Switzerland.

A Geneva correspondent of a London paper thinks the sums done in a Swiss school sufficiently extraordinary to telegraph some of them to his journal. The father of a schoolboy, aged eight, living at Chaux de Fonds, sends to the Impartial the following problems as specimens of the home work the youngster had recently been set to work out at the cantonal school. Multiply 5,101,520,253,035 by 3,530,252,015,105. The boy obtained the following answer: 18,009,652,153,375,778,242,093,675. Divide 71,421,283,542,000 by 24,538,714,212. After some hours' work the youngster obtained as answer 2,910,555,525. The mere reading of those terrible figures should make every small boy glad he does not live in Switzerland.

Artificial Storm at Sea.

The inhabitants of Aboukir, near Alexandria, were recently treated to a wonderful spectacle. It became necessary to destroy some 16 tons of powerful dynamite, and the explosives—sufficient to blow up a town—were taken to sea and placed beneath the water. Something like a submarine earthquake followed the explosion, which was heard for miles around. A waterspout shot into the air to a height of about 2,000 feet, and fell back in dazzling spray. Simultaneously the sea became a whirlpool of seething water, as if agitated by a hurricane.

BUYING PAINT.

Springtime—after the weather has become well settled—is painting time. There is no dust flying, no insects are in the air at that time ready to commit suicide by suffocation in the coat of fresh paint. The atmospheric conditions are also favorable at that season for proper drying and increased life of the paint.

It should be a habit with every property owner every spring to look over his buildings, etc., and see if they need repainting; not merely to see if they "will go another year," but whether the time has not come for putting in the proverbial "stitch in time" which shall eventually "save nine." For one coat of paint applied just a little before it is actually needed will often save most of the paint on the building by preventing it from letting go and causing endless trouble and expense.

Paint lets go because linseed oil, which is the "cement" that holds all good paint together, gradually decays or oxidizes, just as iron exposed to air and dampness will slowly decay or oxidize. The water and oxygen in the air are the cause of the trouble in both cases, and the only reason, outside of its beautifying effect, that we apply paint to wood or iron is because we want to keep water and air away from them. Live paint, that is paint in which the linseed oil is still oily, does this very effectually; but dead paint, that is paint in which the oil is no longer oily, is no more impervious to air and water than a single thickness of cheesecloth would be. If then we apply a fresh coat of oily paint before the old paint is dead, the oil from the new coat will penetrate the old coat, and the whole coating will once more become alive; and this method of renovation may go on indefinitely.

This explains why it is better economy to repaint a little before it becomes absolutely necessary than a little after. When the paint is once dead the fresh coat will pull the whole coating off.

In the days when repainting meant a general turning of things upside down, a two-weeks' "cluttering up" of the place with kegs, cans and pails, a lot of inflammable and ill-smelling materials standing around, etc., the dread of painting time was natural. So was the dread of soap-making time, of shirt-making time, of candle-moulding time and the like. But we live in an age when soap comes from the store better and cheaper than we can make it, when shirts are sold ready made for less than we can buy the materials, when we can burn coal oil or gas cheaper than we can make tallow candles, and when all we have to do when we want to repaint is to pick out our colors from the card at the store and pay the painter for putting on the paint.

When it comes to picking out the paint it is not necessary that one should be a paint chemist, any more than one should be an oil chemist when buying kerosene, or a department store buyer when selecting shirts, or a soap chemist when buying soap. All that is necessary to insure a fair show is some knowledge of the character of our paint dealer and the reputation and standing of the maker of the paint offered. Nor must one expect to buy a pure linseed oil paint for the price of linseed oil alone. It can be taken for granted when any one offers to sell dollar bills at a discount, he is baiting a hook for "suckers." So it can be taken for granted when anyone—whether mail order house, paint manufacturer or dealer—offers paint too cheap, he is bidding for the trade of "suckers," no matter what his promises.

But paints sold in responsible stores under the brands of reputable manufacturers are all good products, differing from one another in the less important matter of the solid pigments contained, but practically alike in having their liquid portions composed essentially of pure linseed oil. The competition of the better class of paints has driven inferior goods practically out of the market, and no manufacturer of standing now puts out a poor paint, under his own name at least.

As to guarantees on paint, they can be taken for what they are worth. Any reputable manufacturer will make good any defect actually traceable to the paint itself and not to improper use or treatment of it. The really important guarantee which the paint buyer should exact from his dealer is that the paint is made by a manufacturer that knows his business, and that the paint itself has a record. If he secures this guarantee he can afford to chance the rest of it—the paint will undoubtedly give good service if properly applied according to directions.

Almost any woman will believe a story that has a scandal attached to it.

GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE.

Interesting Information Concerning Armand Fallieres, Newly Elected President.

Armand Fallieres went through the local schools with no credit and was sent up to Paris to study law, says Vance Thompson, in Everybody's. A year of jolly idleness in the Latin quarter failed to get him through his examinations and he went back to the south. A few years later he was admitted to the bar at Toulouse, but the old father predicted: "He will never amount to anything." A few local cases in which he pleaded showed that he had a kind of eloquence and the politicians took him up. From the fall of the second empire he went steadily up in the republican hierarchy. Mayor of Nerac, deputy, minister, senator, his advance was uninterrupted; when M. Loubet became president he succeeded to the presidency of the senate. His entrance to the Elysee was the logical conclusion of a career which has not been without a kind of plain usefulness.

This good-natured, corpulent old man, with love for a good dinner and the wine of Loupillon, with his Gascon stories and loud roaring laughter, is a type of much that is good in French public life. That kind of a man never runs the risk of getting himself burned as a martyr or hated as a reformer, and his concessions to political necessity are not liable to be of a bad sort. He brings into politics the same friendly give-and-take that makes him beloved by his neighbors.

Down in Gascony, M. Fallieres lives in Loupillon. The house built by his father. There, dressed like a peasant, he comes and goes among his vines. His door is always open, his table always set. It is a large and patriarchal life. A dozen or a score of his neighbors may come casually to the midday meal.

There is always room. And the repasts are always ample; two or three meats, a roast turkey. Gascon pies and cakes, the wine from his vineyard. It is life raised to the 'nth power of simple enjoyment, broad in comfort and good fellowship. In Paris he lives in much the same way. For the last seven years he has inhabited the Luxembourg, by right of his presidency of the senate. Any morning of all these years you might have met him in the streets, for he combats his obesity by long walks. At eight o'clock it has been his custom to set out for the Luxembourg, an umbrella under his arm, an old felt hat on his head, his antique "polka-dot" scarf floating under his chin; at a smart little pace he marched away to the Arc de Triomphe or the Parc Montsouris and back gaain—weighing quite as much as ever and with an appetite that promises more weight.

INDIAN EARTHQUAKE THEORY

Red Men Believe Center of Earth Is Filled with Compressed Hot Lava.

Maj. Cicero Newell tells why there are such things as earthquakes, tidal waves and volcanoes. The major learned these things from Dakota Indians, says the Seattle Times.

"When I lived among the Dakotas," said he, "I found men who, like Buddha, gave seven years of their lives to prayer and fasting, that they might become more pure in the sight of God, or the Great Spirit, as they called that being. After they have proved themselves before their people by performing so-called miracles, such as holding their hands and arms in boiling water and not being burned, shot with poisoned arrows and not harmed, bitten by rattlesnakes and not poisoned, and many other tests that I have witnessed, they are accepted as holy or wise men. The Indians believe that they can get the word direct from God, or the Great Spirit, the same as the wise men and seers of old used to do. I have asked these intelligences to tell me about the cause of the earthquakes and tidal waves, and they explain it like this:

"They say volcanoes are the safety valves of the earth. That the rim of the earth is gradually cooling. As it cools it contracts, making the pressure on the hot lava in the interior greater. At last something must give way, this rim must crack open, or the volcanoes must burst forth and emit this compressed lava.

"Sometimes it is relieved in one way, sometimes in another. Should the earth crack in midocean, where the crust is usually thinner, then the waters of the ocean fill in and there is a great explosion as the water strikes this great bed of hot lava, large masse of the rim are thrown up and islands appear. Sometimes they stay on the surface of the ocean, sometimes they fall back and are again covered with water, but the upheaval so lifts the water that a great wave is started for the shore that carries death and destruction in its way.

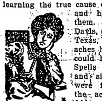
"Many of the old safety valves in the earth are now closing up; only a few remain. The crust is becoming so thick that the cooling process is more slow."

Liked Prison.

Sir Alfred Reynolds, who has done a great deal for British unfortunates, says that when a young girl goes to prison for the first time it is for her a very dreadful thing. He tells of a case which came under his notice as a visiting justice. A young girl, when she found herself in the prison, was utterly overcome with shame and became hysterical. The matron contrived to soothe her. When her time came to be released the girl said to the matron, "I've been so happy that shan't mind coming back again."

AILING WOMEN.

Keep the Kidneys Well and the Kidneys Will Keep You Well.



Sick, suffering, languid women are learning the true cause of bad backs and how to cure them. Mrs. W. G. Davis, of Groesbeck, Texas, says: "Backaches hurt me so I could hardly stand. Spells of dizziness and sick headache were frequent and the action of the kidneys was irregular. Soon after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I passed several gravel stones. I got well and the trouble has not returned. My back is good and strong and my general health better."

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR.

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Sores—Cured by Cuticura.

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema, which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me, and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well. It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw. I am now all well, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases." Thomas M. Rossiter, 290 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J.

Thrifty.

"Tim," asked the passenger on the rear platform of the antiquated flat-wheeled cable car, "what's in this covered stone jar I see out here nearly every time I take a trip on your car?"

"That's my wife's churning," answered the conductor. "One round trip on this old rattletrap brings the butter every time. Saves her lots of trouble."

Mark Twain on Advertising.

Mark Twain, in the midst of a panegyric on advertising, told a remarkable story.

"There was a man," he said, "back Iowa way, who was so pleased with an advertisement in the local paper that he wrote the following testimonial letter to the editor:

"'Mr. Editor. Sir:—After selling all I could, giving barrels away, and stuffing my hogs till they would eat no more, still I had, last fall, about 200 tons of big, juicy, fine-flavored apples left on my hands. I inserted in your valuable paper an ad. that I was willing to send free a barrel of picked fruit, freight paid in advance by me, to any one who would apply, there being, of course, no charge for the barrel. You will hardly credit it, but that little 40-cent ad. cleared out my whole stock of apples, and I could have disposed of five times the quantity on the same terms."

KNIFED.

Coffee Knifed an Old Soldier.

An old soldier, released from coffee at 72, recovered his health and tells about it as follows:

"I stuck to coffee for years, although it knifed me again and again.

"About eight years ago (as a result of coffee drinking which congested my liver) I was taken with a very severe attack of malarial fever.

"I would apparently recover and start about my usual work only to suffer a relapse. After this had been repeated several times during the year I was again taken violently ill.

"The Doctor said he had carefully studied my case, and it was either 'quit coffee or die,' advising me to take Postum in its place. I had always thought coffee one of my dearest friends, especially when sick, and I was very much taken back by the Doctor's decision, for I hadn't suspected the coffee I drank could possibly cause my troubles.

"I thought it over for a few minutes, and finally told the Doctor I would make the change. Postum was procured for me the same day, and made according to directions; well, I liked it and stuck to it, and since then I have been a new man. The change in health began in a few days and surprised me, and now, although I am seventy-two years of age, I do lots of hard work, and for the past month have been teaming, driving sixteen miles a day, besides loading and unloading the wagon. That's what Postum in the place of coffee has done for me. I now like the Postum as well as I did coffee.

"I have known people who did not care for Postum at first, but after having learned to make it properly according to directions they have come to like it as well as coffee. I never miss a chance to praise it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE GROWING OF POTATOES FOR PROFIT

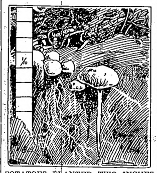
Why the German Farmer Produces Larger Crops Than the American Grower.

In potato growing, as in any other business, the beginner can hardly hope to be as successful as the man who has been in the business a decade or more. The successful grower is he who, knowing the conditions requisite for success, secures those conditions and persistently pursues a well-thought-out course of action.

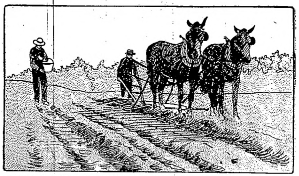
Some of the important conditions upon which success depends are enumerated by Samuel Fraser in Farming as follows:

1. Suitable soil and climatic conditions.
2. Good seed of varieties suited to the environment and to the market.
3. Economical and suitable methods of planting, cultivating and spraying.
4. Good methods of harvesting, storing and marketing.

The main points considered in this article are those of planting and culture; but before proceeding to those it is advisable to say a word about the soil and the seed; for these are important links in the chain of success, and here it is well to emphasize that it requires neglect of but one detail to turn what might have been success into failure. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. If we secure an ideal soil and the best of seed, and neglect to spray for the bugs or the blight, the crop may be a failure; or, if the spraying be carelessly done, it may do nothing except add to the expense. The utmost care and precision in doing the work are required, and in most cases failures are due to lack of care in some detail which, at the first consideration, might appear to be insignificant. The successful grower is successful then because he has learned often by costly experience, where the weak links are, and being forwarned he is forearmed.



POTATOES PLANTED TWO INCHES DEEP.



OPENING THE FURROWS WITH A TURN PLOW AND PLANTING BY HAND.

(Good in Many Respects But Costly and Not Practical for Large Areas.)

The soil considered best is a sandy, gravelly or medium loam, well supplied with organic matter, although potatoes are successfully grown on soils a little lighter, and, in some cases, on heavier loams provided they are well drained. The commercial grower, however, would better select the soil suited to the crop and let some one else try to grow the potatoes with the handicap of a heavy loam soil.

The roots of potatoes extend to the depth of two and one-half to four feet in the soil, and cultivation of the soil to this depth is advised. This cannot be done by mechanical means, but successful growers accomplish the effect by means of plants which have long and strong tap roots, as clover, sugar beets, mangels, alfalfa, and, in some cases, buckwheat. Thus it will be seen that to grow successful crops of potatoes, one must begin the cultivation three, four or more years before planting the seed. Timber is an excellent crop to precede potatoes, because it leaves the soil in such good mechanical condition, but no rotation including this crop is feasible. The long and strong roots of the plants mentioned when they decay leave the soil open, porous, well supplied with air and favorable for producing heavy yields. Buckwheat is an excellent crop to precede potatoes if the soil is a heavy loam. Summarized then, we might say that a good rotation used for light to medium loams in the great potato belt, i. e., the northern states near the lakes from Maine to Minnesota, is: (1) Grain; oats, barley and oats, seeded with clover and timothy; (2) clover, mown twice; (3) timothy and clover, mown; (4) potatoes; another being: (1) oats; (2) wheat; (3 and 4) clover and timothy; (5) potatoes or corn. Terry of Ohio, on light loam used (1) wheat, (2) clover, (3) potatoes; but found that clover every third year was a little too frequent. A fourth course would be better.

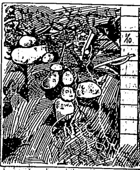
On heavy loam it is advisable to use buckwheat before potatoes, thus: (1) oats; (2) wheat; (3) clover and timothy, mown; (4) clover and timothy—cut early, plowed and sown to buckwheat; (5) potatoes.

The successful grower must be more or less of an experimenter in regard to varieties, although he may grow but two or three varieties commercially; these, however, should be the best. Having secured a suitable variety, it has been shown that the same can usually be improved by using none but heavy yielding plants for seed purposes. The seed should be stored in a cool place. A week or two before planting it should be spread on a well-lighted barn floor or some other light place, two or three tubers thick, in order to cause the buds to begin to grow.

The seed should not be cut until the day it is needed for planting, since cutting the sets a week or more ahead of time reduces the yield. The seed pieces should be chunky, not thin, and weigh about three ounces each or be about the size of a hen's egg. Seed smaller or larger than this size is not so profitable. Early varieties, and those which are shy in starting, should not be cut, but in these cases whole tubers of medium size should be planted. With these exceptions, it does not matter whether the seed be cut or whole. The important point to note is that its yield is proportional to the size of the seed piece, and the size of seed which can be used depends to some extent upon its cost. Under normal conditions, it is best to use a piece weighing about three ounces, as already stated.

When possible, manure should be applied to the previous crop, or else in the fall, at the rate of ten to 15 tons per acre, and the land plowed from eight to 12 inches deep. In some sections of Maine where snow covers the land, it is harrowed and fitted in the fall, but generally speaking it is better to defer this until spring. The disc and the acme harrows are excellent tools for fitting, and the seed-bed should be well prepared. There should be about six inches of fine soil, and it is better to defer planting for a few days than to put the seed into a hard, cloddy soil. An application of fertilizers is generally made and the writer has used the following mixture for several years: 100 to 150 pounds of muriate of potash, applied in fall or early spring; with 300 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate (16 per cent, available) and 100 pounds of sulphate of ammonia applied when planting. A mixture of 40 to 50 pounds of nitrate of soda and 60 or 70 pounds of dried blood might be used instead of 100 pounds of sulphate of ammonia, is desired. Anyone who has solved the fertilizer problem for himself and knows which fertilizers meet his requirements is advised to retain the same.

Russia, which grows nearly 10,000,000 acres with the crudest of methods and implements, produces an average yield of about 94 bushels per acre; Germany produces an average yield of over 200 bushels per acre on an area of 8,000,000 acres; while in America on our 3,000,000 acres, blessed with an abundant fund of information as to the requirements of the crop, with excellent soils, and, as some affirm, the finest agricultural implements in the world, our average yield for the past ten years is but 85 bushels per acre.



POTATOES PLANTED FOUR INCHES DEEP.

In view of our present knowledge, it seems that about four inches is the best depth at which to plant. If planted shallower, there is likely to be a large number of sunburnt tubers; and if deeper, the cost of harvesting exceeds the value of the increased yield. The depth of planting influences the depth at which the tubers form, and it has been found that tubers which develop about three or four inches below the surface are more uniform in texture, of better cooking quality and of better flavor than those grown nearer the surface.

FAINTING SPELLS

Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the Remedy Which Actually Makes New Blood.

Anæmia makes the patient short of breath so that there is often a sense of suffocation, sometimes there is a cough and the sufferer seems to be going into consumption, at others there is a murmur of the heart and heart disease is feared. In the following case severe fainting spells were an alarming symptom resulting from "too little blood."

Mrs. George Forrester, of 7 Curtis street, Watertown, N.Y., says: "Some time ago I took a heavy cold and it left me in a very weak condition. I became worse and worse until finally I had anæmia. I lost flesh and appetite, had no color and was subject to fainting spells. Sometimes they would attack me suddenly and I would fall to the floor with hardly any warning.

"I had one of our best physicians, but after he had been attending me about a month without any improvement in my condition, I decided to see what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would do.

"The pills were well known to me for, about two years before, members of my family had taken them with the best results. I soon found that the pills were just what I needed for I soon began to notice an improvement. After I had taken them a while longer I was entirely cured, and we all believe in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and recommend them highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They do that one thing and they do it well. Impoverished blood is deficient in red corpuscles. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills increase the number of these red corpuscles and in this way send health and strength to every tissue.

All druggists sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A CRITICAL PERIOD

INTELLIGENT WOMEN PREPARE

Dangers and Pain of This Critical Period Avoided by the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs A.E.G. Hyland

How many women realize that the most critical period in a woman's existence is the change of life, and that the anxiety felt by women as this time draws near is not without reason?

If her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, it is at this time likely to become active and, with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden.

At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to begin their destructive work. Such warning symptoms as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, dizziness, headache, dread of impending evil, sounds in the ears, timidity, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when woman's great change may be expected.

We believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the world's greatest remedy for women at this trying period.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism, and builds up the weakened nervous system as no other medicine can.

Mrs. A. E. G. Hyland, of Chestertown, Md., in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with a displacement for years and was passing through the change of life. I had a good deal of soreness, dizzy spells, headaches, and was very nervous. I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me, and I have passed safely through the change of life a well woman."

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful to ailing women.

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR.

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Sores—Cured by Cuticura.

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema, which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me, and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment, and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well. It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw. I am now all well, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases." Thomas M. Rossiter, 290 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J.

Mark Twain on Advertising.

Mark Twain, in the midst of a panegyric on advertising, told a remarkable story.

"There was a man," he said, "back Iowa way, who was so pleased with an advertisement in the local paper that he wrote the following testimonial letter to the editor:

"'Mr. Editor. Sir:—After selling all I could, giving barrels away, and stuffing my hogs till they would eat no more, still I had, last fall, about 200 tons of big, juicy, fine-flavored apples left on my hands. I inserted in your valuable paper an ad. that I was willing to send free a barrel of picked fruit, freight paid in advance by me, to any one who would apply, there being, of course, no charge for the barrel. You will hardly credit it, but that little 40-cent ad. cleared out my whole stock of apples, and I could have disposed of five times the quantity on the same terms.'"

KNIFED.

Coffee Knifed an Old Soldier.

An old soldier, released from coffee at 72, recovered his health and tells about it as follows:

"I stuck to coffee for years, although it knifed me again and again.

"About eight years ago (as a result of coffee drinking which congested my liver) I was taken with a very severe attack of malarial fever.

"I would apparently recover and start about my usual work only to suffer a relapse. After this had been repeated several times during the year I was again taken violently ill.

"The Doctor said he had carefully studied my case, and it was either 'quit coffee or die,' advising me to take Postum in its place. I had always thought coffee one of my dearest friends, especially when sick, and I was very much taken back by the Doctor's decision, for I hadn't suspected the coffee I drank could possibly cause my troubles.

"I thought it over for a few minutes, and finally told the Doctor I would make the change. Postum was procured for me the same day, and made according to directions; well, I liked it and stuck to it, and since then I have been a new man. The change in health began in a few days and surprised me, and now, although I am seventy-two years of age, I do lots of hard work, and for the past month have been teaming, driving sixteen miles a day, besides loading and unloading the wagon. That's what Postum in the place of coffee has done for me. I now like the Postum as well as I did coffee.

"I have known people who did not care for Postum at first, but after having learned to make it properly according to directions they have come to like it as well as coffee. I never miss a chance to praise it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE GROWING OF POTATOES FOR PROFIT

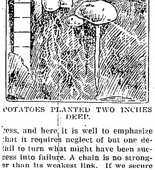
Why the German Farmer Produces Larger Crops Than the American Grower.

In potato growing, as in any other business, the beginner can hardly hope to be as successful as the man who has been in the business a decade or more. The successful grower is he who, knowing the conditions requisite for success, secures those conditions and persistently pursues a well-thought-out course of action.

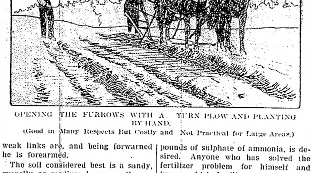
Some of the important conditions upon which success depends are enumerated by Samuel Fraser in Farming as follows:

1. Suitable soil and climatic conditions.
2. Good seed of varieties suited to the environment and to the market.
3. Economical and suitable methods of planting, cultivating and spraying.
4. Good methods of harvesting, storing and marketing.

The main points considered in this article are those of planting and culture, but before proceeding to those it is advisable to say a word about the soil and the seed; for these are important links in the chain of success, and here it is well to emphasize that it requires neglect of but one detail to turn what might have been success into failure. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. If we secure an ideal soil and the best of seed, and neglect to spray for the bugs or the blight, the crop may be a failure; or, if the spraying be carelessly done, it may do nothing except add to the expense. The utmost care and precision in doing the work are required, and in most cases failures are due to lack of care in some detail which, at the first consideration, might appear to be insignificant. The successful grower is successful then because he has learned often by costly experience, where the weak links are, and being forwarned he is forearmed.



POTATOES PLANTED TWO INCHES DEEP.



OPENING THE FURROWS WITH A TURN PLOW AND PLANTING BY HAND.

(Good in Many Respects But Costly and Not Practical for Large Areas.)

The soil considered best is a sandy, gravelly or medium loam, well supplied with organic matter, although potatoes are successfully grown on soils a little lighter, and, in some cases, on heavier loams provided they are well drained. The commercial grower, however, would better select the soil suited to the crop and let some one else try to grow the potatoes with the handicap of a heavy loam soil.

The roots of potatoes extend to the depth of two and one-half to four feet in the soil, and cultivation of the soil to this depth is advised. This cannot be done by mechanical means, but successful growers accomplish the effect by means of plants which have long and strong tap roots, as clover, sugar beets, mangels, alfalfa, and, in some cases, buckwheat. Thus it will be seen that to grow successful crops of potatoes, one must begin the cultivation three, four or more years before planting the seed. Timber is an excellent crop to precede potatoes, because it leaves the soil in such good mechanical condition, but no rotation including this crop is feasible. The long and strong roots of the plants mentioned when they decay leave the soil open, porous, well supplied with air and favorable for producing heavy yields. Buckwheat is an excellent crop to precede potatoes if the soil is a heavy loam. Summarized then, we might say that a good rotation used for light to medium loams in the great potato belt, i. e., the northern states near the lakes from Maine to Minnesota, is: (1) Grain; oats, barley and oats, seeded with clover and timothy; (2) clover, mown twice; (3) timothy and clover, mown; (4) potatoes; another being: (1) oats; (2) wheat; (3 and 4) clover and timothy; (5) potatoes or corn. Terry of Ohio, on light loam used (1) wheat, (2) clover, (3) potatoes; but found that clover every third year was a little too frequent. A fourth course would be better.

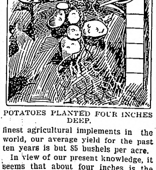
On heavy loam it is advisable to use buckwheat before potatoes, thus: (1) oats; (2) wheat; (3) clover and timothy, mown; (4) clover and timothy—cut early, plowed and sown to buckwheat; (5) potatoes.

The successful grower must be more or less of an experimenter in regard to varieties, although he may grow but two or three varieties commercially; these, however, should be the best. Having secured a suitable variety, it has been shown that the same can usually be improved by using none but heavy yielding plants for seed purposes. The seed should be stored in a cool place. A week or two before planting it should be spread on a well-lighted barn floor or some other light place, two or three tubers thick, in order to cause the buds to begin to grow.

The seed should not be cut until the day it is needed for planting, since cutting the sets a week or more ahead of time reduces the yield. The seed pieces should be chunky, not thin, and weigh about three ounces each or be about the size of a hen's egg. Seed smaller or larger than this size is not so profitable. Early varieties, and those which are shy in starting, should not be cut, but in these cases whole tubers of medium size should be planted. With these exceptions, it does not matter whether the seed be cut or whole. The important point to note is that its yield is proportional to the size of the seed piece, and the size of seed which can be used depends to some extent upon its cost. Under normal conditions, it is best to use a piece weighing about three ounces, as already stated.

When possible, manure should be applied to the previous crop, or else in the fall, at the rate of ten to 15 tons per acre, and the land plowed from eight to 12 inches deep. In some sections of Maine where snow covers the land, it is harrowed and fitted in the fall, but generally speaking it is better to defer this until spring. The disc and the acme harrows are excellent tools for fitting, and the seed-bed should be well prepared. There should be about six inches of fine soil, and it is better to defer planting for a few days than to put the seed into a hard, cloddy soil. An application of fertilizers is generally made and the writer has used the following mixture for several years: 100 to 150 pounds if muriate of potash, applied in fall or early spring; with 300 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate (16 per cent, available) and 100 pounds of sulphate of ammonia applied when planting. A mixture of 40 to 50 pounds of nitrate of soda and 60 or 70 pounds of dried blood might be used instead of 100 pounds of sulphate of ammonia, is desired. Anyone who has solved the fertilizer problem for himself and knows which fertilizers meet his requirements is advised to retain the same.

Russia, which grows nearly 10,000,000 acres with the crudest of methods and implements, produces an average yield of about 94 bushels per acre; Germany produces an average yield of over 200 bushels per acre on an area of 8,000,000 acres; while in America on our 3,000,000 acres, blessed with an abundant fund of information as to the requirements of the crop, with excellent soils, and, as some affirm, the finest agricultural implements in the world, our average yield for the past ten years is but 85 bushels per acre.



POTATOES PLANTED FOUR INCHES DEEP.

In view of our present knowledge, it seems that about four inches is the best depth at which to plant. If planted shallower, there is likely to be a large number of sunburnt tubers; and if deeper, the cost of harvesting exceeds the value of the increased yield. The depth of planting influences the depth at which the tubers form, and it has been found that tubers which develop about three or four inches below the surface are more uniform in texture, of better cooking quality and of better flavor than those grown nearer the surface.

A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

DAIRY MEETING FRIDAY JUNE 22

Meetng to Be Held in Red Lake Falls—Edward H. Slater Will Be Present.

Citizens Will Furnish Free Dinner to All Farmers Attending Meeting.

A dairy meeting will be held at the court house in Red Lake Falls on Friday of next week, June 22, and an especial effort will be made to have all the farmers of the surrounding country attend.

State Dairy Commissioner Edward H. Slater will be present to give an address which is bound to be one of vast interest to all interested in dairying. State Dairy Inspector Joel G. Winkjer will also be present to help make the meetimg a success. Mr. Winkjer is devoting all his time to creameries, is interested in their success and the success of the farmers, the two being identical.

The citizens of Red Lake Falls are preparing to give a complimentary dinner to all farmers who attend the meeting. Tickets will be issued good at any hotel in the city. It is an excellent idea and is sure to show the city's appreciation of the effort made to make the day a memorable one.

The Red Lake Falls creamery is showing great gains over previous years. It is receiving about 6000 pounds of cream a week which is nearly double the receipts of the corresponding time a year ago. For the present month of June $1500 will be paid out for cream. Red Lake county is a natural dairying community and interest along this line should be carefully fostered.

WILL ORGANIZE NATIONAL BANK

Farmers National Bank the Name of New Financial Institution for This City.

Will Absorb Present Bank of Red Lake Falls—Some Time Before Business Begins.

Application has been made by Red Lake Falls parties to the comptroller of the currency for a charter for a national bank in this city.

The name of the new institution will be the Farmers National Bank and it will absorb what is now known as the Bank of Red Lake Falls and the place of business will be identical.

The parties interested are the officials of the Bank of Red Lake Falls; M. O. Sortedahl, president; Samuel Gibeau, vice president; E. G. Storaasli, cashier and P. O. Floan, assistant cashier.

The application for a charter was made about ten days ago and sixty days from that time is allowed for the organization and selection of the bank directory. No move has been made so far along this line and it is not determined who the officers will be. The bank will be organized with a capital stock of $25,000.

The Bank of Red Lake Falls is a private bank with the present officials the backing of the institution. Other monied men of the city will undoubtedly be asked to take stock in the new bank and the directory may be made up other than it now exists.

The details are very incomplete and it will probably be several months before the Farmers National will be ready for business.

$16,000 Diverted from the City Treasury of Thief River Falls to Form a Fund to Purchase County Seat.

OFFER OF PROOF.

C. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady offer to prove by the witness, G. G. Williams, that he is a saloon-keeper of Thief River Falls that he was ordered and instructed by the city council of said city in the years 1904 and 1905 to pay $500, the same being one-half his saloon license money in said city to the city treasurer and $500, the other half, to a committee of said city intrusted with getting signatures to the county seat petition now under consideration and that said money was used by said petition wrongfully and fraudulently in influencing voters to sign said petition by paying them for the same and buying and giving them intoxicating liquors and that a large number of signatures to such petition were obtained by such means.

Sixteen thousand dollars diverted from the city treasury, corruption and prostitution of the voters of Red Lake county are a few of the tactics of Thief River Falls in the county seat contest.

An offer of proof of such assertions was made to the board of county commissioners met to consider the petition of removal and rejected.

OFFER OF PROOF.

G. G. Williams, a saloon keeper of Thief River Falls, was sworn before the board in substantiation and the board refused to listen.

G. G. Williams is but one of sixteen saloon-keepers in Thief River Falls. What was done in his case, is probably what was done with all. For two years he paid half of his license money to the city treasury and half to the corruption fund. One thousand dollars of the money he paid was diverted from its legal and rightful course and devoted to the purchase of signatures. Sixteen saloon-keepers, at the same rate, means $16,000. It has been, it is being liberally spent in defeating the wishes of the people of Red Lake county.

There are undoubtedly many natural adherents of Thief River Falls but to get enough signatures to the petition, signatures were bought and paid for, in money, in drinks, in promises.

PROTESTS FILED.

The board met Monday and immediately upon being called to order a protest was filed by a number of legal voters of the county against any action of the board for the reasons; that the board had no jurisdiction; that the board had already acted upon the petition and caused their decision to be recorded; that the meeting had not been ordered by the board; that no notice of the meeting had been signed or given, posted or published as required by law.

Commissioners Wm. C. L. Demann and Louis Falardeau presented a similar protest.

INJUNCTION DISOBEYED.

At the opening of proceedings an injunction was served upon Commissioner P. A. Ekstrom commanding him to refrain from participation in the proceedings but notwithstanding the order Mr. Ekstrom proceeded to act in the deliberations of the board.

The action is entitled L. A. Kaufer vs. P. A. Eckstrom, and is based upon the facts that Eckstrom was never properly elected to office and acted as commissioner in violation of the law; that he was in favor of the removal of the county seat and has openly said so. The injunction was issued by Court Commissioner Toupin. Whether further proceedings will be brought against Eckstrom for disobeying the injunction remains to be seen.

BOARD'S FINDINGS.

All day Monday and the greater part of Tuesday were consumed in a legal battle between C. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady acting for Red Lake Falls and E. M. Stanton and A. A. Miller for Thief River Falls. Objections were entered and argued and witnesses examined but in every instance when the position called for a decision by the board the vote was invariably the same, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw voting for the side that was to the interest of Thief River Falls. They formed a majority that carried everything before it.

Nearing the conclusion, six names were stricken from the petitions: Henry Champagne, Christ Bjerk, Joseph Champagne, Hans S. Rolland, Halvor Skottern and Ole H. Skottern.

The final findings of the board was to the effect that the petitions for removal were signed by 2000 of the legal voters of Red Lake county and that the number of legal voters of the county as shown by the poll lists at the last election was 2301.

It was a noteworthy fact that so certain were the Thief River Falls commissioners of the final outcome and so determined to have it that way in spite of every opposition that their conclusion was prepared for them and dated the day before they arrived—or were supposed to have arrived—at their determination. It was dated June 11 and the Thief River Falls commissioners arrived at their decision on June 12.

COUNTY AUDITOR INJOINED.

Immediately upon the adjournment of the board Tuesday afternoon an injunction was served upon County Auditor Ford restraining him from calling any special election or making any move therein upon the question of change of county seat. The complaint in the action is signed by L. A. Kaufer. It charges irregularity in the circulation of the petitions, and the conspiracy in Thief River Falls, whereby the saloon-keepers of that city were required to give half of their license money to a fund to be used to purchase the county seat, is set forth at large.

FURTHER ACTION.

The situation, in brief, at the present time, is that the board has found sufficient legal signatures to the petition to warrant the calling of a special election and the county auditor has been injoined from calling any election. The next move will probably be up to the Thief River Falls people to dissolve the injunction. Whether it is dissolved or not, it will go to the supreme court. A decision by that tribunal cannot be had before November. In the meantime—Red Lake Falls is the county seat.

E. L. HEALY GETS HIS FRANCHISE

Valuable Electric Franchise Granted by Grand Forks to Red Lake Falls Man.

The application by E. L. Healy of this city for an electric franchise in the city of Grand Forks was granted by the council of that city on Tuesday. The matter has been hanging on for some time but now is in such shape that Mr. Healy may began proceedings looking toward a long cherished plan.

Briefly stated the ordinance enacted by the council grants to Edward L. Healy, the owner of a valuable water-power in this city and who proposes to transmit from this source of supply electricity to Grand Forks for power and lighting purposes, a thirty-year franchise, authorizing him to construct and maintain the necessary buildings, conduits, poles, wires, appurtenances, etc. in the city, and to furnish electricity to consumers, under city regulation.

TO USE FOR THE INVALID.

How to Make a Blackberry Cordial, Elderberry Wine and a Wine from Blackberries.

Blackberry Cordial.—To one quart juice add one pound granulated sugar, and one tablespoon each of cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg and allspice. Boil gently for 20 minutes and when nearly cooled, add one-half quart of the best quality of rum. Bottle while warm and cork tightly. Seal if not intended for immediate use. A tablespoon four times a day is the usual dose, though in severe cases it may be increased to a small wineglass. Excellent for summer complaints.

Elderberry Wine.—To one quart juice add three pounds granulated sugar, dissolved in two quarts hot water. Set aside in a stone crock for about six weeks. When bubbles cease to rise on top of the liquid, it is ready to bottle. It can be used at once, but the older it is, the better. The same process can be used for currant wine, and a very nice wine can be made from huckleberries.

Blackberry Wine.—Measure your berries and mash them. To each gallon berries add one quart boiling water. Let stand 24 hours, stirring occasionally. Then strain and to each gallon add two pounds granulated sugar. Bottle, cork tightly and let stand four months. This is another way: Mash the berries, add one quart boiling water to each gallon berries and let stand for 24 hours, stirring occasionally. Strain into a keg, adding two pounds best granulated sugar, and one-half pint pure, refined alcohol to each gallon. Cork tightly and let stand four months, when it will be ready for use. It is a fine wine to use in cases of sickness. One pint of best rye whisky may be used instead of alcohol, if desired. —Farm and Home.

ON HOW TO USE MINT.

Mint Bed Easily Grown and Various Ways in Which the Delicious Flavor May Be Imparted.

Mint is always in favor and a mint bed will develop with the least hint of encouragement. The uses of the herb are countless.

Many sweet dishes are improved by the flavor of a leaf or two chopped fine. Chopped mint may be added to a cooked vegetable, a meat salad, an apple or celery salad or to cream of pea or potato soup.

For a mint sherbet, the leaves are merely bruised slightly, add a cupful, packed down, to a pint of boiling water; steep for 20 minutes. Add the grated yellow rind and juice of a lemon and a cupful of sugar.

Cover and let infuse until cold. Strain and pour into the can of the freezer, packing with equal quantities of ice and salt; freeze to a mush. Remove the dasher, scrape the ice from the sides of the can and let remain in until ready to serve. Serve in small green glass sherbet cups flecked with gold.

If preferred, the following fruits may be added to the sherbet. To the quantity mentioned add the juice of three oranges, a cupful of pineapple juice and the milk from one cocoanut. Turn into the freezer, and when half frozen, stir in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs and a wine glassful of any preferred wine.

Mint sauce for spring lamb or for game is made as follows: Chop fine the well-cleaned leaves of a bunch of mint and pour over them half a cup of boiling water and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cover closely and let stand in a cool place half an hour. Then add a dash of paprika, a quarter teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Mix thoroughly. —N. Y. Sun.

DON'TS FOR CHILDREN.

Before the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, held recently, one of the chief questions under discussion was: "How to Rid the Schools of Tuberculosis?" In this connection Dr. S. A. Knopf, of the New York health department, gave the following advice for children:

Do not spit except in a spittoon, or a piece of cloth, or a handkerchief used for that purpose alone. On your return home have the cloth burned by your mother, or the handkerchief put in water until ready for the wash.

Never spit on a slate, floor, sidewalk or playground.

Do not put your fingers in your mouth.

Do not pick your nose or wipe it on your hand or sleeve.

Do not wet your finger in your mouth when turning the leaves of books.

Do not put pencils in your mouth or wet them with your lips.

Do not put anything in your mouth except food and drink.

Do not swap apple cores, candy, chewing gum, half eaten food, whistles, bean blowers, or anything that is put in the mouth.

Peel or wash your fruit before eating it.

Do not kiss any one on the mouth.

Never cough or sneeze in a person's face. Turn your face to one side, or hold a handkerchief before your mouth.

Keep your face and hands and finger nails clean; wash your hands with soap and water before each meal.—Farmers' Review.

TOILERS ARMED FOR WAR ON CZAR

SEDITION SPREADS IN ARMY AND PEASANTS ARE EXHORTED TO RISE.

CZAR MAY BOW TO THE STORM

PREMIER CALLED BY CZAR AND CHANGE IN MINISTRY IS IMMINENT.

St. Petersburg, June 10.—The popular expectation that a change of ministry is imminent is fostered by the simultaneous departure of Premier Goremykin, several leading members of the council of the empire and other trusted advisers of Emperor Nicholas for a conference at Peterhof yesterday afternoon. The cabinet as a whole was not summoned and the results of the conference have not transpired.

The Associated Press learns that it is not true that the government is seriously considering bowing to the storm so far as to adopt to a limited extent the principle of expropriation.

Arming to Fight Czar.

There is a noticeable increase in revolutionary activity at Moscow, and it is evident that the leaders are preparing to take advantage of the first opportunity to start an armed uprising. The workmen of the factories and mills are being systematically armed with Mauser rifles and drilled under the supervision of army reserve soldiers.

In spite of the repressive measures adopted by the authorities, revolutionary meetings are held nightly in the industrial sections. The leaders appear confident that the morale of the troops of the garrison is undermined, as they have received from some regiments promises of support in the event of a conflict.

Revolutionary emissaries have been sent out in all directions into the country to incite the land-hungry peasants to appropriate land and strike on the big estates.

Plan General Strike.

The plan evidently is to secure unity of action in the country and cities and inaugurate a conflict with a general strike. The leaders evidently hope for a complete rupture between the government and parliament, which would furnish the necessary opportunity for an uprising. The situation has greatly alarmed the business men of Moscow and the big landlords of the country.

Dispatches from the interior continue gloomy and show that the gradual extension of the agrarian disorders and partial strikes now affect twelve provinces. The latest disturbances reported are at Kieff and Tver. Numerous collisions between peasants and rural guards have taken place, but nothing in the nature of mass movements has yet occurred.

Peasants Burn Estates.

Peasants in the northwest provinces are burning the property of land owners and resisting the police and soldiery. There is also a systematic refusal to pay rent or taxes or furnish recruits for the army.

A sensation has been caused by the disclosures of M. Vladimiroff, a correspondent o fthe Twentieth Century, formerly the Russ, who investigated the case of Mlle Spiridonovo, and who is now in the Baltic provinces investigating the repressions there. He declares that six out of the eight men executed at Riga were innocent, and says they were forced to confess by torture which put the Spanish inquisition to shame.

Although the Social revolutionists have proclaimed a temporary cessation of the terrorist campaign, there is little abatement in the murders of police officials in the interior.

TAFT WILL NOT ENTER RACE.

Would Rather Be Secretary of War Than President or Judge.

Washington, June 10. — It can be stated on the highest authority that Secretary Taft will not be a candidate for the presidency in 1908. Regarding his acceptance of President Roosevelt's offer of appointment on the bench of the supreme court to succeed Judge Brown, it can be said that he is not hesitating on account of any presidential aspirations, but because he is anxious to remain at the head of the war department, possibly throughout the present administration, or at least until the affairs of the Philippines have been settled to his satisfaction. Mr. Taft will not make a final answer to the president in regard to the justiceship until December.

Militia Arrived Too Late.

PASTOR LEADS RESCUER WORK

PASSENGER TRAIN DERAILED AND FAIRMONT (MINN.) MAN FATALLY HURT.

Davenport, Iowa, June 10. — Rock Island passenger train No. 6, eastbound, was derailed yesterday at Jennings, Kan., and one man was killed and twelve passengers were hurt, none dangerously.

Clad only in his pajamas, Rev. M. M. Want, pastor of the Methodist church at Virden, Ill., was the first to undertake the rescue of passengers from the wreck.

Unaided, he pulled Fireman Frank Richards from the wrecked northbound engine and laid him by the wayside. Richards soon after died. Continuing his work, Rev. Want threw heavy timbers from off Engineer Taylor.

Other passengers came to his assistance and he organized the work of succoring those who had been injured.

John Sweigle of Fairmont, Minn., one of the injured passengers, will probably die.

BOAT UPSETS; THREE DROWN.

Fishermen Lose Their Lives in Five Feet of Water.

St. Paul, June 10. — O. J. Nordby, Dennis S. McGuinn and Jack Shea were drowned in five feet of water at Bass lake shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Maynard F. Brooks, the fourth member of the party, was rescued just as he was sinking for the third time. They were fishing in a rowboat when the tragedy occurred. Although a heavy wind was blowing over the lake at the time and the waves were running high, the slightest coolness on the part of the drowned men would have saved their lives. At the point where the boat capsized the water is hardly five feet deep, and it would have been possible for any one to have walked ashore.

SWINE TRAMPLE ON FARMER.

Rush From Pen Striving to Reach Food.

Fargo, N. D., June 10.—Louis Watson of Amenia is in the county hospital suffering from a broken leg and other injuries as a result of an encounter with a drove of husky porkers. Watson took down the bars to enter a pen where he had a number of hogs. The animals were unusually hungry, and as they saw food in the next pen, they stampeded as soon as the bars were let down. Watson was thrown down and trampled upon by the animals, his leg being broken and his body badly bruised. He will recover.

BURIED ALIVE IN ORE.

Life of Young Italian Miner Crushed Out at Chisholm.

Chisholm, Minn., June 10.—An avalanche of ore crushed out the life of Louis Amato, an Italian, twenty-four years of age, in the Monroe mine yesterday. He was working near "B" shaft with a pick and had a stake driven into the side of the pit to which was fastened one end of a rope. The other end was fastened about his waist. Without warning the dirt began crumbling away from the stick and Amato was thrown to the bottom of the pit, a distance of fifty feet. More than thirty tons of ore fell upon him.

FIRE THREATENS ALL CITY.

Yankton Has Conflagration That Imperils Big Area.

Yankton, S. D., June 10.—Yankton has had the worst fire which has occurred here in many years. The W. T. Van Epps livery, which accommodated sixty horses, was destroyed with seven head of stock; a huge woodpile of many cords was burned, and a barn of the Loonan Lumber company also went up in smoke. The main business district was threatened, having become littered with burning brands from the fire. The fire department coped successfully with the flames. The loss will not exceed $5,000.

WILL RUSH BOY TO CHICAGO.

Anoka Lad May Have Been Bitten by Mad Dog.

Anoka, Minn., June 10. — Lloyd Palmer, the ten-year-old son of W. H. Palmer, a prominent merchant, will be hurried to Chicago to take treatment at the Pasteur institute. He was bitten by a dog a week ago and it now is supposed that the dog was mad.

Theft Goes Long Unnoticed.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 10. — The residence of Mrs. Eliza Richardson was broken into and burglarized of $200 worth of jewelry during her absence in California last winter. The theft has just been detected.

ARMOUR FLIES INTO WILD RAGE

ACCUSES PRESIDENT OF SPITE AND TRYING TO HARM MEAT INDUSTRY.

FILTH IS HASTILY HIDDEN

PRESIDENT GIVES HOUSE COMMITTEE MORE FACTS ON THE SUBJECT.

Paris, June 10.—Ogden Armour lost his temper yesterday when interviewed about the revelations of the Chicago packing house investigators appointed by President Roosevelt. As soon as the subject was mentioned he flew into a rage, stamping his foot and gesticulating wildly as he spoke. He denounced President Roosevelt without stint.

"I say that no sane man, nobody with the slightest knowledge of the packing trade as it is conducted in Chicago, can believe the horror stories in the newspapers," said Mr. Armour.

Packers Not Fools.

"Surely no intelligent person can even imagine that men like myself, who have their entire fortunes invested in the packing business, are fools. They cannot suppose that we are deliberately trying to wreck our own business, to throw away everything we possess, by poisoning the consumers of our products. Any man who will think calmly and intelligently about the situation can see how absurd all this clamor is.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the whole of these so-called revelations has been directly engineered by President Roosevelt.

Attacks President.

"He has a strong personal animus against the packers. He is now doing and he will do anything in his power to discredit them in their business. The reason is too obvious to require explaining to anybody who knows anything about American politics or American public life.

"I consider the system of inspection of the American packing industry fully adequate to guarantee the purity and wholesomeness of the product. If all that Mr. Roosevelt honestly wanted was an improvement in the methods and scope of inspection, surely the most straightforward way would have been to require us to make whatever alterations were thought necessary."

PRESIDENT NOT THROUGH.

Sends House Committee More Facts on Subject.

Washington, June 10.—In response to a request from the house committee on agriculture, President Roosevelt yesterday forwarded to Representative Wadsworth, the chairman of that committee, the report made to him by a committee of the department of agriculture, regarding conditions in the Chicago meat packing houses. Accompanying the report was a letter from the president, in which he points out that there is no conflict in substance between the Neill-Reynolds report and that of the agricultural department experts.

Humorous Haste to Clean Up.

It is said in the latest report that the packing house proprietors are manifesting almost a "humorous haste to clean up, repave, and even to plan for future changes." New toilet rooms are being provided, with additional dressing rooms and clean towels. The report says that the haste toward reform "would have been amusing, if it were not so nearly tragis."

The president says his investigations have not been completed, but that "enough has been developed in my judgment to call for immediate, thorough-going and radical enlargement of the powers of the government in inspecting all meats which enter into interstate and foreign commerce."

REYNOLDS BEFORE PROBERS.

Co-Author of Sensational Packingtown Report Undergoes Quiz.

Washington, June 10. — James B. Reynolds, the co-author with Mr. Neill of the beef report, was questioned yesterday by the house committee on agriculture.

He said he had received no notice of the first hearing and had not heard Mr. Wilson's statement. As to Mr. Neill's testimony there was nothing in it he wished to modify. In particular he wished to substantiate Mr. Neill regarding the shoveling of pieces of meat from the floor of the Nelson Morris company.

FIND SIGNS OF POSTAL LOOT.

Workmen Discover Envelopes in Car of Coal.

Glen Ulin, Minn., June 10.—While unloading a car of coal at the dock workmen found two or three registered letter envelopes, and an investigation developed the fact that they were among the loot taken from the local postoffice at the time of the recent robbery. The exact amount which the robbers secured is not yet known, but is believed to have been several hundred dollars.

MINERS, INCENSED AT ALLEGED ASSAULT, AMBUSH BODY OF GUARDS.

TROOPS HURRIED TO SCENE

MINERS THREATEN TO CLEAR OUT GUARDS BEFORE THE TROOPS ARRIVE.

Steubenville, Ohio, June 6.—While the situation in Jefferson county, Ohio, was most pacific at 10 o'clock last night relative to the miners' troubles at Dillonvale, Plum Run and Bradley, as well as the other mining towns in the vicinity of which a battle occurred between the striking miners and armed guards early yesterday morning, the fear is general that the situation will become most acute to-day when the troops that were ordered from Columbus arrive.

In Turbulent Mood.

At Dillonvale last night the strikers were in a most turbulent mood. It is reported that they and their sympathizers during the day made large purchases of rifles, revolvers and ammunition.

Every attempt is being made by the leaders of the mine workers to hold the men in check, but the failure to pay strike benefits, coupled with their straitened circumstances and the outbreak of yesterday morning have had the effect of inciting the foreign element to desperate measures.

Guards Are Intrenched.

The guards of the United States Coal company, who were involved in the outbreak yesterday morning, are intrenched near Crow Hollow, and persons living in the vicinity, fearfully expectant of trouble, are keeping to their homes.

While various estimates have been made of the casualties, it is impossible to verify any reports of deaths, although it is known that ten or more were hurt. The coal company denies that any guards were killed, but refuses to give out the names of the injured.

Ambushed by Strikers.

The clash was the direct outgrowth of the alleged abuse by the United States Coal company's guards of an Italian union miner from Pittsburg on Sunday afternoon. Early yesterday morning eighty-eight of the company's guards started to march across the hills from Plum Run to the Bradley mine, and at Crow Hollow were ambushed by a force of 200 to 300 strikers. In the battle that ensued several hundred shots were fired, but the strikers' aim was bad, which accounts for the few casualties. The guards were forced after twenty minutes of fighting to retire in disorder to Plum Run.

More Trouble Any Minute.

Deputy Sheriff Murray, who is stationed at the Bradley mine, telephoned to Sheriff Vorhees last night saying that the miners threatened to "clean out" the guards before the troops arrive and that he was expecting trouble at any minute. A telegram was received by the sheriff last night from Brig. Gen. Speaks announcing that he would arrive with the militia before morning.

CONGRESS.

Peace Spreads Its Pinions Over the House.

Washington, June 5.—Peace spread its pinions over the house of representatives yesterday, the leader of the minority, Mr. John Sharp Williams, being willing to call off the forces of opposition now that the report of the conferees had been made on the statehood bill.

It being suspension day a number of bills both of local and national interest were passed with little or no debate. The house being officially notified by the senate of the death of Senator Gorman of Maryland, Mr. Talbot (Md.) presented resolutions of condolence, and after the appointment of representatives to attend the funeral services the house, as a further mark of respect to the late senator from Maryland, adjourned.

New York, June 6.—Bertha Claiche, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the first degree for the murder of Emil Gerdron, was yesterday sentenced to do not less than two years and two months nor more than five years' imprisonment by Judge Davis. The maximum penalty for the crime is twenty years.

TROOPS GO TO DILLONVALE

PREPARE FOR TROUBLE FROM STRIKERS ON OPENING OF THE MINES.

Dillonvale, Ohio, June 10—Although no disorder occurred in this section of the strike district yesterday, the situation is such that Sheriff Voorhees has deemed it necessary to transfer the companies of state troops now stationed at Bradley to Dillonvale, and they will come here to-day. Sheriff Voorhees has been informed by officials of the M. A. Hanna Coal company that it will resume operations here Monday and that the company fears trouble from the strikers.

The company is depending upon a number of its old employes returning to work under last year's scale, and officials say some of the old employes have told the management that if the whistle is blown on Monday they will return to work regardless of what the union officials may say.

At Robyville and Ramsey yesterday the Roby Coal company notified the pit bosses to prepare the mines for resumption with non-union men Monday, but they refused to comply and quit. The company now is arranging to import men.

HOTELS CLEAN AND SAFE.

State Inspector Notes Greatly Improved Condition.

Minnesota hotels are sanitary and well provided with fire escapes, says State Hotel Inspector Ryan. Mr. Ryan returned recently from a tour of inspection throughout the state, and he says that, with one exception, the hotels were all provided with adequate means of escape in case of fire.

"The hotels of this state are exceedingly conscientious regarding safety appliances, and every precaution is taken to guard against loss of life. During my last trip I came across only one hotel which was not provided with a proper means of escape in case of fire.

The hotels, as a rule, are run on a sanitary basis, and I find little trouble along this line. In fact, proprietors find it to their advantage to have clean, wholesome places, as the traveling public are quick to detect unsavory conditions. Of course, in the smaller towns, where there is but one hotel, possibly two, the traveling public is not permitted much of a choice, but as a rule the conditions are all that can be expected. In some vicinities there has been a certain laxity regarding these matters, but it has now passed away to a great extent. The proprietor of a hotel, no matter what may be his views on the question, is willing to comply with the law.

"A matter which I have advocated and which I am pleased to say is beginning to bear fruit, is cleanliness among the servants and neatness in the dining room. A good many hotelkeepers seemed to fail to realize that a dinner, no matter how well cooked, may not create a favorable impression on the guests if it is served by a girl with a dirty apron or tangled locks. Neatness among the dining room girls, I think, is greatly appreciated by every one who travels and conceals a good many minor defects. The same rule applies to the house girls and, in fact, to every one who is connected with the establishment. I have frequently known traveling men to patronize a hotel where the meals were acknowledged to be poor because the hotel was clean.

"For a time many of the proprietors failed to realize this, but they are now beginning to wake up, and as a result the hotels are doing a better business.

If it is true, and an offer of proof was made to the county commissioners, that large sums of money, presumably from $500 to $1000 from each saloon-keeper of Thief River River Falls, was "diverted" from the city treasury of that city, it should be made the subject of judicial investigation. No committee of citizens, or even a city council, has any right legally or moally, to compound with a class of revenue-payers to divert sums of money from the treasury for any purpose, much less to devote it to the criminal purpose of suborning voters. Let there be an investigation.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Griping pains in the region of the navel and the lower part of the abdomen, sometimes accompanied by nausea and vomiting—that is appendictis. There is but one remedy that will cure it—Dr. Adler's Treatment, the discovery of a noted German specialisit. Large dollar bottles at W. A. Schrieter. 34-37

Mrs. F. L. Farley and Mrs. J. C. Wilkison entertained the South Side club at the Farley home Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. L. Dautremont. The afternoon was passed in converse and refreshments. It was a very happy occasion.

Anton Huber, Elizabeth N. J., writes: "I have a girl 11 years old who had two attacks of appendictis last winter and was threatened with another attack. The Junior class banquet to the Seniors at Paul's hotel last Thursday evening was a most elaborate affair. The parlors, reception room and dining room were handsomely decorated with class colors and flowers, After a splendid menu was discussed a program of addresses was given with Supt. E. W. Chamberlain as toastmaster. They were; "Reflections," by Lillian Nauman; "High School Girls," Joseph Toupin; "High School Boys," Miss Ella Krueger; "Seniors," Ralph Healy; "Juniors," Miss Lizzie Casserly; "Farewell," Miss Lucie Hunt. The band orchestra furnished music thruout the evening.

We often see a friend, relative or acquaintace, apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal disease—appendictis. People seem to know so little about this disease and therefor are not prepared. We have read with great interest a book on appendictis written by Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin. This book tells all about this disease, how it is caused and how it can be prevented and cured. For a free copy call at W. A. Schrieter. 34-37

The weather of last week's last days did not do much harm—didn't do much good either.

George, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Damasse Lachance has been seriously sick lately but is reported as gaining rapidly.

M. Quesnelle and wife were shoppers at the Falls Tuesday.

Telesphore Durcharme, that famous ditcher, who left Monday of last week to enter upon his duties on the ditch contract taken by some Terrebonne hustlers, returned home Sunday forenoon but wore a sad smile on his face or as a word, "smileless" He was expecting to remain a month or so but damp wheather prevented him from doing so. Telesphore is a bright and ambitious young man but this ocoasion has evidently proved fatal.

Joseph Durcharme transacted business at Red Lake Falls Saturday last.

Master Albert Ducharme of Perrault Station was employed at M. Quesnell's last week.

Ed. Vaubrin called on the newly arrived, Telesphore Ducharme, Sunday.

Misses Annie and Aurore Duchame entertained a few friends at their home Sunday evening.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal conition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

S.S.S. THE STANDARD TONIC

The ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed, and the method of combining and preparing them so that they gently and pleasantly build up and strengthen every part of the body, make it the ideal tonic for a disordered condition of the system. Every one feels the need of a tonic sometimes. The system seems to get "out of gear," the appetite becomes fickle, the energies are depressed, sleep is not restful or refreshing, and the entire body has a nervous, worn-out feeling. When the system is in this depleted, run-down condition it must be aided by a tonic, and S. S. S. is recognized everywhere as the standard. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks selected for their gentle action as well as their invigorating effect on the system, it will not disagreeably affect any of the delicate members or tissues as do most of the so-called tonics on the market which contain potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient. These derange the stomach and digestion, unfavorably affect the bowels or otherwise damage the health. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion, improves the appetite, produces refreshing sleep, rids the body of that tired, run-down feeling, and supplies tone and vigor to the entire system. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, acts more promptly and gives better and more lasting results than any other tonic, and because of its vegetable purity is an absolutely safe medicine for young or old. S. S. S. acts admirably in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion and other stomach troubles, and after using it that uncomfortable feeling of fullness, dizziness or drowsiness, after eating, are no longer felt. Not only is S. S. S. the greatest of all tonics but possesses purifying and alterative properties, and if there is a taint in the blood it will promptly remove every trace and restore perfect health. In selecting your tonic for this year do not experiment but get S. S. S., the recognized standard.

Both of the trains arriving in this city from St. Paul due here at two and seven in the morning Tuesday were greatly delayed the cause being the wreck of a large engine in the yards at Evansville which necessitated bringing out a wrecker all of which took time. The mix-up occured some time during the night before the Flyer had passed and both passengers were forced to go around by Fergus Falls and Moorhead then getting back on the old beat at Barnesville. The Flyer arrived here at 9 o'clock and the local being as late in proportion.—Crookston Times. This accounts for Red Lake Falls being without an eastern mail Tuesday.

A young man and a maiden were newly betrothed.

"I love thee," said the young man. "So great is my devotion that if another should but cast loving glances at thee a fearful thing would happen."

"What might it be?" quoth the maiden.

"I would kill him. Dost thou believe me?"

"No," quoth the maiden.

"No? But I protest that if another were to make love to thee, his life should pay the forfeit! By yonder moon I swear! Dost believe me now?"

"No," quoth the maiden.

"Now, what meanest thou? Why believest thou not that I would kill the villain?"

"Because," quoth the maiden, "thou wouldst not know aught about it."

COMPULSORY INSURANCE.

How It Works Out in Practice With Working People.

From 1885 to 1809 the sum of $432,500,000 was expended by the various insurance systems in Germany for the restoration of the health of workingmen and their families. One-third of this sum was paid in by the employers. There is no doubt, says Vice Consul Schlemmer of Mannheim, that it would have cost double if the men had been compelled to pay everything out of their own pockets, the moderate medical charges now being regulated by these insurance laws. As a matter of fact, people would not otherwise be able to spend so much money for medical treatment, and a great many would perish or be permanently disabled for lack of proper treatment: and the disabled ones would remain a permanent burden on the community. It also appears that physical and intellectual conditions of the laboring classes generally have been greatly improved by this protective insurance system, as evidenced by the reduction of mortality at industrial centers, which now is only 21 per 1,000 inhabitants, again 27½ before the law took effect. Although food products are much higher in price than formerly, consumption has increased in quantity six per cent per capital, showing that the buying power of the people has been greatly increased through the insurance funds and higher wages.

BUILDING FOOD

To Bring the Babies Around.

When a little human machine (or a large one) goes wrong, nothing is so important as the selection of food to bring it around again.

My little baby boy fifteen months old had pneumonia, then came brain fever, and no sooner had he got over these than he began to cut teeth and, being so weak, he was frequently thrown into convulsions," says a Colorado mother.

"I decided a change might help, so took him to Kansas City for a visit. When we got there he was so very weak when he would cry he would sink away and seemed like he would die.

"When I reached my sister's home she said immediately that we must feed him Grape-Nuts and, although I had never used the food we got some and for a few days gave him just the juice of Grape-Nuts and milk. He got stronger so quickly we were soon feeding him the Grape-Nuts itself and in a wonderfully short time he fattened right up and became strong and well.

"That showed me something worth knowing and, when later on my girl came, I raised her on Grape-Nuts and she is a strong healthy baby and has been. You will see from the little photograph I send you what a strong, chubby youngster the boy is now, but he didn't look anything like that before we found this nourishing food. Grape-Nuts nourished him back to strength when he was so weak he couldn't keep any other food on his stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

All children can be built to a more sturdy and healthy condition upon Grape-Nuts and cream. The food contains the elements nature demands, from which to make the soft gray filling in the nerve centers and brain. A well fed brain and strong, sturdy nerves absolutely insure a healthy body.

Lola looked at Lord Chugmough in consternation.

"Is he dead?" she cried. "No! He cannot—he must not die!"

"He is dead," said Lord Chugmough, sorrowfully.

"Oh, what did he mean? What did he try to say? Could you hear more than I?"

They moved away from the dead hero.

"He—well, he made a remarkable statement," said Lord Chugmough, looking puzzled. "He said you had died, you know."

"Oh, he must have been wandering. Death had sent him that relief—the relief of unconsciousness—before the end," she said.

"I do not think so," replied Lord Chugmough. "If ever there was a conscious and rational dying man, he was. I cannot fathom the meaning of what he said, but he knew; of that I am sure. One thing he did say that was plain enough. Your Arthur Medworth, thinking you were dead, has gone off with another girl in a boat."

"Oh, I cannot believe that," she said. "And why should he believe I was dead?"

"Me lord," called William from the top of the barricade, "Hi found this fellow hon the 'ill. 'E's wounded pretty bad, sir. Shall Hi kill 'im?"

"No. Drag him here," replied Lord Chugmough. "Is he conscious?"

"Werry conscious, me lord. Don't you 'ear 'im cussing hin Spanish?"

William came dragging a wounded Zambo across the earthen floor, and sat him on a stone near Lord Chugmough.

The Englishman examined him, and found that he was seriously wounded.

"Look here, my fine fellow," he said, "your wound is a bad one, but with a little bandaging and a little care you will be all right. If you will tell me the truth about this thing, I will fix you up and let you go. If you don't, I'll put another bullet into you and make a better job of it. Do you understand?"

"Si, senor," was the reply.

"How much do you know about this rascality?"

"The fight, senor?"

"No. I know a little about the fight myself. But about this fellow Mattazudo, and the old Indian, and the senorita."

"The beautiful senorita," said the Zambo, grinning, "has many lovers."

"Oh, I see you do know something. Now tell me, how was the senorita taken from the castle?"

The Zambo grinned again.

"It is an old trick, senor," he said. "The old Carib is wise, and can do many things that puzzle those who look down upon his race. I have heard all about it from Mattazudo. The king—But my wound, senor—it bleeds. I will tell the truth—all I know—but while I am speaking I bleed to death."

"I'll fix you up," said Lord Chugmough, at once beginning to bind up the wounds in a piece of William's shirt. "Go on; you had got as far as the king."

"The senorita has many lovers, senor. Philip loved her, and wanted to make her his queen. Gomez loved her, and wanted her for his wife. Mattazudo looked upon her pretty face, and swore he would have her for himself. She was ill, and old Namampa was called in to see her and cure her. Mattazudo saw Namampa first, and promised him much gold if he would get the senorita away without any one knowing it. Namampa first cured her of her fever, and then gave her a drug that stops the heart for a number of hours. They all thought she was dead, and she was buried. That night Namampa returned to the grave and dug her up and took her to his house, where he gave her another drug that brought her to her senses again and brought her up here to escape the rushing waters. You were here and kept the senorita. Namampa saw Mattazudo and told him the senorita was here, but said nothing about you. Mattazudo came here, and you threw him out. You were very strong, senor. Then he came for us. We attacked you; you beat us. But beware, senor! Mattazudo was not wounded. He has hundreds of men under his command who will do his bidding. He will return with plenty of men. You will be killed, and the senorita will fall into his hands again."

"Is there no way to get her to the castle under her father's protection?"

A gesture of dissent from Lola made him look up.

"It is best," he said in English. "You do not know where Medworth is."

"There is no way, senor," said the Zambo. "Mattazudo's men are all around, and would not let you reach the castle. You are safer here. But if you will pay me well, I will tell Don Juan Garza when I return, and he will send a force to recover his daughter."

Lord Chugmough looked thoughtfully at Lola.

"It seems to be the only thing to do," he said.

"First tell me," she said to the Zambo, "do you know anything of the other American?"

"No, senorita; I know nothing. The Americans escaped, and no one knew where they went."

"And General Salvarez? and his family?"

"They, too, escaped. Nothing has been heard of them."

"Then," she said, turning to Lord Chugmough, "there is nothing to do but trust this man and wait for my father to bring a force to rescue us. I think I understand what Tempest meant now. Arthur thought I was dead, and having no reason for remaining here longer, has assisted the family of the republican General to a place of safety."

"The senorita says," said Lord Chugmough to the Zambo, "that she will thank you to go at once to her father and tell him she is here, and have him come to rescue her. I will pay you well—after I see the face of Don Juan. I don't pay in advance for services in this country, but if you do your errand well, the pay will be large."

"I believe you, senor," said the Zambo. "I will do as you say."

He took a good pull at a flask Lord Chugmough held out to him, and pulling himself together, limped out of the place.

"An honest man—when it pays him well to be one," said Lord Chugmough, watching the retreating figure.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Summary of Events.

In the meantime our friends on the Island of the Clouds were making themselves as comfortable as circumstances would admit and awaiting their rescue which is to take place as soon as the waters recede.

The wounded Zambo becomes fearful and in order to save his own life goes to the nearest plantation, which is that of Pedro Francisco, where he met Sir Galloping Grace and the other members of the party from whom Lord Chugmough and other members of his party had become separated before the storm. He arrives just in time to tell the story of Lord Chugmough's adventures.

This is welcome information for Sir Galloping Grace, who subsequently starts in pursuit. They depart for Bolivar expecting to find Lord Chugmough and William with the yacht Cheerway but find a desolated scene instead. The Cheerway had been released from its moorings by the sailing master just at the height of the storm, floating down toward the Isle of the Clouds, where it lodges as the storm subsides and is taken possession of by Arthur Medworth and the wife and daughter of Salvarez.

In the meantime Gen. Mattazudo gets together a commando and attempts to rescue Lola from Lord Chugmough. Hearing of this Philip actuated by Gomez hurries to the scene of conflict. There they are surprised to see Gen. Francisco with his small detachment, who, from the story of Zambo, believes that Jacinta is held by Lord Chugmough at Carib Hill.

The lawless passions of Mattazudo did much that day to prevent the making of history. With the fair country south of the Orinoco already in his grasp, Philip had a brilliant prospect before him—almost the certainty of a throne. But God in his wisdom ruled otherwise, and Mattazudo was the creature chosen by Him to undo all that Gomez and Don Juan by their executive ability and organizing power had done. As the half-breed, at the head of his cut-throat gang, climbed up Carib Hill, he saw Pedro Francisco, at the head of his men, coming up the slope in another direction.

The half-breed hurled curses and defiance in the same breath, and Francisco laughed to think how he had outwitted Mattazudo,

Francisco was nearest the stone ruin, out of which several English heads were looking, greatly alarmed at the sudden appearance of the enemy.

"Bah Jove!" said Sir Galloping Grace, "we are attacked by overwhelming numbers."

"We must beat them off," said Lord Chugmough, quietly.

"Beat them off! That's like you, Chugmough," said Viscount Elsmere. "But see how many there are."

"We are Englishmen. Don't forget that," said Lord Chugmough.

But now a new surprise was given to the English party.

Francisco, who had got within a hundred feet of the ruin, paid absolutely no attention to the persons inside, but lifted his hat in the air, and uttered a shout of triumph at Mattazudo.

"You are too late, you half-breed cur!" he yelled. "She is mine! She is mine!"

Mattazudo replied with curses and a rifle shot. Francisco's right arm fell useless at his side.

"At them!" he yelled. "Kill the curs! Down with them!"

An answering cheer came from his men, and a volley or rifle shots awoke the echoes around the old stone ruin.

"Bah Jove!" said Sir Galloping Grace. "They are not fighting us, after all. They are fighting each other."

When the day's fighting was done the dead on the field included Mattazudo, Francisco, Gomez and Philip. Don Juan joined his daughter and Lord Chugmough's party.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

How It All Ended.

It has already been seen how the redoubtable sailing master of the yacht Cheerway pulled up anchor and retreated before the rushing flood, thereby saving Lord Chugmough a good many thousand pounds, and probably the lives of the crew as well.

And it is also known that when Sir Galloping Grace and the other members of Lord Chugmough's party turned their backs on the washed-out city of Bolivar to return to Pedro Francisco's hospitable plantation, the Cheerway was already plowing the waters of the subsiding Orinoco to regain her deserted anchorage off Bolivar.

Two days later, on a beautiful clear day, when the hot sun was beating down on the decks, Captain Glover stood on the bridge—his throne, and a more secure one than was the ambition of the false Philip of Aragon—with the visor of his cap pulled low over his eyes to shade them from the glare, watching, with considerable wonder and pleasure, the splendid scenery of the north shore near which he was running, the wonder being that all nature could be so beautiful and smiling so soon after the tempestuous experience of a few days before.

Now and then Captain Glover raised a pair of glasses to his eyes and swept the verdure-clad shore, noting the many-colored flowers, which certainly must have bloomed since the storm, for they could not have lived through it.

"Ah," he said to himself, giving a characteristic grunt at the same time, "now I know where I am. I remember that mountain. Now, that's a queer place for a mountain. It's always been my opinion that a mountain is necessarily a land animal. But this is square in the river—sort of amphibious mountain, as it were."

And smiling at his own joke, the captain continued to study the bold outlines and lofty eminence of the mountain that had attracted him, which was no other than the Island of the Clouds, which has already played a not unimportant part in the history of some of our friends.

Every minute brought the rapid yacht nearer to the mountain, and after an hour or so Captain Glover raised the glass again to take another and closer survey.

The same day he rescued Dona Maria, Jacinta and their American protector and the Cheerway bore them up the Amazon to Bolivar.

In due time the yacht arrived at Bolivar, and Medworth, seeing no soldiers of Philip near, made bold to request to be sent ashore that he might make inquiries concerning Castle Salvarez, and also put in a few sly questions to see if Jack Tempest was anywhere about.

The information he received on shore fairly staggered him with a mixed emotion—part joy, part grief.

Everybody in Bolivar knew all about the battle on Carib Hill, and Medworth listened with beating heart to the story of the supposed death of Lola Garza, the crafty treachery of Namampa, the meeting of Namampa and Lola with Lord Chugmough on Carib Hill, the subsequent attack by Mattazudo, and the final misunderstanding which resulted in the total annihilation of both wings of Philip's army. He also heard with sorrow of the heroism and death of his old comrade, and the joy over the knowledge that Lola was alive and well was tempered with grief over the death of his loyal friend.

The Pool of Siloam.

For over ten years the Pool of Siloam has been only a name. Visitors to Palestine who visited this famous spot of late years found that its healing waters had vanished. This was a great blow to the inhabitants, but recently the waters of Siloam have been made to flow once again, and there has been great rejoicing in the holy land. It appears that Jerusalem has been especially short of water of late, and it occurred to some of the inhabitants of Siloam to try to find out whether the spring which used to supply the pool was really dry. Tons of accumulated rubbish were cleared away, and after about a month's work the spring was found. The excavators discovered behind some fallen rocks an old aqueduct running away into the valley of the Kedron, and into this aqueduct the beautiful, cool, clear water had run and been wasting for years.—Sunday Companion.

Fish Are Like Moths.

Two Yale students have discovered that electric light is the best bait for fishing. As a result of this discovery the fishing industry promises to be revolutionized. It has been found that the rays of an electric light under the water hypnotize the denizens of the deep. When they see the rays they flock to them like a moth to a flame, and nothing can drive them away as long as the light shines. If it is turned off they scamper away in all directions. A company has been formed which proposes to enter into the capture of fish by electric light upon an extensive scale.—Kansas City Journal.

WAYS OF COOKING EGGS.

A Wide Variety of Savory Dishes May Be Made with Eggs as a Foundation.

In the spring when eggs are plentiful a great many are used upon the farm. At this time eggs are more appetizing than at any other season of the year. Attention is called to this fact in a recent issue of Farm and Fireside by Mary Foster Snyder, who gives some recipes for preparing eggs in various ways. We are sure that many of these suggestions will appeal to readers:

Eggs en Fromage.—Melt one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan add one scant cupful of rich grated cheese, mixed with six slightly beaten eggs, and stir constantly until the mixture is smooth and creamy. Season to taste with salt and paprika, and turn out immediately on rounds of toast softened with hot milk and melted butter. Serve at once.

Eggs with Dried Beef.—Chop fine one-half of a cupful of dried beef, and put it in a stewpan with one cupful of stewed tomatoes, a few drops of onion juice, paprika and cinnamon to taste, and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Cook slowly for ten minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, and three well-beaten eggs. Stir until the mixture begins to thicken, then pour over hot buttered toast, and garnish with hard-boiled eggs cut in slices.

Savory Eggs.—Break five eggs into a bowl, add a pinch of salt and a little chopped thyme; beat them well together. Rub a small stewpan with a cut onion, melt in it two tablespoonfuls of butter, then pour in the eggs and stir constantly until cooked, about four minutes. Turn out on hot buttered toast or little pats of hot potatoes, and serve at once.

Baked Eggs with Bread Crumbs.—Butter individual baking dishes, and for each person to be served mix together two tablespoonfuls each of rich, thick cream and bread crumbs, half a teaspoonful of minced parsley, a few drops of onion juice, and salt and paprika to season. Put one-half of the allowance for each person in each baking dish, break an egg carefully over it, and cover with the remainder of the mixture. When all are ready set them in a quick oven and bake until the eggs are set.

Poached Eggs a la Reine.—Cover hot buttered toast, made slightly moist with cream, with fried mushrooms. Put a poached egg on the mushrooms, and pour over all a little cream sauce. Sprinkle grated cheeses over the top and place in the oven until the cheese browns. Garnish with olives.

Egg Croquettes.—Chop hard-boiled eggs very fine. For six eggs make a cream sauce from one tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, a little onion juice, and salt and pepper to season. Mix it with the chopped eggs, and set away to cool. When cold form into six croquettes, egg and bread crumb, place in a frying basket and fry in deep hot fat.

SUGGESTIONS FOR HOUSEWIFE.

An excellent idea is to connect a spring to the refrigerator door, thus keeping it always cold, as children are often negligent in this regard.

To clean gold jewelry with stones in it wash it in warm suds made with yellow soap with ten drops of sal volatile in them. You will find this makes the jewelry brilliant.

Okra is a vegetable that is not appreciated at the north as it deserves. The dwarf varieties do well and okra is an invaluable addition to stewed tomatoes and to soup, should a housewife find it insipid by itself.

When washing black stockings take care that fresh water be used, both for washing and rinsing, and thus avoid having the stockings covered with lint, which is sometimes the case when they are washed in the same water used for white clothes.

Light cotton dress goods hold their color better when washed in this way: Four quarts of boiled starch are made. Half of this is put into two pailfuls of soft warm water and the goods washed until clean. Add water to the remaining half of the starch and rinse. Dry and iron on the wrong side.

Here is a way to remove a grease spot, which answers excellently: First place a double thiickness of blotting paper on an ironing board. Lay the material on this and sponge well with benzine. Now put two more thicknesses of blotting paper on top and iron with a moderately hot iron. Remember that benzine is inflammable, so don't do this near a fire or light, and see that your flatiron isn't at scorching heat.

To a tidy housewife a gravel walk is often an annoyance. Unless it is continually looked after it will get untidy and then it does look so forlorn. In France the practical natives have invented a preparation with which they freely water gravel paths and roads and thus save much work and many a backache. Here is the rule for it: Ten gallons of water, 20 pounds of lime, two pounds of flour of sulphur. Boil all together in an iron kettle. When cold pour off the clear part and use on the walks, being very careful not to get any of the mixture on grass or flower beds.—Chicago Daily News.

Peppers Stuffed with Cold Ham.

Use six large green peppers. Scrape out clean and fill them with a mixture of one cup of minced ham, one cup of breadcrumbs and one tablespoonful of butter. Put into a baking dish with a half pint of strained tomatoes seasoned with salt and pepper and a tablespoonful of sugar. Bake for three-quarters of an hour.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved In Three Months.

C. B. FIZER.

MR. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble for ten years past.

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain.

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

Pe-ru-na for Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Geo. H. Simser, Grant, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about four years. I had kidney trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time.

"This summer I got so very bad I thought I would try Peruna, so I wrote to you and began at once to take Peruna and Manalin.

"I took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and now I feel better than I have for some time.

"I feel that Peruna and Manalin cured me and made a different woman of me altogether. I bless the day I picked up the little book and read of your Peruna."

It is the business of the kidneys to remove from the blood all poisonous materials. They must be active all the time, else the system suffers. There are times when they need a little assistance.

Peruna is exactly this sort of a remedy. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service at a time when they were not able to bear their own burdens.

FIRST CLASS TUMBLERS.

They Were Without a Stand and Actually "Tumbled" When Set Down.

The Anglo-Saxon always used a glass or horn without a stand, so that once filled the vessel must be emptied before being set down. Hence the old proverb "When the wine is poured out it must be drunk," and the modern certain vows, he filled his drinking glass.

At the first the Anglo-Saxons used a horn, and long after glass cups were introduced for use among the upper classes the horn still retained its semireligious character in transactions with regard to land. Inheritances of land passed by the transfer of a horn, and estates were held in fee by the same means. For example, the famous horn of Ulphus. The story is, briefly, that Ulphus intended to divide his estate among his sons before his death. The sons, however, quarreled so much about their respective shares that the old man made a journey to York cathedral, where, having made certain vows, he filled his drinking horn with wine, and, kneeling before the altar, drank off the contents in a breath in token that he gave his land forever to the church. That was in the time of Canute. Many of the horns were worked beautifully with gold and silver, one fine example being in the British museum at the present time.

With the introduction of glasswork in A. D. 600, when Abbott Benedict brought foreign workmen over, changes were made in the shape of the drinking vessels. What is believed to be the earliest glass tumbler is shown in one of the accompanying pictures. It dates from A. D. 625-650.

BRAINS TO THE FRONT.

Comment on the Knox Boom for the Presidency.

It is a source of gratification for the people of Pennsylvania that, in looking about for presidential timber, Senator Philander C. Knox is favorably named by influential members of the Republican party. Pennsylvania has often had "complimentary mention" candidates and "political exigency" candidates put in the field chiefly for trading purposes, but there has been no serious attempt on the part of the majority party to name a Pennsylvanian for the last forty years.

The state has been so securely Republican that it did not need coaxing by that party, and offered no strong inducement to coaxing by the other. It has also been without any serious influence except its dead weight in the count of the vote in determining policies in legislation. Dexterous schemers, after the pattern of the elder Cameron and the later Quay, have ruled the roost and have permitted no question of their supremacy. The advent of Knox in the senate has set a new fashion. Brains are again at the front. It is an encouraging sign of the times.

Breakage.

"I have promised my friends to break silence," said the smoked-out songster.

"Go slow," commented the shrewd adviser. If you're bound to break something, better break that promise.

May Eat His Words Instead.

"If nature had made me an ostrich," said old Grouch, "I suppose I could eat your cooking."

"Wouldn't that be nice," answered his imperturbable spouse. "Then I could get some plumes for my hat."

SEVEN YEARS AGO

A Rochester Chemist Found a Singularly Effective Medicine.

William A. Franklin, of the Franklin & Palmer Chemical Co., Rochester, N. Y., writes:

"Seven years ago I was suffering very much through the failure of the kidneys to eliminate the uric acid from my system. My back was very lame and ached if I overexerted myself in the least degree. At times I was weighed down with a feeling of languor and depression and suffered continually from annoying irregularities of the kidney secretions. I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. I found prompt relief from the aching and lameness in my back, and by the time I had taken three boxes I was cured of all irregularities."

Justifiable.

The editor was looking over a poem that had been submitted by the local bard.

"I see you bring in an old figure of speech," he said, "when you describe the maiden as listening to the lover's avowal with 'eyes of flame.' Think of the absurdity of it. How can anybody's eyes b e'flame?'"

"Her's seem to have been, all right," contended the poet. "If you will read a little further you will see that she fired him."

A JAP LAWN PARTY

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR THE PERPLEXED ENTERTAINER.

A Japanese Lawn Party Fully Described—Appropriate Decorations and Refreshments—Simple Weddings Approved.

A reader requests full instructions for a Japanese lawn party, and I hope the following will answer the purpose:

Of course for decorations there must be an abundance of lanterns, and umbrellas may be suspended over booths where tea both hot and cold may be dispensed. In Japan this would be the only beverage, but I suppose to quench the thirst of our American citizens there must be all sorts of iced drinks, a table for frappe and small tables for cream and ices. Dollies, mats, and a great variety of Japanese napkins can be purchased, also lanterns in all sorts of odd shapes and sizes. The invitations could be written upon tiny Japanese fans which are very inexpensive when purchased in large quantities. Another form of invitations would be to write them on Japanese napkins and then fold them in odd forms. Those in charge of the affair should wear kimonas and do the hair "a la Japan," with innumerable ornaments. The flags of Japan should figure in the decorations, and the small ones should be offered for sale or given as souvenirs, if expense is no object. Over the gateway and porches bamboo fishing poles could be crossed, and from them suspend lanterns. Burn red fire at intervals from dark corners of the lawn, and a fringe of firecrackers would be ornamental on the verandas.

The Japanese are great lovers of flowers, especially the cherry and chrysanthemum blossoms; those of paper are effective, and they cannot be too much in evidence.

As a novelty boiled rice could be served in small blue bowls. Candied ginger cocoanut and pineaple are favorites with the Japanese.

An orchestra of stringed instruments would add much to the affair, and the Japs play a game with bean bags which could be suited to the occasion. Yellow should be a predominating color, and bowls of gold fish would help carry out Japanese characteristics.

A clever way to fill in a half-hour is to pass papers bearing at the top these words: "What we do not know." For the men here is a sample of the questions, and the hostess will easily see how she may fit more questions to the individuality of her guests.

"How would you make out a dinner menu for six persons, your allowance being two dollars and a half? Give items."

"How would you make and trim a lingerie waist?"

"What is meant by a gored skirt, and what is applique?"

For the ladies give questions like these: "What is meant by double entry?" "What would you do with a draft for $100?" "What would you do if a rich man and a poor man proposed at the same time?" At an informal party of congenial people this will afford much amusement.

Speaking of engagements, there is a decided trend toward a marked simplicity in weddings, even among the people who could afford all the adjuncts. It is now quite the thing to write personal notes to those whom one wishes to be present at the ceremony, and to send out cards for a reception afterwards, or merely to send announcements, giving the bride's "at home" days and the new address.

There are still a number of "showers," and pre-nuptial affairs, but they are confined exclusively to the very intimate friends of the bride, and are given in a most informal manner. Many of these affairs are held in the evening, so the men may participate in the fun, and the lucky man is allowed to feel as if he was in it, too.

MADAME MERRI.

LANGUAGE OF PERFUMES.

A Little Indulgence of Fancy in Regard to Women Who Prefer Certain Scents.

Women's characteristics and weaknesses are betrayed by their perfumes. There are few who do not use a scent of some kind in their toilets. Some of them throw a few drops in the bath; others place sachets plentifully about their rooms and a modern notion is to place sachet pads between the mattress and the sheets.

A violet-scented atmosphere betokens a woman of lovable nature. Such a woman is always fond of violets.

The dainty, neat woman has a preference for heliotrope. She dislikes fuss or notoriety.

Imaginative, warm-hearted women use rare perfume. They are apt to be extravagant.

Lavender will probably be found in the home of the woman of high aims, who loves sacred things.

Strong perfumes are used by the ambitious and strong-willed. The woman who delights in musk and kindred perfumes will probably be mean-spirited.

Hot Water and a Cold Cream.

Don't try to put cold cream on a cold skin or the absorption will not be thorough.

THE SHIRT-WAIST GIRL.

She Is More Charming Than Ever This Year with Her Various Lingerie Blouses.

The shirtwaist girl bids fair to be a very charming personage this summer. Never was the odd washable blouse more beautiful, more exquisitely made or showed more possibilities for that distinctive quality called style. Never, too, it must be admitted, was it more expensive, for the really elegant thing is handmade and exquisitely embroidered. White takes precedence over color, as usual, for sheer elegance, and the imported bodices have naturally first place.

Magnificent as are the best of these bodices, the general effect of them is yet one of extreme simplicity. Handkerchief linen of a sheer and most delicate quality is the prime material and into this soft and yet durable web rich laces are inserated between effective bits of needlework.

Other materials which figure in the prettiest of the white blouses are plain mull, embroidered Swiss, batiste, dimity, etc. The model of the hour, as far as simplicity goes, is infantile in essence. A slightly gathered blouse buttoned at the back, with elbow sleeves, and a high unlined stock, is the form favored. The full, short puff of the sleeves is very coquettish, the various trimmings used being always put on in some charming way at the bottom. The elbow sleeves may even be trimmed over the entire length, if the model is a specially dressy one, and with Irish lace and embroidery narrow Valenciennes will provide the finishing touch.

With the handsomest coat gowns in cloth, veiling or silk, these lingerie waists will be worn, and to accord with the tailor genre of the costume there is now a new style of collar for some of the blouses. This is a stiff turnover of plain or embroidered linen which fastens with a manish tie of fine Swiss trimmed with narrow Valenciennes, but in this case the waist is generally colored.

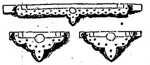
Apropos of color, there are some very charming shirts or more tailor genre in straw, old-rose and blue linen. These are provided for black gowns, and a very smart wrinkle, if the material can be had, is to have the wide girdle in the same material. Some imported shirts seen had wide matching belts, even the huge, square buckle of the front being covered with the linen. The collars of these were all of the high, stiff sort, the same embroideries which were used upon the bodice and upon the cuffs of the sleeves, which were long in this instance, being used upon the turnover. Such shirtwaists are turned out by the French entirely for practical wear and the moment one takes to fancier touches it is called a blouse. The more inexpensive of the blouses are those which are machine made, though even upon these will show hand embroideries. The sleeves of these are long, a full puff fitting into a long cuff, upon which the embroidery shows. Very pretty and quite cheap white bodices are made over silk of plain and spotted nets, with cluny or torchon trimmings.—Chicago Chronicle.

COLLAR AND CUFF SET.

The Neckwear Is of Much Importance—Stamps a Costume Perhaps More Than Any Other Detail.

We are showing a set of pretty little collar and cuffs, which skillful fingers may make from very fine lawn. If of the latter the most expensive kind be chosen a great outlay will not be necessary, as such a small quantity is needed; indeed, one-quarter yard of 22-inch material would be more than enough with which to fashion two sets. Observe that the cuffs are deeply pointed to accommodate themselves to the deep sleeve cuffs now in vogue.

The design should first be enlarged to the size required to fit the neck, which in most cases would measure from 12½ to 13½ inches long, and for the sleeves from 7 to 8 inches. Outline this firmly and clearly in ink upon paper, then place the lawn or muslin upon it, and trace through a pencil.



DAINTY AND TRIM.

For working, use white embroidery cotton or filoselle washing silk in a dainty shade to match the blouse with which they are intended to be worn. The center circle is outlined in tiny feather-stitch, also the line heading the worked border. The scalloped edge is, of course, done closely in buttonhole-stitch, and the tiny dots are formed of French knots. When all the details are finished carefully cut away the lawn from the buttonholed edge, and complete by sewing on a double band of lawn to them to go inside the neck and sleeves.

LIMB WASTED WITH ECZEMA.

Suffered Untold Agonies—Doctor Said It Was the Worst Case—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"I used the Cuticura Remedies for eczema. The doctor said it was the worst case he ever saw. It was on both limbs from the knees to the ankles. We tried everything the doctors knew of, but the Cuticura Remedies did the most good. I was obliged to lie with my limbs higher than my head, for the pain was so terrible I could not walk. I suffered untold agonies. One limb wasted away a great deal smaller than the other, there was so much discharge from it. I found the Cuticura Remedies very soothing, and I still keep them in the house. I am very thankful to say that I am cured. I found the Cuticura Remedies all that you say they are. I hope that you may be spared many years to make the Cuticura Remedies for the benefit of persons suffering from the torture of skin diseases, such as I had. Shot Big Mountain Lion.

One of the biggest mountain lions seen in Oklahoma for years, measuring over nine feet from tip to tip and weighing 175 pounds, was killed in a cave in the gyp hills, near here, by George Steubenville of Okeene.

He came upon the lion unexpectedly, while exploring the cave with a party of friends, and was armed only with a twenty-two calibre revolver. It had been known for some weeks that a marauder of some sort, presumably a mountain lion, was playing havoc with poultry and calves. It had been seen disappearing in the darkness several times, but no one had gone near enough to get a shot at it.

Steubenville was the only one of the party who was armed at all when they came upon the beast, which was evidently prepared to put up a stiff fight. The cave was dimly lighted by a lantern carried by the exploring party, which made good marksmanship difficult, but Steubenville was fortunate enough to hit the panther in the eye, killing it instantly.

Having attended other commercial schools previous to my enrollment at Aker's Business College, Fargo, N. D., I believe I can say that my testimony is based upon actual experience and proof. The school is strictly modern in equipment, building and method sof teaching. With pleasure I recommend it. For direct information write to HANS OVEBY.

IN STRICT CONFIDENCE.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health.—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Alice Berryhill.

Mrs Alice Berryhill

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only.

Many thousands of cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail. Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as she has been.

Mrs. Alice Berryhill, of 313 Boyce Street, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Three years ago life looked dark to me. I had ulceration and inflammation of the female organs and was in a serious condition.

"My health was completely broken down and the doctor told me that if I was not operated upon I would die within six months. I told him I would have no operation but would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He tried to influence me against it but I sent for the medicine that same day and began to use it faithfully. Within five days I felt relief but was not entirely cured until I used it for some time.

"Your medicine is certainly fine. I have induced several friends and neighbors to take it and I know more than a dozen who had female troubles and who to-day are as well and strong as I am from using your Vegetable Compound."

Just as surely as Mrs. Berryhill was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

If you are sick write Mrs. Pinkham for advice. It is free and always helpful.

Indications of Long Life.

In the medical world it is a generally accepted fact that every person bears physical indications of his prospects of long life. A long lived person may be distinguished from a short lived person at sight. In many instances a physician may look at the hand of a patient and tell whether he will live or die.

The primary conditions of longevity are that the heart, lungs and digestive organs, as well as the brain should be large. If these organs are large the trunk will be long and and the limbs short. The person will appear tall in sitting and short in standing. The hand will have a long and somewhat heavy palm and short fingers. To live long drink golden grain belt beer. Its purity and health giving qualities makes it a food which should be on every table. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

FIREMEN ARE PREPARED TO VISIT WARREN

Red Lake Falls Firemen and Running Team Will go to Warren in Full Force.

They Will Probably Be Accompanied by Red Lake Falls' Celebrated Band.

The Red Lake Falls firemen are prepared to invade Warren next week in full force. The annual tournament of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's association will be held in that city beginning Tuesday and lasting four days.

The entire strength of the organization will attend. They have recently been newly uniformed and will receive instruction in the marching tactics, so it is betraying no secret to say they will make a splendid showing upon the streets of Warren.

The running team is practicing nightly and is in first class condition to enter all contests. With a knowledge of how victories were gained in former years at other tournaments, the team can be looked to for success in several of the events. At any rate the team that beats them out will have to go sore.

An effort is being made among the business men of the city to raise a fund to pay the expenses of the Red Lake Falls band and have it accompany the firemen. It is particularly desirable that this should be done as it is expected to get the tournament next year for this city and the better showing made at the tournament the better the chances of landing next year's meeting.

Warren is preparing to do herself proud in the way of entertaining visitors. There will be horse races and ball games every day and in the evenings, band concerts, midway entertainments, street exhibitions and dances.

AN INVESTIGATION IS ASKED FOR

WERE MARRIED MONDAY

Miss Lillian Belair and Mr. Albert E. Raycraft.

Miss Lillian Marguerite Belair of this city and Mr. Albert Edward Raycraft, of Two Harbors, were quietly married at high noon Monday at the parsonage of St. Joseph's church. Rev. Father Fayolle performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily gowned in white liberty satin. wore the customary bridal veil and carried white bridal roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Rachael Belair, of Grand Rapids, a cousin of the bride. She was gowned in white silk and carried carnations. The best man was Hiram Belair of Calgary. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents to which only the relatives were bidden.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Belair. During the past year and a half she has been chief clerk in the office of the register of deeds where she gained the kindly good will of all who had business at that office.

Mr. and Mrs. Raycraft left on the afternoon train for their future home at Two Harbors, accompanied by the best wishes of many friends.

Coming.

G. Lote Selver's Big N. Y. Minstrels will be in our city on Friday evening, June 22. This excellent attraction comes to the management highly recommended and should be greeted by a large audience. The parade will take place at noon. Seats on sale at the usual plece.

The reason for an "I Lead" five cent cigar is that none of the othes are near enough to be called followers.

Resident of Thief River Falls Asks That Diverting of City Funds Be Inquired Into.

Thief River Falls, June 16, 1906.

GENTLEMEN:—

I am resident of Thief River Falls and see by your papers that $16,000 is taken from our city treasury to make fight for county seat. If this is so it should be investigated. I think money enough can be raised in this town to pay all expenses and if our business men want the county seat here let them pay for it out of their own pockets. I would like to see county seat removed and have subscribed for the purpose but I am not to stand for taking money from city in unlawful way and I don't think it is right. I do not want my name used in this matter just now but if what you claim is true I hope it will be investigated.

Yours truly,

A considerable sensation has been created thruout the county by the exposure before the county commissioners last week of the methods used by Thief River Falls in raising money for the purpose of buying enough votes to secure the removal of the county seat.

There is a demand from several parts of the county that the matter be investigated and the above letter received last Saturday by a resident of Red Lake Falls shows something of the feeling. The gentleman writing the letter asks that his name be withheld from the public at this time and, as a resident of Thief River Falls his reason must be obvious.

The county attorney has been absent from the city since last week attending the trial of a case in St. Paul, but upon his return, the matter will probably be presented to him. What he will do of course, cannot be told at the present time. The exposure was offered to the county commissioners in the shape of testmoney of one of the saloonkeepers of Thief River Falls that he was compelled to pay $500 of his license for two years to the city treasury and the other $500 to a committee whose business it was to buy the county seat if possible. The commissioners, that is the Thief River Falls commissioners, Shaw, Johnson and Ekstrom, refused to allow the testimony, as having any bearing upon the consideration of the petition for removal, but the offer of such proof was reduced to writing and is now a part of the public record.

How well the Thief River Falls people have covered up their tracks in avoiding the pitfalls of the law is not known yet but would be revealed in an investigation. If they have imposed a $1000 license upon their saloon-keepers and only $500 has found its way to the city treasury, then is there something wrong that needs inquiring into without any regard to the merits of the county seat fight. The squandering of public moneys has been too common a form of graft and the spirit of right minded men leads to the correction of such evils.

The proof presented to the commissioners embodied an offer to show that the corruption fund, raised by diverting large sums of money from the treasury of Thief River Falls, was used to pay for signatures to the petition for removal. Thruout the county, wherever the story has become known, there is a protest against such debauching methods. It is said and rightly too, if Thief River Falls is able to get the county seat by an honest vote of the people and it is a wish of the majority that the county seat be removed, then Thief River Falls may have it but that the actual cash purchase of signatures to the petition cannot be too strongly condemmed and it is right and proper to contest the removal if sought to be obtained in fradulent manner.

Whether the conspiracy to divert money from the treasury of Thief River Falls has any element of the criminal about it and would warrant a judical investigation cannot be said—the ways of the law-breaker are many and devious but if signatures have actually been bought and paid for, and proof of it is not wanting, then there can be no doubt of the result of an investigation.

ANOTHER GUESS COMING

Mistaken Report of Sale of Plummer Pioneer to J. A. Duffy.

In an effort to swing the sentiment of the South eastern part of the county in favor of Red Lake Falls as the county seat, John Duffy the financial and political magnate of the Lower Falls has purchased the Plummer Pioneer. Julius Pleth has been the owner while Charlie Latta has been editor, and under Charlie's able management the paper has been a factor in booming Thief River. Whether he is still to be in charge we have not learned, but if he is, Charlie's heart will not be in work of booming the Lower Falls.—Thief River Press.

The over-heated imagination of the Thief River Press has gone into training for acrobatic feats. That part of the above item relating to the purchase of the Pioneer by J. A. Duffy of this city is simon-pure fiction, Mr. Duffy hasn't purchased the Pioneer and has no present intention of doing so.

It is also reported that Editor Latta takes serious exception to the references to himself and has considered the advisability of bringing an action for libel against the Press.

MIDLAND LYCEUM BUREAU

Will Furnish a Course of Entertainments for Coming Season.

George F. Schutes, representing the Midland Lyceum Bureau, is in the city this week arranging for a series of entertainments for the coming season. He has been interesting citizens and has secured sufficient pledges to warrant saying that Red Lake Falls will be on the circuit. There are five entertainments in the course and at this distance they all look good. They are:

Hon. G. A. Gearhart of New York, one of the few real orators on the platform. It has been said "With Gearhart, words are electrified." His "Footprints of the Centuries" has made him famous.

The Colonial Saxophone Quartette includes male quartette, vocal solos, and cornet solos by Gerald R. Hickernell, cornet soloist of the famous Innes band.

The Emily Waterman Concert company; Emily Waterman, commedienne; Miss Binkley, colleratura soprano; Mr. Tuttle, flutist; Miss Gail Wilson, saxophonist, pianist, alto.

The "Philosophy of the Beautiful," an art lecture by the artist, J. Lorenzo Zwickey.

Retz-Nehrbas combination, Miss Retz reader, impersonator and soprano; Miss Nehrbas, violiniste and mezzo.

The Old Flag House.

The little two-story brick structure at 239 Arch Street, Philadelphia, known as the "Old Flag House" where Betty Ross designed the American flag, has been bought by the government. There are 1,000,000 stockholders of the property living in every state in the Union. Shares were sold at 10 cents apiece. The purchase price of the house was $205,000. No one can appreciate the actual value of golden grain belt beer until given a fair trial. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Bargain if Taken Quick.

Must sell my house and barn on north side to make room for school house grounds. Will sell buildings for less than one half what material would cost. Act quick and make me an offer.—Joseph Helm. tf.

BIG MEETING OF FARMERS IS EXPECTED

Many Farmers Will Be in the City Tomorrow to Hear Commissioner Slater.

Free Dinner Given to All Who Attend—A Band Concert in the Afternoon.

There will probably be a large gathering of farmers in this city tomorrow to attend the dairy meeting. Efforts are being made to entertain them and make the gathering both profitable and pleasurable.

Of the meeting, there can be no doubt of its success. State Dairy Commissioner Slater will deliver the principal address and, as he has made a considerable study of dairying, his talk on the subject must be of interest to all who give some of their time to dairying and in this country, it is a pretty poor kind of a farmer who doesn't devote some thought to the subject. Crop failures in recent years have taught the farmer that in the dairy lies success and money year after year, a steady income from month to month. Creamery Inspector Winkjer will also speak at the meeting. Mr. Winkjer has shown an unusual interest in the working of creameries, as is evidenced by his frequent and timely contributions to the press in which he has given much valuable advice. Mr. Winkjer believes the interests of the farmers and success of the creamery are identical. He can be expected to give an interesting talk.

The meeting will be held at the court house in this city at two o'clock p. m.

To make the day a pleasure, as well as a profit, to give it the nature of a holiday, the citizens of Red Lake Falls have prepared something of entertainment. A complimentary dinner will be given to all farmers attending, that is, tickets will be given away which will be good for dinner at any hotel in the city. It is only intended to show the appreciation of the business men at having such a meeting in the city.

The Red Lake Falls band, a better than which is not to be found in all Northern Minnesota, will give an open air concert for an hour, 1 to 2 o'clock, before the meeting. This will give an abundant opportunity for everyone to get dinner and get located and hear such a concert as citizens are usually willing to pay to attend.

To give the city a holiday appearance it would be an excellent idea to decorate a little, not necessarily extensively, but in the way of flags. Run up the flags, it will help a whole lot.

Favorably Reported.

A telegram received this morning from Congressman Halvor Steenerson reads as follows:

"I have secured favorable report on my drainage bill which has been amended to apply to Minnesota only. This report was authorized late yesterday afternoon."

The bill will mean much for the cause of drainage in northern Minnesota where Indian reservation lands are affected as money in the Indian funds can be used to construct the drainage canals, the money to be returned to the funds when the lands are disposed of, as they will bring an increased price owing to the fact that they are drained and made tillable.

There was great opposition to the measure from certain sources in congress which could only be overcome by restriction of the application of the measure to Minnesota alone.—Crookston Times.

Low Rates to Warren.

The Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament will be held June 28th and 29th, for which occasion the Great Northern Railway will sell from Red Lake Falls, Minn. to Warren, Minn., round trip tickets for one and one-third fare, date of sale June 25th to June 27th, with final return limit of June 30, 1906.

BRIDGE HALF MILE HIGH.

Lofty Structure That Will Span the Royal Gorge of Arkansas River.

"Colorado will possess, within a few months, the highest bridge in the world over the deepest chasm in the Rocky mountains," writes Elihu Palmer, in the Technical World magazine.

"The bridge is being constructed over the far-famed Royal gorge in the narrowest point in the also phenomenally famous scenic Grand canyon of the same stream—the great gate, as it were, through which the Arkansas river empties its enormous accretions of water, very soon after the same have been gathered from the melting snows, 150 miles above, in the vicinity of Leadville, onto the plain once known as 'the great American desert.'

"At the point in the Royal gorge where the bridge is to be stretched the abysmal rent in the earth's crust is but 50 feet wide at the bottom and 230 feet wide at the top. The walls rise almost perpendicular for a distance of 2,660 feet and are granite, decomposed and iron-stained until the colorings blend into innumerable pleasing effects upon the senses."

The bridge will be built of steel and glass.

NAZARETH OF TO-DAY.

Modern Improvements in Evidence in the Home of Christ's Boyhood.

Nazareth, where Jesus spent his boyhood, calls to mind a picture of a hazy, half-mystical village of the far east. The Palestine of to-day is a network of railroads and telegraph wires. Modern hotels with elevators and bell boys now occupy sacred places of history. Cafes stands where once the hosts of Israel fought, contending with chariots and horsemen. The awkward camelback is transplanted by the compartment car. One would look in vain for the hospitable villager standing at the door of his humble flat roofed home. Tall, slanting roofed buildings predominate, with fresh red tiles imported from France. In a prominent place on the brow of a hill stands the English orphanage, which provides for the education of the orphans of Palestine. English and Arabic are taught here, as well as housekeeping and needle work.

A telegraph station, with an American operator in citizen's dress, keeps Nazareth in touch with the world. Here, when occasion demands, messages can click their way across to New York.

New York's New Fad.

The latest fad among members of New York's "Four Hundred" is the "hymn tea." A number of young ladies of the smartest families, to the number of about 300, meet twice a week at a well-known hotel, where they have tea, and afterwards hold a prayer meeting. Male friends are not admitted, but are allowed to wait below. The "hymn tea" is followed by a drive or a promenade along Fifth avenue.

Enough to Make a King Talk.

The remarkable news is sent over from England that King Edward laughed when he stubbed his toe the other day. If his majesty should step on a discarded banana skin and meet the earth half way he would no doubt smile approval of the solidity of the kingdom over which he rules.—Denver Times.

Poor Financiering.

"Maria, we'll have to give up that summer trip. My account at the bank is already overdrawn."

"O, John, you are such a wretched financier. Why didn't you put your account in a bank that had plenty of money?"—Chicago Tribune.

Much Ado About Nothing.

When "mother" goes away on a visit the oldest daughter left in charge can show more authority in getting six dishes washed than a general will show in leading an army into battle.—Atchison Globe.

COLE IS NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

CHOICE OF THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION AT DULUTH.

SELECTED ON THIRD BALLOT

PLATFORM FAVORS TARIFF REVISION AND DIRECT VOTE FOR SENATORS.

THE TICKET.

Governor—A. L. Cole, Walker.
Lieutenant Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato.
Treasurer—C. C. Dinehart, Slayton.
Attorney General—E. T. Young, Appleton.
Secretary of State—Julius Schmahl, Redwood Falls.
Auditor—S. G. Iverson, Rushford.
Clerk of Supreme Court—C. A. Pidgeon, Buffalo.
Railroad Commissioner—C. F. Staples, West St. Paul.
Chief Justice Supreme Court—C. M. Start, Rochester.

Duluth, June 15.—A. L. Cole of Walker was yesterday nominated for governor by the Republican state convention.

For over an hour the convention balloted, and not until the third ballot did Cole appear to have any decided advantage. He started on the informal ballot with less than 200 votes and increased only a little on the first and second formal ballots.

On the informal ballot Jacobson led with 347; Cole, 192; Block, 181 1-2; Lord, 118; Stephens, 103; Somerville, 87, and Diment 60 1-2.

The four leaders kept gaining and the other three losing throughout the balloting.

On the first formal ballot Jacobson had 367, Cole 232, Block 196 and Lord 124. The second ballot made little change. Then came the third. Jacobson and Cole were both gaining as the list of counties was read. When Hennepin was reached there was a lull and then the chairman announced that the 90 which had been for Block had divided to give Cole 77 and Jacobson 13.

Starts the Stampede.

This started the flare of enthusiasm. Cole was gaining strongly all along the line and Jacobson was gaining a little. The others were losing. Washington, near the bottom, which had been almost solid for Block, threw its 14 votes for Cole.

That started the stampede.

The roll call was finished with difficulty, and as Yellow Medicine announced its vote cries for recognition came from all parts of the hall. Blue Earth was given recognition, and threw its 17 votes solid for Cole. Ramsey had been dividing its vote among the seven, but asked to change its entire 64 to Cole. Mower came next with 22, Brown with 10, Le Sueur with 12, Polk with 17 and Sibley with 5.

Cole Is Nominated.

Chairman Sivright declared the ballot closed and the tellers began the counting. Cole had won with 550 votes. The contest was over.

Pandemonium reigned for a few minutes, but subsided while the motion was put to adjourn to 3 o'clock. Nominating speeches were tabooed. The ballots were taken without any nominations being made. Efforts to adjourn the convention were made by the Duluth delegates, but they were fruitless.

After the appointment of the committees a motion for an adjournment was put and lost. Duluth had invited the delegates to take a trip on the naval reserve steamer Fern while the committees deliberated, but the convention was anxious for business. No one would wait for a report of the committee on credentials. There were no contests and the credentials committee was dismissed with a motion to accept the list of delegates whose names were in the hands of the secretary. Another motion to adjourn was made and again lost. Another motion for adjournment could not be made until some business had been transacted.

There was nothing to do but proceed with nominations, which resulted as given above.

Indorse Senator Nelson.

The resolution indorsing Senator Knute Nelson was passed unanimously.

W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson was unanimously chosen for temporary chairman, and later the temporary organization was made permanent.

At the afternoon session A. L. Cole was presented to the convention and received a remarkable demonstration. In a brief speech he thanked the delegates for the honor conferred and promised to lead the party to victory.

Mr. Jacobson was then introduced amid intense enthusiasm. He promised to join hands with Cole and work for the success of the ticket and congratulated the party on the evident harmony which existed.

The Platform.

"We approve and support the distinguished and patriotic policies of the present national Republican administration as exemplified in the messages, the acts and the achievements of Theodore Roosevelt, and we hereby indorse his consistent efforts to enforce the laws against trusts, monopolies and combinations in the restraint of trade.

"We approve the action of the national administration with respect to the Panama canal, as its construction would prove of the greatest utility in the furtherance of commerce and the world's advancement.

"We believe in free and open competition in all industries as the surest road to the development of our country and our resources, and the protection of private and individual rights. To that end we heartily indorse the action of President Roosevelt and the department of justice in enforcing the law against trusts and combines in the restraint of trade and commerce.

For Tariff Revision.

"The offices of President Roosevelt in effecting the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Japan not only reflects great honor upon this country but will also exert a powerful influence in maintaining the world's peace.

"The Republican party of Minnesota reaffirms the policy of protection to American labor and American industry. It recognizes the fact that no human wisdom can frame a tariff measure adapted to all time and conditions, and that schedules must from time to time be revised, and we believe that the time is now ripe for revision.

"We recognize the necessity of cooperation to meet new conditions in the industrial world and to complete successfully for the world's markets. But the combinations which stifle competition, limit production, control prices or unduly increase profits or values, and especially the necessaries of life, are opposed to public prosperity and should be repressed. We favor legislation—national and state—to prevent such abuses and secure to every citizen a 'square deal.'

Declares for Pure Food.

"The adulteration of foods is a crime against the people, and so therefore we recommend such legislation as will properly safeguard the people against prosecution of all offenders.

"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"We believe that the same beneficent policy ever advocated by the Republican party in recognition of the services of the old soldiers should be maintained.

"We express anew our confidence in the sterling character, distinguished ability and invaluable public services of the Hon. Knute Nelson and the Hon. Moses E. Clapp, senators from this state.

Renominate Knute Nelson.

"We hereby nominate Hon. Knute Nelson to succeed himself.

"We cannot view without concern the continued exodus from the older counties and the gradual but certain decrease of rural population, and often without any corresponding advantage to the vast and fertile territory in our state still unsettled, and we therefore pledge the Republican party to the adoption of a vigorous and systematic system of state development.

"We hereby pledge ourselves to further promote the development of our landed resources by providing for a comprehensive system of drainage of the state lands and a more effective exploration of their mineral resources and the proper safeguarding of the rights of the state in its mineral lands.

Support Tax Amendment.

"The policy of the Republican party in advancing the industrial interests of the state is witnessed by legislation regulating the inspection of grain, the establishment of a twine plant, the protection of the farming and dairying interests, the drainage of state lands, the encouragement of immigration, the protection of our forests, the education of our youth and the care of the wards of the state.

"We favor the tax amendment to be voted on at the next general election, and we urge the next legislature to revise and improve our tax laws so that all property will contribute its just share to local and state expenditures.

"We favor a reduction in passenger fares to 2 cents per mile, the abolition of discrimination and favoritism in the furnishing and hauling of cars, and such a readjustment of freight rates and charges as will afford to every producer, shipper and consumer the impartial services of these public highways.

"We recognize the value of forestry for this state and recommend legislation to promote reforestation of waste non-agricultural lands wherever practicable.

Honor Semi-centennial.

"We recommend most heartily the proposition to commemorate in 1908 the semi-centennial of Minnesota's admission into the Union.

"We favor such laws as will secure better results in the expenditure of road funds, and we favor the proposed constitutional amendment increasing aid for highways.

"We are in favor of all just measures for the advancement of the causes of temperance, morality and good government."

SLAUGHTER GOES ON UNCHECKED

INCREASED VIOLENCE MARKS BLOODY DISORDERS AT BIALYSTOK.

SEVERAL BOMBS ARE THROWN

A CONSTANT INTERCHANGE OF SHOTS BETWEEN JEWS AND THE SOLDIERS.

St. Petersburg, June 17.—Disorders appear to have broken out at Bialystok yesterday afternoon with even greater fury than characterized Thursday's riots.

No dispatches were received last night from Bialystok, where the telegraph office is closed; but semi-official messages from Grodno and Minsk report that the excesses were started again yesterday by the throwing of several bombs. The crowds, according to these dispatches, then opened fire on the police station, to which the troops replied, and there was a constant interchange of shots between Jews in their houses and soldiers in the streets.

Peasants Participate.

A mob of peasants, armed with clubs, scythes, etc., who had found their way into the city Thursday, was participating in the rioting.

A dispatch from Minsk states that the authorities had been fully forewarned of the possibility of trouble Thursday and had recalled a battalion of infantry and several squadrons of cavalry from their summer camp to strengthen the garrison, but without overawing the fomenters of the trouble.

Prompt to Investigate.

The lower house of parliament read the government a lesson yesterday on promptness of investigation of the Bialystok outbreak, a committee of three having been named and departing last evening for Bialystok, in the hope that the presence of representatives of parliament will check the disorders and have a salutary effect on reactionary officials, if the charges are true that they are inspiring excesses.

The first evidence to be submitted to the commission will be copies of proclamations, which, it is asserted, were distributed in the streets of Bialystok the last ten days under the eyes of the police, calling on the population to rise against the Jews and intellectuals.

Town Completely Cordoned.

An official dispatch from Bialystok last night says the town has been completely cordoned to prevent the ingress of peasantry, who were rushing in from the country, attracted by chances of pillage and rumors of danger to their coreligionists.

The end of the agrarian debate in the lower house is now in sight, a ten-minute limit to speeches having been fixed.

Hospitals Filled With Wounded.

Bialystok, Russia, June 16.—So far as can be ascertained, thirty Jews were killed during Thursday's outbreak here. The hospitals are filled with wounded, but it is impossible to ascertain the correct number of the casualties, as many of the injured are hidden in private houses.

BRIDGE HALF MILE HIGH.

Lofty Structure That Will Span the Royal Gorge of Arkansas River.

"Colorado will possess, within a few months, the highest bridge in the world over the deepest chasm in the Rocky mountains," writes Elihu Palmer, in the Technical World magazine.

"The bridge is being constructed over the far-famed Royal gorge in the narrowest point in the also phenomenally famous scenic Grand canyon of the same stream—the great gate, as it were, through which the Arkansas river empties its enormous accretions of water, very soon after the same have been gathered from the melting snows, 150 miles above, in the vicinity of Leadville, onto the plain once known as 'the great American desert.'

"At the point in the Royal gorge where the bridge is to be stretched the abysmal rent in the earth's crust is but 50 feet wide at the bottom and 230 feet wide at the top. The walls rise almost perpendicular for a distance of 2,660 feet and are granite, decomposed and iron-stained until the colorings blend into innumerable pleasing effects upon the senses."

The bridge will be built of steel and glass.

NAZARETH OF TO-DAY.

Modern Improvements in Evidence in the Home of Christ's Boyhood.

Nazareth, where Jesus spent his boyhood, calls to mind a picture of a hazy, half-mystical village of the far east. The Palestine of to-day is a network of railroads and telegraph wires. Modern hotels with elevators and bell boys now occupy sacred places of history. Cafes stands where once the hosts of Israel fought, contending with chariots and horsemen. The awkward camelback is transplanted by the compartment car. One would look in vain for the hospitable villager standing at the door of his humble flat roofed home. Tall, slanting roofed buildings predominate, with fresh red tiles imported from France. In a prominent place on the brow of a hill stands the English orphanage, which provides for the education of the orphans of Palestine. English and Arabic are taught here, as well as housekeeping and needle work.

A telegraph station, with an American operator in citizen's dress, keeps Nazareth in touch with the world. Here, when occasion demands, messages can click their way across to New York.

New York's New Fad.

The latest fad among members of New York's "Four Hundred" is the "hymn tea." A number of young ladies of the smartest families, to the number of about 300, meet twice a week at a well-known hotel, where they have tea, and afterwards hold a prayer meeting. Male friends are not admitted, but are allowed to wait below. The "hymn tea" is followed by a drive or a promenade along Fifth avenue.

Enough to Make a King Talk.

The remarkable news is sent over from England that King Edward laughed when he stubbed his toe the other day. If his majesty should step on a discarded banana skin and meet the earth half way he would no doubt smile approval of the solidity of the kingdom over which he rules.—Denver Times.

Poor Financiering.

"Maria, we'll have to give up that summer trip. My account at the bank is already overdrawn."

"O, John, you are such a wretched financier! Why didn't you put your account in a bank that had plenty of money?"—Chicago Tribune.

Much Ado About Nothing.

When "mother" goes away on a visit the oldest daughter left in charge can show more authority in getting six dishes washed than a general will show in leading an army into battle.—Atchison Globe.

CHOICE OF THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION AT DULUTH.

SELECTED ON THIRD BALLOT

PLATFORM FAVORS TARIFF REVISION AND DIRECT VOTE FOR SENATORS.

THE TICKET.

Governor—A. L. Cole, Walker.
Lieutenant Governor—A. O. Eberhart, Mankato.
Treasurer—C. C. Dinehart, Slayton.
Attorney General—E. T. Young, Appleton.
Secretary of State—Julius Schmahl, Redwood Falls.
Auditor—S. G. Iverson, Rushford.
Clerk of Supreme Court—C. A. Pidgeon, Buffalo.
Railroad Commissioner—C. F. Staples, West St. Paul.
Chief Justice Supreme Court—C. M. Start, Rochester.

Duluth, June 15.—A. L. Cole of Walker was yesterday nominated for governor by the Republican state convention.

For over an hour the convention balloted, and not until the third ballot did Cole appear to have any decided advantage. He started on the informal ballot with less than 200 votes and increased only a little on the first and second formal ballots.

On the informal ballot Jacobson led with 347; Cole, 192; Block, 181 1-2; Lord, 118; Stephens, 103; Somerville, 87, and Diment 60 1-2.

The four leaders kept gaining and the other three losing throughout the balloting.

On the first formal ballot Jacobson had 367, Cole 232, Block 196 and Lord 124. The second ballot made little change. Then came the third. Jacobson and Cole were both gaining as the list of counties was read. When Hennepin was reached there was a lull and then the chairman announced that the 90 which had been for Block had divided to give Cole 77 and Jacobson 13.

Starts the Stampede.

This started the flare of enthusiasm. Cole was gaining strongly all along the line and Jacobson was gaining a little. The others were losing. Washington, near the bottom, which had been almost solid for Block, threw its 14 votes for Cole.

That started the stampede.

The roll call was finished with difficulty, and as Yellow Medicine announced its vote cries for recognition came from all parts of the hall. Blue Earth was given recognition and threw its 17 votes solid for Cole. Ramsey had been dividing its vote among the seven, but asked to change its entire 64 to Cole. Mower came next with 22, Brown with 10, Le Sueur with 12, Polk with 17 and Sibley with 5.

Cole Is Nominated.

Chairman Sivright declared the ballot closed and the tellers began the counting. Cole had won with 550 votes. The contest was over.

Pandemonium reigned for a few minutes, but subsided while the motion was put to adjourn to 3 o'clock. Nominating speeches were tabooed. The ballots were taken without any nominations being made. Efforts to adjourn the convention were made by the Duluth delegates, but they were fruitless.

After the appointment of the committees a motion for an adjournment was put and lost. Duluth had invited the delegates to take a trip on the naval reserve steamer Fern while the committees deliberated, but the convention was anxious for business. No one would wait for a report of the committee on credentials. There were no contests and the credentials committee was dismissed with a motion to accept the list of delegates whose names were in the hands of the secretary. Another motion to adjourn was made and again lost. Another motion for adjournment could not be made until some business had been transacted.

There was nothing to do but proceed with nominations, which resulted as given above.

Indorse Senator Nelson.

The resolution indorsing Senator Knute Nelson was passed unanimously.

W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson was unanimously chosen for temporary chairman, and later the temporary organization was made permanent.

At the afternoon session A. L. Cole was presented to the convention and received a remarkable demonstration. In a brief speech he thanked the delegates for the honor conferred and promised to lead the party to victory.

Mr. Jacobson was then introduced amid intense enthusiasm. He promised to join hands with Cole and work for the success of the ticket and congratulated the party on the evident harmony which existed.

The Platform.

"We approve and support the distinctive progressive policies of the present national Republican administration as exemplified in the messages, the acts and the achievements of Theodore Roosevelt, and we hereby indorse his consistent efforts to enforce the laws against trusts, monopolies and combinations in the restraint of trade.

"We approve the action of the national administration with respect to the Panama canal, as its construction would prove of the greatest utility in the furtherance of commerce and the world's advancement.

"We believe in free and open competition in all industries as the surest road to the development of our country and our resources, and the protection of private and individual rights. To that end we heartily indorse the action of President Roosevelt and the department of justice in enforcing the law against trusts and combines in the restraint of trade and commerce.

For Tariff Revision.

"The offices of President Roosevelt in effecting the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Japan not only reflects great honor upon this country but will also exert a powerful influence in maintaining the world's peace.

"The Republican party of Minnesota reaffirms the policy of protection to American labor and American industry. It recognizes the fact that no human wisdom can frame a tariff measure adapted to all time and conditions, and that schedules must from time to time be revised, and we believe that the time is now ripe for revision.

"We recognize the necessity of cooperation to meet new conditions in the industrial world and to complete successfully for the world's markets. But the combinations which stifle competition, limit production, control prices or unduly increase profits or values, and especially the necessaries of life, are opposed to public prosperity and should be repressed. We favor legislation—national and state—to prevent such abuses and secure to every citizen a 'square deal.'

Declares for Pure Food.

"The adulteration of foods is a crime against the people, and so therefore we recommend such legislation as will properly safeguard the people against prosecution of all offenders.

"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"We believe that the same beneficent policy ever advocated by the Republican party in recognition of the services of the old soldiers should be maintained.

"We express anew our confidence in the sterling character, distinguished ability and invaluable public services of the Hon. Knute Nelson and the Hon. Moses E. Clapp, senators from this state.

Renominate Knute Nelson.

"We hereby nominate Hon. Knute Nelson to succeed himself.

"We cannot view without concern the continued exodus from the older counties and the gradual but certain decrease of rural population, and often without any corresponding advantage to the vast and fertile territory in our state still unsettled, and we therefore pledge the Republican party to the adoption of a vigorous and systematic system of state development.

"We hereby pledge ourselves to further promote the development of our landed resources by providing for a comprehensive system of drainage of the state lands and a more effective exploration of their mineral resources and the proper safeguarding of the rights of the state in its mineral lands.

Support Tax Amendment.

"The policy of the Republican party in advancing the industrial interests of the state is witnessed by legislation regulating the inspection of grain, the establishment of a twine plant, the protection of the farming and dairying interests, the drainage of state lands, the encouragement of immigration, the protection of our forests, the education of our youth and the care of the wards of the state.

"We favor the tax amendment to be voted on at the next general election, and we urge the next legislature to revise and improve our tax laws so that all property will contribute its just share to local and state expenditures.

"We favor a reduction in passenger fares to 2 cents per mile, the abolition of discrimination and favoritism in the furnishing and hauling of cars, and such a readjustment of freight rates and charges as will afford to every producer, shipper and consumer the impartial services of these public highways.

"We recognize the value of forestry for this state and recommend legislation to promote reforestation of waste non-agricultural lands wherever practicable.

Honor Semi-centennial.

"We recommend most heartily the proposition to commemorate in 1908 the semi-centennial of Minnesota's admission into the Union.

"We heartily approve the amendment to the state constitution, passed by the last legislature, the purpose of which is to permit market gardeners and farmers to sell or peddle their products to consumers.

"In view of the fact that some other states have established state printing offices, we recommend an investigation by the legislature of the question whether or not the State of Minnesota shall adopt the policy of doing its own printing.

"We favor such laws as will secure better results in the expenditure of road funds, and we favor the proposed constitutional amendment increasing aid for highways.

"We are in favor of all just measures tending to the advancement of the causes of temperance, morality and good government."

HOUSE DECIDES FOR LOCK CANAL

DECISION REACHED AFTER TWO HOURS' DEBATE—VOTE IS 110 TO 36.

BUY ALL MATERIALS AT HOME

SENATE DEVOTES DAY TO PANAMA CANAL AND LAKE ERIE SHIP CANAL.

Washington, June 17.—By a vote of 110 to 36 the house yesterday, at the end of a two-hour debate on the appropriations for the Panama canal, decided that the canal should be of a lock type. After listening to the speech of Mr. Burton of Ohio in favor of the lock canal, and consuming an hour in the discussion of the amendment defining the type as presented by Mr. Littauer of New York, the house, in committee of the whole, expressed its opinion in favor of a lock canal.

By a decisive vote the house refused to sanction the purchase of materials in the markets of the world for the Panama canal, the general position of the Republicans being that as the canal was to be built by American taxes the American workingman and the American manufacturer should have the advantage.

In the Senate.

The time of the senate yesterday was in the main divided between the Panama canal bill and the Lake Erie and Ohio river ship canal bill. On the former there were speeches by Senators Teller and Morgan, while in connection with the latter a number of senators engaged in a controversy over the policy of granting a national charter to an interstate canal. Senator Bacon took positive ground against such a course and spoke at length in presenting his views. The Lake Erie bill was under consideration when at 6:15 the senate adjourned.

Would Veto Sea Level.

Washington, June 17.—If congress should send a measure to President Roosevelt providing for the construction of a sea level canal on the isthmus of Panama he would veto it. This statement is made by authority.

REBELS ARE DAILY GAINING.

Gen. Toledo Will Soon Begin March on Guatemalan City.

Mexico City, June 17.—Because it is known in this city, and, it is said, also in Washington, that three Central American republics—Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras—desire to bring about a change of administration in Guatemala and are willing to be guided by the counsels of Mexico and the United States, it is not believed by the revolutionists that either Mexico or the United States will intervene in behalf of the Cabeira administration. The revolutionists claim their force is daily augmenting and that Gen. Toledo will in a few days begin a rapid forward march on Guatemala City.

POISON IN MUFFINS.

Farmer Is Dead and Wife and Daughter Are Ill.

Zion City, Ill., June 17.—Hiram F. Deukeling, a farmer living one mile south of this city, died yesterday, and his wife and daughter Hazel, aged twenty years, are seriously ill as the result of eating cornmeal muffins. The mother and daughter will recover. Indications point to arsenical poisoning, but how the poison got into the muffins is a mystery.

FRISCO SHAKES AGAIN.

Severe Shock Felt, but No Serious Damage Done.

San Francisco, June 17.—A severe earthquake was felt here at 9:41 p. m. It lasted about five seconds. It was probably not heavy enough to do damage, though possibly it may have caused some of the walls of ruined buildings to fall.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

Iowa School Girl Is Neither Absent Nor Tardy in Twelve Years.

West Union, Iowa, June 17.—Edna Adams, who has just graduated from the Volga City high school, has made an exceptional record for punctuality and attendance. During the entire twelve years of her school life she has not once been absent or tardy. Miss Adams is the daughter of C. S. Adams, formerly a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul engineer, now a merchant at Volga City.

Need Men at Frisco.

San Francisco, June 17.—Since the great fire the Union iron works and other large manufacturing concerns in their line have found it difficult to fill their largely increased orders, owing to the lack of men.

No Trace of Ship's Crew.

Neah Bay, Wash., June 17.—The tug Wyadd has arrived with the wreck of the schooner Argus, the crew burned away and the vessel gutted, no rigging or upper works being left. There is no trace of the crew.

CONGRESSMAN FATALY HURT

MR. LESTER OF GEORGIA FALLS THROUGH SKYLIGHT IN APARTMENT HOUSE.

Washington, June 17.—Representative Rufus R. Lester of Georgia was last night seriously and probably fatally injured by falling through the skylight of the Cairo apartment house.

Mr. Lester had gone to the roof of the building shortly after 8 o'clock to look for his two young grandchildren and apparently missed his footing, falling through the skylight about thirty feet to the eleventh floor. In the fall he sustained internal injuries and both legs were broken, his right leg being crushed fearfully.

There was a consultation of physicians last night, and it was admitted that there was very little chance of his recovery. The doctors stated that it might be twenty-four hours before the outcome could be determined.

Mr. Lester had not been in good health for some time. He was partially paralyzed several years ago. Mr. Lester is sixty-eight years old.

DOWIE'S SPIRIT GOES VISITING

SAYS HIS SPIRITUAL BEING HAS CALLED ON GABRIEL AND VIRGIN MARY.

Chicago, June 17.—John Alexander Dowie, testifying in the hearing of the Zion City controversy in Judge Landis' court yesterday afternoon, told of an instance when his body and soul became separated and in his spiritual being he distinctly say his own dead body lying beneath a shroud. It occurred, he said, while he was fighting the liquor traffic in Melbourne and was regarded by him as a divine warning that he was about to die. At another time, the witness asserted, his spirit left his body and the Angel Gabriel and the Virgin Mary were present in the realm visited by his spirit. The queer narration of life and death was brought out by Attorney Newman during cross-examination of Dowie. Following the vision, the witness continued, two acquaintances came to him and told him they had dreamed that he was to be assassinated. Then, while alone in the tabernacle, came a voice warning hom to "arise and go."

"I went," said Dowie, "and while on my way home I heard an explosion. The next day I found that my enemies had tried to kill me with dynamite. The back of the tabernacle had been wrecked."

Dowie denied that he had ever represented himself as Elijah the restorer, subsequently qualifying the statement by saying that he told his people that he "came in the spirit and power of Elijah."

JEROME EXCUSES BABCOCK.

Republican Leader Need Not Explain Contributions.

Washington, June 17.—Representative James Babcock of Wisconsin, formerly chairman of the Republican congressional committee, is not going to New York to tell the grand jury about the contributions to the campaign funds by life insurance companies.

Babcock collected $2,500 from the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York some time ago, and District Attorney Jerome wrote to him and told him he would be asked to detail his insurance collecting methods to the New York grand jury. Mr. Babcock wrote to the district attorney, saying he would be glad to go to New York whenever he was wanted. He received the following letter from District Attorney Jerome to-day:

"My Dear Sir: It has been remiss in me that I have not sooner acknowledged the receipt of your communication of June 5 in reference to coming on to testify before the grand jury of this county.

"I finally found it was unnecessary to put you to this trouble, and I have been so engaged with preparations for going away that I have neglected to acknowledge your courtesy."

AMERICANS ARE PAINT USERS.

It has been remarked that the American people consume more paint, both in the aggregate and per capita, than any other people in the world. In a recently published article on the subject it was figured that our yearly consumption is over 100,000,000 gallons of paints of all kinds, of which over one-half is used in the paintings of houses.

The reason for this great consumption is twofold: a large proportion of our buildings, especially in small towns and rural districts, are constructed of wood, and we, as a people, are given to neatness and cleanliness. For, take it all in all, there is nothing so cleanly or so sanitary as paint.

Travel where you will throughout the country, everywhere we find the neat, cheerful painted dwelling, proclaiming at once the prosperity and the self-respect of our population.

Fifty years ago this was not so; painted dwellings, while common in the larger cities and towns, were the exception in the rural districts; because, on the one hand, a large proportion of those buildings were temporary makeshifts, and, on the other hand, because paint was then a luxury, expensive and difficult to obtain in the out-of-the-way places, and requiring special knowledge and much preparation to fit it for use.

The introduction of ready mixed or prepared paints, about 1860, changed the entire aspect of affairs. As the Jack-of-all-trades told the Walking Delegate in one of Octave Thanet's stories, "Anyone can slather paint." The insurmountable difficulty with our predecessors was to get the paint ready for "slathering." That the country was ready for paint in a convenient, popular form is shown by the immediate success of the industry and its phenominal growth in 50 years from nothing to 60,000,000 gallons—the estimated output for 1900.

Some pretty severe things have been written about and said against this class of paints, especially by painters and manufacturers of certain kinds of paste paints. Doubtless in many instances these strictures have been justified and some fearfully and wonderfully constructed mixtures have in the past been worked off on the guileless consumer in the shape of prepared paint. But such products have had their short day and quickly disappeared, and the too-enterprising manufacturers that produced them have come to grief in the bankruptcy courts or have learned by costly experience that honesty is the best policy and have reformed their ways.

The chief exceptions to this rule are some mail order houses who sell direct to the country trade, at a very low price—frequently below the wholesale price of linseed oil. The buyer of such goods, like the buyer of a "gold brick," has only himself to blame if he finds his purchase worthless. With gold selling at any bank or mint at a fixed price, owners of gold do not sell it at a discount; and with linseed oil quoted everywhere at 50 to 70 cents a gallon, manufacturers do not sell a pure linseed oil paint at 30 or 40 cents a gallon.

The composition of prepared paints differs because paint experts have not yet agreed as to the best pigments and because the daily results of tests on a large scale are constantly improving the formulas of manufacturers; but all have come to the conclusion that the essentials of good paint are pure linseed oil, fine grinding and thorough incorporation, and in these particulars all the products of reputable manufacturers correspond; all first-class prepared paints are thoroughly mixed and ground and the liquid base is almost exclusively pure linseed oil, the necessary volatile "thinners" and Japan dryers.

The painter's opposition to such products is based largely on self-interest. He wants to mix the paint himself and to be paid for doing it, and to a certain class of painters it is no recommendation for a paint to say that it will last five or ten years. The longer a paint lasts the longer he will have to wait for the job of repainting. The latter consideration has no weight with the consumer, and the former is a false idea of economy. Hand labor can never be as cheap or as efficient as machine work, and every time the painter mixes paint, did he but know it, he is losing money, because he can buy a better paint than he can mix at less than it costs him to mix it.

Prepared paints have won, not only on their actual merits, but on their convenience and economy. They are comparatively cheap and they are incomparably handy. But when all is said, the experienced painter is the proper person to apply even a ready mixed paint. He knows better than anyone else the "when" and "how" and the difference between painting and "slathering" is much greater than it appears to a novice. Everyone to his trade, and after all painting is the painter's trade and not the householder's.

In 1920.

As a man approached the great college eleven pale and slender young men, dressed in evening clothes and white gloves tripped across the field and slapped one another on the wrist.

"Strange!" he mused. "What is this—outdoor theatricals?"

"No," replied the dean with much pride in his tones, "this is a game of modified football."

It always makes a woman awful mad not to have anybody calling when a telegram arrives.

NEWS OF THE Northwest.

CUT OFF HIS OWN FEET.

Civil War Veteran Lives Long After Rough Operation.

Britton, S. D., June 12.—M. R. January, a veteran of the Civil war, is at the point of death at his home in this city. January is well known as the man who, while a prisoner in Libby prison during the Civil war, amputated both of his feet with a jackknife.

He had been discovered in an attempt to escape and had been shackled. The shackles wore a sore on each foot, and this resulted in gangrene. January suffered so much that, borrowing a jackknife from a fellow prisoner, he performed a rough surgical operation upon himself, amputating both feet just above the ankle. He nearly died from the operation, but soon afterwards was exchanged and came North, where he received medical attention which led to his recovery.

A. H. Zechiel, representative of the Wisconsin Anti-saloon league, brought in a verdict of guilty of violating the Sunday laws. Zechiel bought the beer on Sunday for the purpose of obtaining evidence against a saloonkeeper whom he prosecuted for selling liquor on Sunday.

TAKES DARE; IS DROWNED.

Boy Who Cannot Swim Ventures Beyond His Depth.

Baldwin, Wis., June 12.—Garrett Geurkink, a young high school student of Baldwin, was drowned in the waters of the creek at Mile Trestle, one mile west of Baldwin. Geurkink could not swim, and it was due to going out into the water beyond his depth that he lost his life. One of his companions who had gone in ahead of him dared him to follow. He took the dare, went beyond his depth and a minute later was lost.

After work at both places had been delayed for an hour the bricklayers changed their overalls and all was serene.

FIREBUGS ARE FEARED.

$50,000 Blaze in East Grand Forks—Horses Are Lost.

The fact that a fire broke out in a livery barn in this city during the fire on the East side leads to a belief that firebugs are at work.

THE "INTERESTS" IN CONTROL.

Can the supporters of A. L. Cole claim that his candidacy is free from corporate influences? Will they assert that the timber thieves, the tax dodgers and the other enemies of the public weal are to be restrained and punished for their misdemeanors in the improbable event of Cole's election?

If Mr. Cole's managers are ready to assure the voters of Minnesota that their candidate is above suspicion of obligations to the corporations, how are we to account for the fact that Tom Shevlin, and a horde of other lumber barons, the entire legal and claim department of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, a myria of steel trust agents and hundreds of other corporation representatives were at Duluth for the avowed purpose of defeating the candidacy of J. F. Jacobson?

If Mr. Cole is like Caesar's wife, why the vulgar glee on the part of Mr. Shevlin on the evening following the convention, when the famous $2000 banquet was given in honor of the Hennepin delegation, which led the band-wagon movement to Cole? What about the other disgraceful performances in commoration of Jacobson's defeat for which Shevlin put up the money?

It is undoubtedly true that the elation in corporationdom is caused not so much by Cole's nomination as by Jacobson's Waterloo, but it is a fair question to ask: If Shevlin and his cohorts can dictate the nomination of Cole, why can't they control the nominee?

Neither Jacob F. Jacobson nor John A. Johnson would accept a nomination for governor or any other office at the hands of the men who dictated the choice of Cole.

The corporations defeated the nomination of Jacobson and they expect to defeat the election of Johnson. The latter part of their program will not succeed if those who want good government will lay partisanship aside and perform the duty incumbent upon the good citizen in November.

AND HE WAS BEATEN.

The only way in which J. F. Jacobson can be prevented from receiving the nomination for governor at Duluth on June 13, is by the use of corporation money. If the corporations and the politicains keep their hands off he will be nominated by acclamation. He is the choice of the people. If the Republicans of Minnesota really want a Republican governor elected, the way is clear. Heed the voice of the people.—St. Cloud Journal-Press, (Rep) May 2,

If you didn't know who Cole was, you will soon know by watching the editorial column of the Democratic press.

Did any one say that an investigation into that county seat corruption fund had been or would be commenced in Thief River Falls?

Now watch the Thief River Falls papers howl because of the graft exposed in the "diverting" of large sums of money from their city treasury.

The Thief River Falls papers are saying a vote will be taken on the county seat removal within a few weeks, "not to exceed two months." It is to laugh.

"The more haste, the less speed," and a thousand other old time maxims remind one that there is mighty little comfort to be extracted from a philosophical platitude.

St. Paul Dispatch, June, 14: Wednesday morning Jacobson was nominated. Wednesday afternoon the "interests" had arranged the deal by which he was defeated. It is a matter of generalship, of finesse, of strategy, or whatever one pleases to term it.

The way John Eastman, of the Thief River Falls News, wrote up the Republican county convention, it would be easy to draw the conclusion that he was sore at something. He should get orders from his brother, Alvah, how to conduct himself in the face of defeat.

The Washington correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal telegraphed that paper a column of surprise at the utter lack of interest among Washington politicians in the result of the late state convention. If he were in Minnesota he could write a book on the same subject.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Poor Effort at Translation.

The English papers have lately been having fun with a new German-English and English-German dictionary. The best example of the work is said to be the translation of our word "gimcrack." According to the London Daily Chronicle four meanings have been given for this word, which, when translated back into English, are: "The handsome girl," "the bad machine," "the ordinary handshake," and "a magician."

We often see a friend, relative or acquaintace, apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal disease—appendictis. People seem to know so little about this disease and therefor are not prepared. We have read with great interest a book on appendictis written by Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin. This book tells all about this disease, how it is caused and how it can be prevented and cured. For a free copy call at W. A. Schrieter. 34-37

Slaves of the Orient.

"In Zanzibar and Pemba slaves are very slow to take advantage of the regulations that give them the right to claim their freedom," says a traveler. "They realize that so long as they are well used their position is superior to that of the man whose freedom is his sole asset. I have found the same attitude in north Africa. From Morocco to Tripoli one sees most of the slaves well content and flourishing. The famine, the locusts, the drought and the tax collector have no terror for them. Work keeps them healthy, they have enough to eat and drink, and the future has no meaning at all. There is promotion, there are confidential missions to governors and friends that elevate a slave, if only in the eyes of his fellows, and there is always a chance of manumission when the owner dies and wishes to have some good deeds recorded in the books of Islam's recording angels. The sorry truth of the matter is that slaves under Mohammedan rule are much better off than they ever were under the rule of white men in America and elsewhere."

MERCURY A DECEPTIVE TREATMENT

Mercury and potash are very deceptive treatments and the blood poison sufferer who depends on them for a cure is sure to be disappointed. These minerals will remove the external symptoms and shut the disease up in the system for a while, but the trouble will surely return and the loathsome symptoms of sore mouth and throat, copper-colored spots, falling hair, sores and ulcers etc., will be accompanied by the disastrous effects of the treatment. The continued use of these strong minerals will completely ruin the health and weaken the system to such an extent that the original disease often becomes incurable and sometimes fatal. Mercury and potash eat out the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels, destroy the gastric juices, producing chronic dyspepsia, cause mercurial Rheumatism, salivation, and where they are taken in large quantities cause necrosis or decay of the bones. S. S. S. is the only remedy that can cure Contagious Blood Poison surely and safely. This remedy of nature, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, antidotes and destroys the powerful virus of the disease and by purifying the blood of every particle of the poison and enriching and strengthening this vital fluid it removes every symptom and leaves the body in a strong, healthy condition. When the blood has been purified with S. S. S. the cure is complete, and not one vestige of the poison is left for future outbreaks. Do not waste valuable time, and damage your health with the mineral treatment, but cure your case with S. S. S., an absolutely safe remedy. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that S. S. S. contains a particle of mineral. Book with instructions for self treatment and medical advice without charge.

..The Filibusters of Venezuela..

Or the Trials of a Spanish Girl.

By SEWARD W. HOPKINS.

Copyrighted 1900 by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER XXVIII—(Continued).

It was also related to him that Don Juan, the sole surviving member of the royalist band in authority, had returned to the Castle of Salvarez, taking the entire party of Englishmen with him, and had issued a public proclamation announcing the death of Philip and the end of the royal occupation. He had also forwarded to Caracas a full report and confession, and was now waiting to turn the castle over to General Salvarez whenever he should return.

Bursting with all this news, he hurried back to the Cheerway.

"Hurrah! hurrah!" he shouted, much to the amazement of all on board. "Philip is dead, Gomez is dead, Francisco, Mattazudo and the entire royal army are dead or scattered. The Castle of Salvarez is now occupied by an English party under Lord Chugmough himself, and Don Juan Garza and his daughter are with them."

"Don Juan's daughter!" gasped Jacinta. "She is dead!"

"No, she is alive," answered Medworth, his voice trembling with his great emotion. "It was all a mistake—a conspiracy."

Then he proceeded to relate to his astounded audience all that he had learned at Bolivar.

"Then my duty is clear," said Captain Glover. "This Castle of Salvarez, you say, is on the Coroni River—that one just below here?"

"Yes," said Medworth.

"Is the Coroni navigable?"

"That I can't say," said Arthur. "We navigated it on a flatboat under circumstances that I hope never to meet again, but whether the Cheerway could ascend the river or not, I could not say."

"Bless you, I had no idea of taking the Cheerway into unknown waters," said Captain Glover. "It's the launch I'm thinking of."

"That could do it, I'm sure," said Medworth.

"Then that settles it," said the Captain. "The Cheerway will drop down to the mouth of the Coroni and the launch will take you up to the castle."

All of which occurred just as Captain Glover promised.

* * *

Lord Chugmough, Don Juan and Lola were sitting on the veranda of the castle in the afternoon, chatting over past events, when the Englishman pointed to the river.

"I flatter myself," he said, "that I am at present the only man in Venezuela who possesses an electric launch. As the craft approaching is nothing else, it is probably mine. It has ladies aboard, too, I see. I fancy we are about to receive a call."

Sir Galloping Grace and others came out to see the launch; and Lola, whose young eyes had not been dimmed by her unpleasant experiences, uttered a loud "Arthur! Arthur!" and rushed to the river landing, where the passengers from the launch were shaking themselves out on the wharf.

In another moment Don Juan had the doubtful pleasure of seeing his daughter clasped in the arms of the young man he had spurned in happier days in New York.

Dona Maria wept a little at being received so graciously, and welcomed back to her own house by Don Juan, who, in his proud, Spanish way, looked still the conqueror, notwithstanding he was the only one left.

Jacinta felt a hot, jealous pang when she saw Lola being kissed by Medworth, and had there been no relief for her sore and tender heart, it would, perhaps, have been my unpleasant duty to describe another tragedy. But when she saw that she had lost Arthur, she suddenly remembered Lord Chugmough and his enormous wealth; and when she saw the stalwart frame and stern, handsome face of the Englishman, she smiled again.

But it is not my purpose to dwell upon the flirtation between Jacinta and Lord Chugmough, or to make another story of the tame events that followed the restoration of Castle Salvarez to its proper owners. It would not be interesting to make a long tale of the fact that General Salvarez did not receive the news of Philip's fall because he was already on his way home with two war ships and an army large enough to storm his castle, and that when at last he marched at the head of his column up to his own door, he found his wife and daughter surrounded by friends, and that he was severely reprimanded at Caracas for making so much stir about a little uprising that really amounted to nothing, and wore itself out in his absence.

Nor would it be particularly fascinating to read how Lord Chugmough offered the hospitality of his yacht to Don Juan, Lola and Medworth, and promised to convey them safely to New York.

The Cheerway sailed and in due time arrived at New York, where Don Juan, Lola and Medworth left her. She then proceeded across the Atlantic with her English passengers.

Don Juan lived up to the promise he had made to Lola at the ruined temple, and Medworth and Lola were married soon after their return.

Shortly after their marriage Medworth received a letter from Lord Chugmough, which provoked a quiet smile on his handsome face; but up to this time he has not divulged its contents to a living soul.

THE END.

Her Husband's Relations.

By Amy Randolph.

"It is your own fault, Clara," said Walter May.

"Of course it is," cried out Clara, passionately stamping her foot on the carpet. "Do you suppose I don't know it perfectly well? And that is what makes it so hard—oh, so cruelly hard to bear!"

The fact was that Mr. and Mrs. Walter May had begun life at the wrong end.

Clara Calthorpe was a pretty young girl, just out of the hotbed atmosphere of a fashionable boarding school. Walter May was a bank clerk who had not the least doubt but that he should ultimately make his fortune out of stocks and bonds.

"Clara," he said to his young wife while the golden circle of the honeymoon was yet overshadowing their lives, "would you like a country life?"

"Oh, dear, no!" said Clara involuntarily recoiling.

"Because", said Walter somewhat wistfully, "my father and mother are alone on the farm and I think they would like to have us come and live with them."

"I shouldn't like it at all," said Clara, "and mamma says no young bride should ever settle down among her husband's relations."

Mr. May frowned a little, but Mrs. Clara had a pretty positive way of her own, and he remonstrated no further.

But at the year's end Walter May had lost his situation, the clouds of debt had gathered darkly around them and all the pretty, new furniture, Eastlake cabinets, china dragons, proof engravings and hot house plants were sold under the red flag. They had made a complete failure of the housekeeping business, and now, in the fourth story of a third-rate hotel, Mr. and Mrs. May were looking their future in the face.

Clara had been extravagant. There was no sort of doubt about that. She had given "recherche" little parties, which she couldn't afford, to people who didn't care for her. She had patterned her tiny establishment after models which were far beyond her reach, and now they were ruined.

She had sent a tear-besprinkled letter to her mother who was in Washington trying to ensnare a rich husband for her younger daughter, but Mrs. Calthorpe had hastily written back that it was quite impossible for her to be in New York at that time of year and still more impossible to receive Mrs. Walter May at the monster hotel where she was boarding. And Clara, who had always had a vague idea that her mother was selfish, was quite certain of it now.

"There is but one thnig left for you, Clara," said Walter sadly.

"And that—"

"Is to go back to the old farm. I have no longer a home to offer you, but you will be sure of a warm welcome from my father and mother. I shall remain here and do my best to obtain some new situation which will enable men to earn our daily bread."

Clara burst into tears.

"Go to my husband's relations?" she sobbed. "Oh, Walter, I cannot!"

"You will have to," he said doggedly, "or else starve."

So Mrs. May packed up her trunk and obeyed. All the way to Hazelcopse Farm she cried behind her veil and pictured to herself a stony-faced old man with a virago of a wife, who would set her to doing menial tasks and overwhelm her with reproaches for having ruined "poor, dear Walter." As for the farmhouse itself, she was quite sure it was a desolate place, with corn and potatoes growing under the very windows, and the road in front filled with plows and pigs and harrows and broken cart wheels. But in the midst of her tears and desolation the driver called out:

"Hazelcopse Farm! Mr. Noah May's! Here's th' 'ouse, ma'am.

A long low gray stone mansion, all garlanded with ivy, its windows bright with geranium blossoms and the scarlet autumn leaves raining down on the velvet-smooth lawn in front. Clara could just see how erroneous had been all her preconceived ideas, when she found herself clasped in the arms of the sweetest and most motherly of old ladies.

"My poor dear!" said old Mrs May, caressingly.

"You are welcome as the sunshine, daughter," said a smiling old gentleman in spectacles.

And Clara was established in the easy chair in front of a great fire of pine logs, and tea was brought in and the two old people cossetted and petted her as if she had been a three-year-old child just recovering from the measles.

There was not a word of reproach—not a questioning look, not a sidelong glance—all welcome, and tenderness and loving commiseration. And when Clara went to sleep that night, with wood fire dancing and glimmering softly over the crimson hangings of the "best chamber," she began to think that perhaps she had been mistaken in some of her ideas.

The next day she had a long, confidential talk with her father-in-law, while Mrs. May was making mince pies in the kitchen.

"But there's one thing I haven't dared to tell Walter about," she said, with tears in her eyes.

"What is that, my dear?" said the old gentleman.

"My dressmaker's bill," said Clara. "It came the night before I left New York—oh, such a dreadful bill. I hadn't any idea it could amount up so fearfully."

"How much was it?" said Mr. Noah May, patting her hand.

"A hundred and fifty dollars," said Clara, hanging down her head.

"Don't fret, my dear, don't fret," said the old gentleman. "Walter need never know anything about it. I'll settle the bill and there shall be an end of the matter."

"Oh, sir, will you really?"

"My dear," said old Mr. May, "I'd do much more than that to buy the color back to your cheeks and the smile to your lips."

And that same afternoon, when Mrs. May had been talking to Clara in the kindest and most motherly way, the girl burst into tears and hid her face on the old lady's shoulder.

"Oh," cried she, "how good you all are! And I had an idea that a father and mother-in-law were such terrible personages! Oh, please, please forgive me for all the wicked things I have thought about you!"

"It was natural enough, my dear," said Mrs. May, smiling, "but you are wiser now and you will not be afraid of us any longer."

When Saturday night arrived Walter May came out to the old farmhouse, dejected and sad at heart. He had discovered that situations do not grow, like blackberries, on every bush; he had met with more than one cruel rebuff, and he was hopelessly discouraged as to the future. Moreover he fully expected to be met with tears and complaints by his wife,

But to his infinite amazement and relief Clara greeted him on the doorstep with radiant smiles.

"Tell me, dear," said she, "have you got a new situation?"

He shook his head sadly.

"I'm glad of it," said Clara brightly, for we've got a place—papa and mamma and I."

"It's all Clara's plan," said old Noah May.

"But it has our hearty approval," added the smiling old lady.

"We're all going to live here together," said Clara. "And you are to manage the farm, because papa says he is getting too old and lazy," with a merry glance at the old gentleman, who stood by beaming on his daughter-in-law, as if he were ready to subscribe to one and all of her opinions, "and I am to keep house and take all the care off mamma's hands. And, oh! it is so pleasant here, and I do love the country so dearly! So if you're willing, dear—"

"Willing!" cried out Walter May, ecstatically, "I'm more than willing. It's the only thing I have always longed for. Good-bye to city walls and hearts of stone; good-bye to hollow appearances and grinding wretchedness! Why, Cara, I shall be the happiest man alive. But—"

"There," said Clara, putting up both hands as if to ward off all possible objections, "I was sure there would be a 'but.'"

"I thought, my dear," said Walter, "that you didn't like the idea of living with your husband's relations."

Clara looked lovingly up into her mother-in-law's sweet old face, while she silently pressed Mr. Noah May's kindly hands.

"I am a deal wiser than I was a week ago," said she. "And, oh, so much happier!"

"So am I!" said Walter.

"Hennery Eggs."

On the front of a retail establishment not far from the Boston public library, is a sign that reads, "Hennery Eggs." This is not the name of the proprietor. No. They don't spell "Henry" with two "n's" and an extra "e" in Boston, you know. It is merely an intimation that eggs of the genuine sort are for sale within. They are not incubator eggs, nor storage eggs, nor eggs for campaign purposes. They are just good old hennery eggs. They're the kind of eggs that you have pawed around in the haymow to find and felt like cackling when you found them. They are hennery eggs with an eloquent accent on the hen. And yet, who knows? All eggs are more or less a mystery. You can't depend on signs. Even a Boston "hennery egg" may not be all it's cracked up to be.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Nerves and Her Hats.

A writer in a medical journal has lately advanced the theory that women's heavy hats are responsible for women's jangling nerves and proverbial quick temper. The popular impression has been that the man who paid for the hats was the one whose temper suffered; but it seems that large hats weigh too heavily upon the fragile feminine cranium and affect the blood vessels and nerves, and through them the brain. Moreover, according to the writer, the effort to keep large and heavy hats at the right angle impose a parlous strain upon the nerves of the wearers. The theory is advanced in all seriousness, but the chances are that it will not induce any normal woman to cut off her hat supply.—New York Sun.

GUESTS AT A LUNCHEON.

Should Arrive Promptly—What to Wear—The Entertainment After the Meal.

The guests at a luncheon should arrive as nearly as possible at the hour appointed on the invitation. The servant should direct the way to the dressing-room, where the guest should leave her wraps.

At the table a woman takes off her gloves and removes or merely pushes back her veil.

The suitable dress for a large and ornate luncheon is one's visiting costume or handsomest afternoon gown.

After the luncheon it is well to have music or to play cards. If music is preferred, the hostess should ask those of her friends who can sing or play extremely well to help her in entertaining her guests, but if professional talent is engaged she must remember that she must not expect anyone who is good enough to sing or play for her to do it free of charge.

If bridge or cards of any kind are played, the hostess must supply a prize for each table, as well as the necessary packs of cards and score cards and pencils.

Before the guests leave, afternoon tea should be served by the hostess or one of her intimate friends. The maid may bring in the tea service on a large silver tray and place it on a small table at the side of the room, or a small afternoon tea table might be arranged beforehand, and at the proper time the maid could light the alcohol lamp under the tea kettle, and bring in the toasted biscuit and sandwiches.

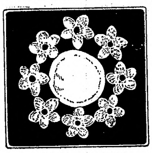
No matter how numerous the company or how engrossed the hostess may be, a guest should always seek her hostess and bid her adieu, thanking her for the hospitality enjoyed.

A VERY HANDSOME MAT.

The Border Is Made of Shaded Pink and White Luster—The Design Is Excellent.

The border of the pretty little mat illustrated, which appeared in the People's Home Journal, is made of shaded pink and white luster cotton.

Make a chain of ten stitches and join into a ring, ch. 1, tight d. c. over the ring, then a loose d. c., a tight treble, a loose treble and a d. d. (thread over three times.) This brings you to the center of the leaf. Now a loose treble, a tight treble, a loose d. c., a tight d. c. an s. c. over the ring. This finishes one leaf.



AN EFFECTIVE DESIGN.

If more leaves are desired, increase two stitches on the chain for each leaf to be added. The mat is about six inches in diameter. Larger ones can be made by adding more flowers.

DAINTY POWDER PUFF.

Make a Case of Flowered Silk and Finish with Ribbon of Color Harmonizing.

A very useful little article to make for the summer holidays is a chamois and silk bag to carry puff and powder.

Cut two circular pieces, one of flowered silk, and one a little smaller of chamois. Turn the edge of the silk over on the chamois baste, and feather stitch it down.

Then run the casing about an inch and a half from the edge, or work a row of eyelets, through which run a ribbon to correspond in color with the flowers in the silk. With the addition of puff and powder this makes a pretty and welcome gift.

Wearing of Rings.

Girls whose hands are not yet fully grown and formed—that is, generally speaking, girls up to 18—should not wear rings. Many a taper finger has had its shape spoiled by a ring which became so gradually tight that the wearer did not notice it until the mischief was done. Pianists or persons who play any instrument seldom wear rings. They think that the weight of the ring lessens the muscular strength of the finger. If a girl thinks she must wear rings, then let her at least take them off each night and rub a moment the part of the finger that has been covered by them. This restores circulation and helps the finger to attain its normal growth.

Doing One's Hair.

"Knack" at doing one's hair will result in a better coiffure than can be made by the hair dresser. There are even few French maids who can do the hair as becomingly as the woman who has once learned the art can do it for herself. By putting thought in it always and doing it carefully every day, whether it is an important occasion or not, a woman will in time acquire the gift of doing her hair well. If the locks are kept in a healthy condition, trimmed and burnished and waved once in a while by the hair dresser, and if they are scrupulously clean and glossy, it is comparatively easy for a woman to achieve a good coiffure for herself.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Cure the Kidneys and the Pain Will Never Return.

Only one way to cure an aching back. Cure the cause, the kidneys. Thousands tell of cures made by Doan's Kidney Pills. John C. Coleman, a prominent merchant of Swainsboro, Ga., says: "For several years my kidneys were affected, and my back ached day and night. I was languid, nervous and lame in the morning. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me right away, and the great relief that followed has been permanent."

Curiosities of the Cactus.

Mexico has a cactus which grows tooth picks; another, ribbed and thickly set with teeth-like spines, which furnish the natives with combs; there is another cactus, the long, curved spines of which resemble fish-hooks; there is another which is an almost perfect imitation of the sea-urchin; still another resembles a porcupine; there is another covered with long red hair which is nick named the "red-headed cactus."

There are several varieties which serve as timepieces. One of these, the Cereus nycticalus, opens its blossoms at 7 o'clock in the evening and closes them at 7 o'clock in the morning; another opens at 8 o'clock and closes at 8 the next morning; another opens at 9 o'clock in the morning and closes at noon.

Office Boys Dabble in Wall Street.

As the pages in the senate sometimes hold an extra session all by themselves, so the office boys in Wall street conduct a lively market at times after the brokers have gone home. They call up a number at random, it is answered by another office, and a conversation something like the following ensues:

"Hello! This is Mr. Jones of Biff, Bang & Bung's. Kindly buy me 14,000,000,000 shares of Amalgamated Copper immediately."

"All right. This is Mr. Smith of Hop, Skip & Jump. But we will need more margin for that. Kindly send us a certified check for $1,000,000,000."

A wordy argument ensues, and the office boys finally hang up their 'phones and go home content with the day's transactions.

His Candidate.

District Attorney Jerome tells of a certain citizen whom he encountered on the last presidential election day. Conversation was somewhat hampered by the fact that the citizens' vocabulary was limited to about eighty-five words. "Who." and "what" were evidently one to him as yet, but he made himself clear on one point.

"How long have you been in this country?" he was asked.

"Ah bane one month," he answered.

"Are you going to vote?"

"Yah."

"Whom are you going to vote for?"

"Ah bane goin' vote for tan dollars," was the self-satisfied response.

One on the Parson.

This is a story which the late Dean Hole was fond of relating. A vicar went to preach for a friend, and in the vestry afterward he said: "I must apologize for the brevity of my sermon, but our fox terrier got into my study last night and ate several pages of my manuscript." At this the wardens giggled, but one of them, bolder than the rest, remarked: "You couldn't let our parson have a pup, could you?"

Neat and Undeniable.

'It is Frank Damrosch who says that what this country needs is more cradle songs."

'Frank should send that bit of epigrammatic grace to President Roosevelt."

KNOWS NOW.

Doctor Was Fooled by His Own Case for a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me, although I had palpitation of the heart every day.

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation except on one or two occasions when I tried a small quantity of coffee which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes which gives it the proper rich flavor and the deep brown color.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients. "There's a reason."

Evolution.

The elderly stranger, revisiting his native town after an absence of thirty-five years, was trying to find out what had become of the companions of his boyhood.

"Is Jack Olin still alive?" he asked.

"I don't know anybody by that name," said the landlord of the hotel.

"Dead and gone, perhaps, or moved away. He lost a hand in a Fourth of July celebration the year before I left here. His father owned the stone quarry just east of town."

"Oh, yes, to be sure; he's still alive. He owns the bank and two or three blocks of buildings, and he's the mayor of the town—but his name is J. Henry O'Lynn now."

Willing to Economize.

"He even promised to leave his club if I marry him."

"Huh! What club?"

"Why, the bachelor club, of course."

TONIC TREATMENT

Weak Stomach and Sick Headache Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The symptoms of stomach trouble vary. Some victims have a ravenous appetite, others loathe the sight of food. Often there is a feeling as of weight on the chest, a full feeling in the throat. Sometimes the gas presses on the heart and leads the sufferer to think he has heart disease. Sick headache is a frequent and distressing symptom.

A weak stomach needs a digestive tonic and that there is no better tonic for this purpose than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is shown by the statement of Mr. A. O. Merrill, a mining man, of Oneals, Calif., a veteran of Battalion O, Third U. S. Regular Infantry.

"I had never been well since I left the army," he says, "always having had trouble with my stomach, which was weak. I was run down and debilitated. Could keep nothing on my stomach, and at times had sick headache so bad that I did not care whether I lived or died. My stomach refused to retain even liquid food and I almost despaired of getting well as I had tried so many kinds of medicine without relief. Then I was bitten by a rattlesnake and that laid me up from work entirely for a year, six months of which I spent in bed.

"One day a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me and I began taking them. They cured me when all other medicine had failed. I have recommended the pills to a great many, for during my recovery every one asked me what was helping me so and I told them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I cannot speak too highly of them."

If you want good health you must have good blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and restore shattered nerves. They are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box, six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Telephoning Herring.

A Berlin paper tells of a new device that makes herring fishing easy. A microphone, which magnifies sounds, is plunged into the sea to ascertain if fish are passing that way. A wire connects the submerged microphone with an ordinary receiver, with which one listens to what is going on in the depths of the sea. Excellent results have been obtained in the North sea by the invention for signaling the passing of the herring shoals.

"Be Pleasant Every Morning Until Ten O'clock; the Rest of the Day Will Take Care of Itself."

This is one of the best little sermons we know. Have you ever stopped to think that the morning is the time when your temper is usually ruffled, and have you ever stopped to think that the cause of bad temper in the morning is nearly always because your stomach has not been working properly during the night? It has contained a lot of indigestible substances that form gas and makes you have dreams. It breaks up your rest and you wake up in the morning tired, instead of refreshed, as nature intended you should.

Our grand sires required no admonition to "Be pleasant every morning until 10 o'clock; the rest of the day will take care of itself," for they digested their food and woke up full of life and energy ready for the day's duties, and this was because they lived on simple foods instead of highly seasoned palatable concoctions, which contain no nourishment. Nature gave us milk, wheat and eggs, and on these foods a person can live indefinitely, but if the milk is skimmed, and if the outside of the wheat is taken off the kernel, and if the lime, the salt, and the iron, which is in the outer part of the wheat berry, if these are all removed, you have simply starch alone; the starch goes into the stomach and becomes sugar.

Do you know that a person would starve to death on plain white bread and water? Do you know that he could live indefinitely on whole wheat bread or on whole wheat food and water? These interesting facts are all set forth in a book called "Back to Nature," which tells about proper living and gives recipes for meals of the simple kind—the kind that makes you strong and well; the kind that makes you "Pleasant every morning until 10 o'clock." This book is published at a great expense, but it is given free to every reader of this paper. It is an advertisement of "EGG-O-SEE," the great food—which is made from whole wheat, which is baked and predigested and is all ready to serve from the package you buy at your grocers. You get more life and energy from a 10-cent package of EGG-O-SEE than you will get from a thousand dollars' worth of white bread. This is no idle claim. It is a scientific fact. We want to tell about this simple food question, so write us and say "Please send me a copy of your book 'Back to Nature,'" and the book will be sent you at once without charge. Address EGG-O-SEE CO., No. 10 First Street, Quincy, Ill.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1628 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Col., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope.

"I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the female organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female ills.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her [illegible] advising sick women free of charge. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

Foiled Again.

The Poet—Congratulate me, my dear; I have just sold a poem.

His Wife—Oh, I am so glad. Now I can have a new bonnet for Easter.

The Poet—I'm awfully sorry to disappoint you, but I bought a celluloid collar with the money.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Nautical Notes.

Mrs. Yacht (superciliously) — My husband has a beautiful yacht. I don't suppose your husband can afford such a luxury yet?

Mrs. Nacht—No, the best he can do is to hold the mortgage on the one your husband has.

Care of Oilcloth.

Oilcloth should never be scrubbed with a stiff brush or washed with strong soap. Remove all dirt by carefully sweeping with a soft hair brush. Then wash until clean with tepid water and Ivory Soap. Rinse with clear water to which has been added a teaspoonful of kerosene. Polish with a dry cloth. ELEANOR R. PARKER.

Rode With Dynamite.

A couple of girls, San Francisco refugees, tell this story of their trip from the [illegible] to the station, where they boarded a train for the East:

"One driver asked us $50," said they. "Of course we couldn't afford to pay that, so we stopped another, the driver of a wagon this time.

"'I've got a load of dynamite here,' said he; 'you can ride on that if you like.'

"And we rode on it," they finished, "and paid him a good price for the privilege, too."

A Family Matter.

"Once upon a time there lived a good man of New York who was soliciting contributions for the erection of an orphan asylum," said the storyteller. "He had been to many rich people and received liberal contributions, which were entered in a book he had for that purpose. Among these many names there appeared 'Mrs. Russell Sage, $25.' The good man went to Mr. Sage's office, and showing him the contribution entered in the book by Mrs. Sage, asked him if he would not give a like sum. And what do you suppose he did?"

"Well, I suppose he at least doubled it," [illegible]

"Doubled it! Not Russell!" exclaimed the teller of the story. "Why, he simply took his pen and wrote 'Mr. and' before his wife's name and handed the book back to the good man."

A WOMAN'S WAY.

BY LARRY FRALICK.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The girl stood on the threshold of life looking forward into its vast vistas through the gold-hued glasses of youth. She was not what would be called a pretty girl, but the gods had endowed her with the divine quality of imagination and ideality. To the unobserving her rather thin, pale and irregular features, surmounted by a wonderful shock of red hair, marked her as distinctly commonplace. The more observing and analytical, who took time to look into her bright, restless, sparkling eyes paused and said: "There's something in that Graceland girl."

It remained for Frederic Walling Hapgood, a man of the world, connoisseur and dilettante, to discover the true worth and vital beauty which lay within her.

It happened at the Springs, where she was taken by her grandmother, with whom she lived—being an orphan, and who regarded Marie simply and wholly as one born to minister to her comfort and convenience. For the first time in her lonesome, narrow, provincial life the girl had an opportunity to see life as she had dreamed it. It was not supposed to be a pleasure trip for her—oh, not at all. Grandma Graceland had heard that the Springs held wonderful curative properties for her rheumatism and straightway had hied herself hither—taking Marie along to as a sort of necessary evil.

But Marie was not a servant in any sense of the word, and nobody would have resented an insinuation to that effect more than her aristocratic old grandmother, who treated her as such in their personal relations, but who would have flayed alive any person without the Graceland family who dared put a slight upon one of "the royal family." And so Marie plunged into the great world and saw it at close range—for the Springs was not exclusively a health resort. More people, perhaps, came for pleasure and recreation than for the curative properties of the waters.

Well, ultimately, Fred Hapgood, tired of all things, came to the Springs for a rest and a change, met this curious damsel—and with the true scent of the thoroughbred detected the great things which lay hidden within her. Where others saw her irregular features he saw the the essential vitality flashing from her eyes. Where others saw her pallid complexion he saw the seductive lines of her lithesome figure. Where others saw her shock of red hair he saw her ardent, imaginative, girlish soul. Her very ignorance and innocence attracted him and it pleased his humor to pay deft and scientific court to this budding bit of femininity.

To her it was as incense sent by the gods. Never had she had court paid her even by the callow youths of the village—she was not the type to attract the average youth and her nature was such as to repel rather than to gain admirers. But when this polished gentleman bowed over her hand and used all the arts of the man of the world she responded with an ardor which nearly carried him off his feet. It was a new experience to him as well as to her, and it interested him more than he supposed it possible to be interested in any woman affair—at his time of life and his stage of experience.

Being so unique an experience, he pursued it the more industriously, and it was not many days before the most ardent love scenes were being enacted in the quiet groves and dells about the Springs.

It was an epoch in her career when one moonlit evening he threw his arms about her and drew her to him with all his strength while his eyes looked down into hers and spoke volumes. Without hesitation she twined her arms about his neck and raised her scarlet lips to his. In the moment of that passionate kiss all her dreams, all her hopes, all the fancies of her imagination were realized—and she passed from girlhood to womanhood.

There were but a few days of this delirious joy for her, however, and then the old, old story was reenacted. Hapgood was called back to the city on business. He went away—and faded from her life. There were a few letters, it is true, but of a most non-committal sort and growing more cold and informal on his part as they grew more infrequent.

At last she understood and then she realized that the great passion of her life had come to her and had passed by. She knew that [illegible] had been the great [illegible] life [illegible] had been to him [illegible] sport. She knew that she had been to him a mere pastime, and, ah the pity of it, she knew that faith in mankind had passed from her life. Now even if the true knight came she could not respond. That which she had all her life wished for the most had eluded her and would never come again. It was a bitter thing, but she fought it out as only great and passionate natures can fight out the tragedies of life.

And so they went their several ways. And the iron entered deeply into her soul and she hungered and thirsted for revenge. For she learned that he had married a woman of great wealth and pursued a life of pleasant and luxurious ease. When she learned it she clinched her thin nervous fingers and swore within her soul that some day, somehow, somewhere she would revenge herself upon him for shattering her ideals and ruining her hopes.

For you see it meant more to her than it did to him. He had still his life and ease and pursued the even tenor of his way. The summer idyll, while most delightful was but an incident. To her it was the catastrophe of her life, the burial of her ideals, the end of her hopes. And she swore upon the altar of her ideals that some day she would make him pay the price for his treachery.

Time passed on and one beautiful fall some ten years later the Girl came again to the Springs. Time does wonderful things. Besides healing the crying hurt of her quivering heart, it had made a very different woman of her. The old grandmother had died a year after her first visit to the Springs, and, marvel of marvels, had left her entire fortune to the insignificant girl who had cared for her so patiently for so many weary years. As possessor of this great fortune she had chosen to travel and to mix with the best and greatest of the earth. From a callow girl she became one of the wisest and most attractive women of the earth. Beyond count were the hearts laid at her feet—but she would have none of them. Her romance had had its day and died. And so she came back to the Springs a most sought-for and self-poised woman of the world.

Now at this time, strange to say, Mr. Frederick Walling Hapgood also appeared at the Springs—this time, however, drawn there wholly for medicinal reasons. Through a series of reverses the great fortune of his wife had been swallowed up and Hapgood, untrained in any money-getting vocation, had been unable to support his wife in even decent comfort. The shame and humiliation had so preyed upon his mind and spirit that he had sickened and was making a last struggle to regain health sufficient to go in and make a fight to establish himself.

All this and much more did Marie learn during the first few days at the Springs. And she laughed in triumph at the spectacle of this man in the very ashes of defeat. At last her revenge was before her and she settled down to enjoy it to the very last sip.

One day she met him, still bravely debonair and handsome, but in his eyes was the mark of the hunted and upon his features was the promise of death. And that night she thought long and prayerfully and her pillow was wet with tears for the first time in many years. On the following day she summoned her lawyer from the city and, despite his protests at her plans, sent him scurrying back with instructions the most imperative ever lawyer had. Presently again appeared Mr. Lawyer with information which disclosed the true inwardness of the Hapgoods' affairs. It then appeared that a sum of money—considerable, it is true, but very small in proportion to the amount involved—would rescue the fortune of Mrs. Hapgood and start them again along the lines of prosperity.

"Go and pay it!" she commanded. "And be certain that no human being except we two knows how it was paid."

"But it will cost half your fortune," exclaimed the lawyer, aghast.

"You heard my orders," replied the Girl wearily. "Good night."

And this finally was her revenge. She had the somber joy of watching the color return to his cheek—which it did when the terrible financial strain was removed, and when he returned to his wife, buoyant and happy, she gave him her hand and wished him Godspeed in all he desired.

She sent him back to the woman he had married never knowing the girl whom he had taught to love him and who loved him still, despite his desertion, had saved him.

This was her revenge.

China Was Not Offended.

Prof. Evans, of Tufts college tells an amusing story of college life.

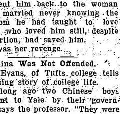
"Not long ago two Chinese boys were sent to Yale by their government," says the professor. "They were bright chaps, and readily adapted themselves to American ways. They cut off their pigtails, wore American clothing, and talked American slang proficiently.

"Among other things, they developed a taste for late hours and questionable companions. They refused to be reprimanded, and did just about as they pleased.

"The faculty, fearing to offend the Chinese government if it expelled the students or punished them in any way, wrote to the Chinese government asking what measures it should take to compel the students' respect for the college rules.

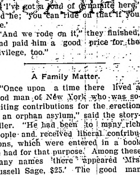
"The dean almost collapsed when he received this reply: 'Put them to death at once.'"

THE DIFFERENCE.



Editor—Yes; that's my idea of a poem.

Poet—No, it's mine. It's yours for two dollars.



Same Old Stump.

Count Doughlass—To make a favorable impression I would smoke every time I called on the American heiress.

Baron Brokem—But didn't you find difficulty in smoking such a strong cigar after smoking stogies?

Count Doughless—No. The difficulty was in putting it out and slipping it in my pocket until the next time I called.

CHILD'S AWFUL SKIN HUMOR.

Screamed With Pain—Suffering Nearly Broke Parent's Heart—Speedily Cured by Cuticura.

"I wish to inform you that the Cuticura Remedies have put a stop to twelve years of misery I passed with my son. As an infant I noticed on his body a red spot, and treated same with different remedies for about five years, but when the spot began to get larger I put him under the care of doctors. Under their treatment the disease spread to four different parts of his body. The longer the doctors treated him the worse it grew. During the day it would get rough and form like scales. At night it would be cracked, inflamed and badly swollen, with terrible burning and itching. When I think of his suffering it nearly breaks my heart. His screams could be heard down stairs. The suffering of my son made me full of misery. I had no ambition to work, to eat, nor could I sleep. One doctor told me that my son's eczema was incurable, and gave it up for a bad job. One evening I saw an article in the paper about the wonderful Cuticura and decided to give it a trial. I tell you that Cuticura Ointment is worth its weight in gold; and when I had used the first box of Ointment there was a great improvement, and by the time I had used the second set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, my child was cured. He is now twelve years old, and his skin is as fine and smooth as silk. Michael Steinman, 7 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 16, 1905."

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1628 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Col., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope.

"I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the female organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female ills.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease has been advising sick women free of charge. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

Rode With Dynamite.

A couple of girls, San Francisco refugees, tell this story of their trip from the city to the station, where they boarded a train for the East:

"One driver asked us $50," said they. "Of course we couldn't afford to pay that, so we stopped another, the driver of a wagon this time.

"'I've got a load of dynamite here,' said he; 'you can ride on that if you like.'"

"And we rode on it," they finished, "and paid him a good price for the privilege, too."

A Family Matter.

"Once upon a time there lived a good man of New York who was soliciting contributions for the erection of an orphan asylum," said the story-teller. [illegible] to many rich people and received liberal contributions [illegible]

A WOMAN'S WAY.

BY LARRY FRALICK.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The girl stood on the threshold of life looking forward into its vast vistas through the gold-hued glasses of youth. She was not what would be called a pretty girl, but the gods had endowed her with the divine quality of imagination and ideality. To the unobserving her rather thin, pale and irregular features, surmounted by a wonderful shock of red hair, marked her as distinctly commonplace. The more observing and analytical—who took time to look into her bright, restless, sparkling eyes paused and said: "There's something in that Graceland girl."

It remained for Frederic Walling Hapgood, a man of the world, connoisseur and dilettante, to discover the true worth and vital beauty which lay within her.

It happened at the Springs, where she was taken by her grandmother, with whom she lived—being an orphan, and who regarded Marie simply and wholly as one born to minister to her comfort and convenience. For the first time in her lonesome, narrow, provincial life the girl had an opportunity to see life as she had dreamed it. It was not supposed to be a pleasure trip for her—oh, not at all. Grandma Graceland had heard that the Springs held wonderful curative properties for her rheumatism and straightway had hied herself hither—taking Marie along to as a sort of necessary evil.

But Marie was not a servant in any sense of the word, and nobody would have resented an insinuation to that effect more than her aristocratic old grandmother, who treated her as such in their personal relations, but who would have flayed alive any person without the Graceland family who dared put a slight upon one of "the royal family." And so Marie plunged into the great world and saw it at close range—for the Springs was not exclusively a health resort. More people, perhaps, came for pleasure and recreation than for the curative properties of the waters.

Well, ultimately, Fred Hapgood, tired of all things and at the Springs for a rest and a change, met this curious damsel—and with the true scent of the thoroughbred detected the great things which lay hidden within her. Where others saw her irregular features he saw the the essential vitality flashing from her eyes. Where others saw her pallid complexion he saw the seductive lines of her lithesome figure. Where others saw her shock of red hair he saw her ardent, imaginative, girlish soul. Her very ignorance and innocence attracted him and it pleased his humor to pay deft and scientific court to this budding bit of femininity.

To her it was as incense sent by the gods. Never had she had court paid her even by the callow youths of the village—she was not the type to attract the average youth and her nature was such as to repel rather than to gain admirers. But when this polished gentleman bowed over her hand and used all the arts of the man of the world she responded with an ardor which nearly carried him off his feet. It was a new experience to him as well as to her, and it interested him more than he supposed it possible to be interested in any woman affair—at his time of life and his stage of experience.

Being so unique an experience, he pursued it the more industriously, and it was not many days before the most ardent love scenes were being enacted in the quiet groves and dells about the Springs.

It was an epoch in her career when one moonlit evening he threw his arms about her and drew her to him with all his strength while his eyes looked down into hers and spoke volumes. Without hesitation she twined her arms about his neck and raised her scarlet lips to his. In the moment of that passionate kiss all her dreams, all her hopes, all the fancies of her imagination were realized—and she passed from girlhood to womanhood.

There were but a few days of this delirious joy for her, however, and then the old, old story was reenacted. Hapgood was called back to the city on business. He went away—and faded from her life. There were a few letters, it is true, but of a most noncommittal sort and growing more [illegible] and [illegible] on his part as they grew more infrequent.

At last she understood and then she realized that the great passion of her life had come to her and had passed by. She knew that while to her it had been the great thing of all her life it had been to him but a holiday sport. She knew that she had been to him a mere pastime, and, ah the pity of it, she knew that faith in mankind had passed from her life. Now even if the true knight came she could not respond. That which she had all her life wished for the most had eluded her and could never come again. It was a bitter thing, but she fought it out as only great and passionate natures can fight out the tragedies of life.

And so they went their several ways. And the iron entered deeply into her soul and she hungered and thirsted for revenge. For she learned that he had married a woman of great wealth and pursued a life of pleasant and luxurious ease. When the girl learned it she clinched her thin nervous fingers and swore within her soul that some day, somehow, somewhere, she would revenge herself upon him for shattering her ideals and ruining her hopes.

For you see it meant more to her than it did to him. He had still his life and ease and pursued the even tenor of his way. The summer idyll, while most delightful was but an incident. To her it was the catastrophe of her life, the burial of her ideals, the end of her hopes. And she swore upon the altar of her ideals that some day she would make him pay the price for his treachery.

Time passed on and one beautiful fall some ten years later the Girl came again to the Springs. Time does wonderful things. Besides healing the crying hurt of her quivering heart, it had made a very different woman of her. The old grandmother had died a year after her first visit to the Springs, and, marvel of marvels, had left her entire fortune to the insignificant girl who had cared for her so patiently for so many weary years. As possessor of this great fortune she had chosen to travel and to mix with the best and greatest of the earth. From a callow girl she became one of the wisest and most attractive women of the earth. Beyond count were the hearts laid at her feet—but she would have none of them. Her romance had had its day and died. And so she came back to the Springs a most sought-for and self-poised woman of the world.

Now at this time, strange to say, Mr. Frederick Walling Hapgood also appeared at the Springs—this time, however, drawn there wholly for medicinal reasons. Through a series of reverses the great fortune of his wife had been swallowed up and Hapgood, untrained in any money-getting vocation, had been unable to support his wife in even decent comfort. The shame and humiliation had so preyed upon his mind and spirit that he had sickened and was making a last struggle to regain health sufficient to go in and make a fight to establish himself.

All this and much more did Marie learn during the first few days at the Springs. And she laughed in triumph at the spectacle of this man in the very ashes of defeat. At last her revenge was before her and she settled down to enjoy it to the very last sip.

One day she met him, still bravely debonair and handsome, but in his eyes was the mark of the hunted and upon his features was the promise of death. And that night she thought long and prayerfully and her pillow was wet with tears for the first time in many years. On the following day she summoned her lawyer from the city and, despite his protests at her plans, sent him scurrying back with instructions the most imperative ever lawyer had. Presently again appeared Mr. Lawyer with information which disclosed the true inwardness of the Hapgoods' affairs. It then appeared that a sum of money—considerable, it is true, but very small in proportion to the amount involved—would rescue the fortune of Mrs. Hapgood and start them again along the lines of prosperity.

"Go and pay it!" she commanded. "And be certain that no human being except we two knows how it was paid."

"But it will cost half your fortune," exclaimed the lawyer, aghast.

"You heard my orders," replied the Girl wearily. "Good night."

And this finally was her revenge. She had the somber joy of watching the color return to his cheek—which it did when the terrible financial strain was removed, and when he returned to his wife, buoyant and happy, she gave him her hand and wished him Godspeed in all he desired.

She sent him back to the woman he had married never knowing the girl whom he had taught to love him and who loved him still, despite his desertion, had saved him.

This was her revenge.

China Was Not Offended.

Prof. Evans, of Tufts college tells an amusing story of college life.

"Not long ago two Chinese boys were sent to Yale by their government," says the professor. "They were bright chaps, and readily adapted themselves to American ways. They cut off their pigtails, wore American clothing, and talked American slang proficiently.

"Among other things they developed a taste for [illegible] and [illegible] companions. They refused [illegible] the reprimanded, and did [illegible] as they pleased.

"The faculty, [illegible] the Chinese government [illegible] it expelled the students or punished them in any way, wrote to the Chinese government asking what measures it should take to compel the students' respect for the college rules.

"The dean almost collapsed when he received this reply: 'Put them to death at once.'"

IN PIONEER DAYS

Aug. 2, 1883.

We understand that a new postoffice will soon be established in Rouxville, five miles west of Red Lake Falls. Mr. Roux is making a success of the lime business there, besides having a magnificent crop of No. 1 hard.

The unterrified democracy of Red Lake Falls assembled in caucus at Kretzschmar's hall on Friday evening, July 21, at 7:30, and organized by the election of A. A. Ledeboer as chairman, and J. M. Boyle as secretary. After the usual preliminary business, Messrs. James Phelen and J. C. O'Brien were chosen delegates to the Democratic County Convention. On motion the following gentlemen were chosen as town committee for the ensuing year: F. J. Detling, Chas. Laugevin and Wm. Smith, sr. Caucus then adjourned.

Aug. 9, 1883.

The new stage and mail line, between Crookston and Red Lake Falls commenced its regular trips last Wednesday with first class teams and vehicles.

During Mr. Kretzschmar's absence the brick work on his dwelling is being pushed as fast as possible, and will probably be completed before his return.

Aug. 30, 1883.

Twenty five bushels an acre, No. 1 hard is the yield many fields will show this season in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls. We have seen several fields that will be hard to beat anywhere.

During early mass at St. Joseph's church on Sunday the crowd was greater than the church would hold, a large number of Indians were in for the occasion, and were by no means the least devout among the number.

Sept. 13, 1883.

Large numbers of Indians have been in town lately, bringing in snake root and replenishing their supplies. They are doing good business just now. Some of their out fits show that they are well-to-do, having good wagons with good cattle, camp outfits, etc.

Mr. Steinert finished siding and shingling his house near the "B. & C." mill last week.

Sept. 27, 1883.

Anton Kaus, an old experienced miller from Parkdale, Minn., and his son Henry Kans, are visiting Mr. John Walthers, and looking over the milling prospects of Red Lake Falls with an eye to chances for investment.

John Dyer, living four miles south of town near Badger Creek, killed a fine fat bear cub Monday, that dressed one hundred and seventy-five pounds, and brought the meat to Langevin's.

Oct. 4, 1883.

Adam Zeh is the coming lawyer, at least he is the first law student in Red Lake Falls. He has entered the office of J. M. Boyle, and by the time Red Lake Falls is a city of 10,000 inhabitants, will probably be saying, "may it please the court, my client—." We wish him success.

Rev. Fr. Champagne left this morning for Red Lake Agency where he will remain until next week. He will celebrate mass at the mission church and otherwise labor among the Indians during his stay. On the 14th he will celebrate mass for the last time at the chapel of Our Lady of Lourdes, after that date the mission will be in charge of Rev. Fr. Dugal, of Terrebonne.

THE INJUNCTION WILL STICK

FOR MARKET DAY

Red Lake Falls is Preparing to Hold a Monthly Market Day for the Farmers---July 21 Will Be the Beginning.

Preparations are under way to have a monthly market day in Red Lake Falls for the benefit of the farmers. Such institutions have been tried in other towns and with such success as to make them a permanent feature. This city will attempt one at least and will try to do things on a liberal scale. Saturday, July 21, has been set for the first one.

Plans as yet are very immature but an outline of what will be attempted can be given. A number of prizes will be offered by the different merchants such, for instance, one for the farmer coming the greatest distance; another for the farmer bringing the largest family to town; another for the youngest married couple; another for the oldest married couple; and so on, perhaps eight or ten prizes. The different merchants will probably each have a special sale on one particular article from their stores, no two conflicting.

For the entertainment of those coming to town a program of some sort will be carried out. It has been suggested that a complimentary dinner be given as was done at the dairy meeting last week, tickets to be issued good at any of the hotels in the city. The band will be asked to give an open air concert. A ball game can be arranged for and some other attractions in the way of street attractions can easily be procured.

It can be made into the nature of a holiday and yet be one of entire profit as well as pleasure to all who come.

THE JUNE SETTLEMENT

County Treasurer Hanson Has Large Sum for Distribution.

County Treasurer Hansen has completed the June settlement of taxes and has for distribution the tidy sum of $60,705.15. It is the largest distribution ever made in Red Lake county.

The receipts of the treasurer's office have been unusual this year. Something over $15,000 more in taxes has been collected this year than last and on May 31, the last day for the payment of the second installment, $34,581.69 was taken in. It is estimated that fully 70 per cent of all taxes has been paid at the present time.

FIREMEN OFF FOR THE TOURNAMENT

Accompanied by Band Which Was Sent for Advertising Purposes—Citizens Go Too.

It was a gay party that left this city yesterday about six o'clock in the morning on a special train over the Great Northern for Warren.

On board the train was the Red Lake Falls fire department, 30 strong and looking fine and dandy in their new uniforms. They were accompanied by the band with 25 pieces, and a number of citizens were among the passengers. All were decorated with badges of various hues reading "Red Lake Falls 1907." The sides of the coaches were also decorated with huge banners with "Red Lake Falls" printed on them. With the crowd was a liberal supply of advertising matter as a determined effort will be made to capture the tournament for next year and with every prospect of getting it.

The firemen were all confident of carrying off a number of the liberal prizes which Warren has hung up and there will be little surprise if they win them all.

IT WILL BE A SPEAKERS' DAY

Modern Woodmen Picnic at Crookston a Gathering Place for Big Speakers.

Gov. Johnson, Reilly, Smith, Whalen and Van Sant Will Deliver Addresses.

From Saturday Evening's Journal: This morning the magnates of the Modern Woodmen Picnic which will be pulled off in Crookston the twelth of July next were overjoyed to receive the personal acceptance of the invitation of George W. Reilly of Danville, Illinois, to speak at the picnic and personally take a part in the occasion which will inevitably be attended by a large and happy crowd. This completes one of the most imposing array of speakers that have ever spoken in the northwest. Governor Johnson has also denoted his acceptance of the invitation to speak here. He will be returning from Roseau where he will delivers an address the day before and will arrive here in the evening.

With Governor Johnson will come former Governor Van Sant and R. R. Smith high in the oratory of lodge circles. As given out last night Supreme lecturer Whalen will also attend, making a complete battery of five individual speakers, the most talented and diversified talkers that have ever met together in the northwest.

With the speeches will be combined every means of enjoyment and today active preparations were started for the large number of people that will be here and every move will be made that can place them at their ease and render their accomodations assured.

IT WAS A GOOD MEETING

Farmers Interested in Dairying Gather in Force Friday.

The dairy meeting held in this city last Friday was a very successful affair from both a standpoint of attendance and profit to those present.

To begin with a complimentary dinner was furnished to all farmers attending and about 110 were given dinners at the different hotels. After dinner they were entertained by the Silver Minstrel company and from one to two o'clock the Red Lake Falls band gave a most excellent concert program. At two o'clock a meeting was held at the court house State Commissioner Slater, who was advertised to speak failed to appear as he was taken sick at Crookston the day before and was compelled to return to St. Paul. However State Dairy Inspector Winkjer was present and delivered a most interesting talk. He is an enthusiast on the subject of creameries and their inseparable association with dairying. It was an instructive discourse and the city's guests seemed pleased with it and the day as a whole.

The Nickel Plate Road

will sell special summer tourist tickets to Canadian and New England points, at one fare plus two dollars for fifteen day limit, from Chicago, and one fare plus four dollars for thirty day limit, from Chicago. Information given upon application to city ticket office, 107 Adams st., Chicago. 36

NO ELECTION YET

Judge Watts Decides County Auditor Ford Has Been Properly Injoined from Calling an Election.

> Thief River Falls News: Attorney E. M. Stanton has secured an order from Judge Watts to show cause why the restraining order prohibiting County Auditor Ford from calling the election in the county seat matter should not be dissolved. The hearing upon the matter has been set at Crookston before Judge Watts upon Saturday of this week. As to the outcome in the case there can be no doubt, but the election will be delayed for a short time.
>
> The injunction restraining the auditor from calling the election is the last one that the Red Lake Falls people can serve and, after this injunction is dissolved, /a vote will have to be taken. Thus far the Red Lake Falls attorneys have not won a single legal point—and it is not likely that they ever will.

Carry the news to Thief River Falls.

The Thief River Falls attorneys withdrew their motion to dissolve the injunction. They saw their finish.

A brief history of the case may not be amiss. On June 12 the county commissioners in session in this city decided by a vote of 3 to 2 that the petition for removal of the county seat from Red Lake Falls to Thief River contained enough signatures to warrant the calling of a special election of the voters of the county to vote on the removal. The next step in order was for the county auditor to issue an official call for such election but an injunction was served upon him restraining him from issuing a call. Then the Thief River Falls attorneys—five of them—got an order to show cause from Judge Watts of the district court why the injunction should not be dissolved.. It was called for hearing at Crookston and, after some sparring by the attorneys, was adjourned until Monday evening. All the parties were there at that time, Red Lake Falls represented by her two attorneys—same old two—C. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady. Then followed a legal battle, an exact report of which is unessential to the story by reason of its technique. However, before Judge Watts could get an opportunity to decide the case, Mr. Stanton, for Thief River Falls, saw which way the wind was setting, and asked leave to withdraw the motion to dissolve. It was granted. His remarks at the time indicated that he was grievously disappointed—probably not so much so as his clients are now—and is alleged to have indulged in some little abuse of certain county officials and Red Lake Falls people in general. But the great object of the Thief River Falls quest had failed lamentably and ignominously.

Carry the news to Thief River Falls.

Their attorneys withdraw the motion to dissolve the injunction before the court had a chance to tell them it was 23 for them.

In the meantime the county auditor stands injoined from calling any election.

WILL GO TO ST. HILAIRE

C. L. Hanson Purchases Interest in Merchants State Bank.

C. L. Hanson has purchased a controling interest in the Merchants State bank at St. Hilaire and will leave shortly to assume the management. A meeting of the directors of the St. Hilaire institution will be held this week and Mr. Hanson's official position in the bank's directory will then be determined. The controling interest has heretofore been held by L. C. Simons and C. N. Bourdon of this city. They have disposed of all that interest to Mr. Hanson and Mr. Bourdon has purchased Mr. Hanson's stock in the First State bank.

Mr. Hanson has been the assistant cashier at the First State bank of this city since last September. He is a young man of careful business ability and will undoubtedly make a success of the St. Hilaire bank. Red Lake Falls will regret his departure.

Bridge Closed.

The county bridge over the Clearwater river between sections 19 and 30 in the town of Emardville will be closed to travel beginning Friday June 29 as the same is unsafe.

WORD FROM TOURNAMENT

Red Lake Falls Gets the Tournament in 1907.

Messages from Warren as to the outcome of our team in the races up to the time of going to press were incomplete. Tho' nothing reliable can be said it is understood that our team landed the prize for the greatest number of men in line, Hallock winning for best appearance.

In the association and banner race and coupling contest Bemidji is said to have won first. There is second and third money in both of these races but we were unable to learn which team won either.

In the 100-yard dash, Hallock won first money and Warren second. There was some disappointment here as to that as Brady was expected to land that prize.

The business meeting held last evening decided the tournament for Red Lake Falls in 1907.

Appoint Engineer and Viewers

The county commissioners held a meeting Tuesday morning with Commissioners Shaw, Demann and Johnson present.

The matter of the petition of Loren Hansen and others for a county ditch in the town of Emardville, known as county ditch number 26, was taken up for consideration and J. K. Wood was appointed as engineer for the work of survey. A board of viewers was also appointed consisting of Joseph Belair, James Evenson and P. K. Johnson.

No other business coming before the meeting the board adjourned. The next meeting will be July 12.

Engineer Operates Switch.

The engineer has a new duty. A new type of switch has been devised which puts its control in the hands of the engineer. In this switch the point pieces move in a vertical direction instead of horizontally. This means that bolts, nuts, coal, cinders, and other materials cannot drop to obstruct the operation or proper closing of the switch points, as sometimes accidentally happens to ordinary point rails. The wheel flanges automatically operate the switch, regardless of the engineer, when trains are passing over it, trailing on either the main line or side track, but when coming from the opposite direction, or facing the switch, the engineer controls its action, there being incline plane trips in advance of the switch on the outside of either rail where the flange does not come in contact. To operate these outside movable flanges attached to the front wheels of the engine truck are connected by lever with the engine cab, where the engineer or fireman can control the switch at will, as in emergency.

Saratoga Chips.

Wash and pare medium sized potataes, slice very thin (I use a slaw cutter for slicing), drop them into cold water as they are cut and let them remain there until they are very firm. Have a kettle on the stove about half full of lard. Lift potatoes out of the cold water and put into a clean, white cloth. Press them in this until they are quite dry; then drop them into the smoking hot lard. Let them fry a delicate brown. When done lift them out with a wire spoon. Sift salt over them as soon as they are taken out, while warm. To have them at their best, they should be used when first made. Damp weather will affect their crispness.

To Save Table Cloths.

A friend with a large family used to be much disturbed over the frequency with which she had to renew her table linen, and especially the tablecloths. At last she hit this plan: When she buys her linen, she sees to it that it is wider than necessary, and also a few inches longer. Then when the edges show the slightest indication of wear, she immediately takes off a strip from one side, four or six inches wide, and a strip from the end. This of course throws the wear upon a different place, and her cloth lasts just as long again. Isn't it well worth trying?

Sensible Housewife.

"One of my best friends," says a writer, "who, with six young children and only one servant, keeps a spotless house and a soul serene, told me once how she did it. 'My dear, once a month I give away everything in the house that we do not imperatively need. It sounds wasteful, but I don't believe it really is. Sometimes Jeremiah mourns over missing old clothes, or back numbers of the magazines, but I tell him if he doesn't want to be mated to a gibbering maniac he will let me do as I like.'"

Children's Everyday Clothes.

For everyday wear, children are wearing linen dresses, and linen of the most durable nature. The material comes this season in practically a never-wear-out grade, and some of the prettiest of everyday dresses are made out of it. Embroidered bands are ever so fashionable this season and the embroidery is done in white or in colors, both being fashionable.

Peppers Stuffed with Cold Ham.

Use six large green peppers. Scrape out clean and fill them with a mixture of one cup of minced ham, one cup of breadcrumbs and one tablespoonful of butter. Put into a baking dish with a half pint of strained tomatoes seasoned with salt and pepper and a tablespoonful of sugar. Bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Really Observing.

"Where yeou going, Hiram?" asked the old lady on the train.

"Up in the 'observation car,'" replied her husband, with a grin.

"Why, the observation car is on behind."

"No, it ain't; it's up front. Thar's four honeymoon couples up thar."—Chicago Daily News.

Peanut Butter.

Peanut butter is easily made at home by passing the roasted and shelled nuts several times through the finest knives of a patent food grinder, the oil in the nut being quite sufficient to make the butter creamy. Should more be needed, add a little pure olive oil. Salt to taste and pack in small jars.

Keeping from Close Range.

"Why are you not at school?" sternly inquired the parent, meeting his son in the street.

The lad was not much embarrassed "Fact is, dad," he responded, "there's something the matter with the teacher's temper, and I'm giving it absent treatment!"—Modern Society.

Varying Conditions.

"What sort of a man is Jinks?"

"The impression you get of Jinks depends on the circumstances under which you meet him. If you're there to collect money, you won't like him; but if you're there to pay money he seems a lovely character."—Washington Star.

HAAKON VII. NOW WEARS THE CROWN

CORONATION TAKES PLACE WITH MUCH POMP AT THE ANCIENT NORSE CAPITAL.

IS SOLEMN AND IMPRESSIVE

BRILLIANT COMPANY SEES INVESTITURE OF YOUTHFUL SOVEREIGNS.

Trondhjem, June 24.—With noble ceremony King Haakon VII. and Queen Maud yesterday were invested with the crowns or Norway. The time, the circumstances and memory gave the occasion a peculiar solemnity that produced an impressive tone throughout the proceedings.

Scarcely a sound broke the silence of the morning until the bells announced to the waiting assemblage that the royal family had left the palace and were proceeding to the cathedral. Already the ancient edifice, lighted by festoons of electric globes that were dim in the pale daylight, was thronged with a brilliant company.

Distinguished Assembly.

Representative Norwegians, visiting princes and princesses, noblemen, diplomats and distinguished foreigners and officers of the armies and navies of the world occupied places on the front benches.

At exactly 11 o'clock the members of the cabinet, in company with leading clergymen from all parts of Norway, with the officiating bishops, marched down the long aisle of the church to await the king and queen in the pavilion at the entrance. Ten minutes later, while a shaft of light shot through the cathedral as the great portal was thrown open, the organ, with a crash of melody, began to pour forth the weird strains of the national anthem.

King and Queen Enter.

The vast audience rose to receive standing the youthful sovereigns who marched slowly down the long nave under the red and gold of the imperial banner. After the sovereigns had taken their places upon the dais the clergy, in white robes, disposed themselves in a semi-circle around the altar. The music ceased and the bishop of Trondhjem arose and read the first lines of a hymn, the import of which was:

"In the name of Jesus all things must be done."

Sing Weird Melody.

Led by the organ, orchestra and chorus, the audience sang a melody that might have been written for a sacrificial rite of the Norsemen's ancient barbaric faith. The king, with a printed program in his hand, joined in the singing. After the recitation of the confession and Te Deum, the bishop of Christiania mounted the pulpit facing the king and delivered an impressive sermon, through which ran a clear note of courage and happiness.

After the service a part of the cantata was rendered. Then King Haakon, preceded by the chief of the royal household, walked to the throne.

King Is Crowned.

During the investiture the silence of the spectators was accentuated by soft music from the organ. After anointment and prayer the crown was placed on the head of the king by Premier Michelsen. An impressive pause ensued, during which one felt the strangeness of the contrast between the young, elected monarch and the gray-bearded statesman who might have made himself a republic's president.

As King Haakon walked down the long aisle to the dais, wearing the crown and carrying the scepter orb, women wept and men looked strangely moved.

Ceremony Is Repeated.

Once more the orchestra and chorus broke into music, expressing invitation and welcome, and Queen Maud, accompanied by one lady in waiting and three maids of honor, advanced with slightly hesitating steps toward the throne. The crowning ceremony having been repeated, Queen Maud returned to her seat, bowing to the people on either side. Then the white-haired bishop of Bergen announced the benediction and the president of the storthing, standing on the steps of the throne, proclaimed the completion of the cedemony.

Noted Americans Present.

Besides the special embassy from the United States and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bryan, the Americans present included Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Eddy and Miss Eddy of Chicago, William Wheatley and wife, Mrs. E. Hope Slater and Miss Gwynn of Washington and the Norwegian-American delegation.

King Haakon presented Special Ambassador Graves and Mrs. Graves with silver medals struck in honor of the coronation.

At the state dinner at the palace last night there were 350 guests, including the visiting princes and princesses and members of the special embassies and delegations.

The condemned man until he stood under the drop faced death in the same stolid manner in which he has conducted himself since his arrest. When he stepped on the scaffold, however, much of his courage failed him. Just before the cap was drawn over his face he attempted to utter a prayer, but, although his lips moved convulsively, his voice would not respond, and he was not able to utter a sound. It was evident that he was on the verge of a complete collapse, and the sheriff hastened the last details as much as possible in order to avoid such a contingency.

Ivens was executed for the murder of Mrs. Bessie Hollister, the wife of Franklin C. Hollister, the head of the large printing establishment of Hollister Bros. The crime, which was committed on the evening of Jan. 12 of this year, was one of the most revolting in the police history of Chicago.

"Without wishing to try my case in the newspapers, I can suggest with propriety, I believe, that unless there were something of a foundation to my story, I would not have been hounded, threatened and 'jobbed' as I was in 1903 and later.

"I expect that some attempt will be made to throttle me. But here in my old home, among friends of my childhood, I feel safe and do not think any 'job' can be successfully worked on me.

"I have two friends who have knowledge of the location of the man who performed the ceremony," she said, "and when I need him to testify as to what occurred in Suite 158 at a certain Fifth avenue hotel I think he will appear. That is, unless some great influence manages to suppress him."

The house adjourned without transacting any business, out of respect to the memory of Mr. Lester.

Tuesday.

Washington, June 20.—With practical unanimity the house yesterday adopted the substitute for the Beveridge amendment to the agricultural appropriation relating to meat inspection, the objectionable feature of former amendments being eliminated and the amendment perfected to meet the wishes of the president. An effort was made to extend the time of debate, but Mr. Wadsworth, chairman of the committee on agriculture, desiring to get the bill into conference as soon as possible, objected to the granting of additional time, although nearly an hour was consumed in the explanation and debate upon the measure. After the adoption of the amendment the bill was sent to conference, the conferees being Mr. Wadsworth, Mr. Scott (Kan.) and Mr. Lamb (Va.).

Immediately after the disposition of the agricultural appropriation bill, bills under suspension of the rules were passed. Among the more important were the bill in relation to the immunity of witnesses in government cases; to establish the standard of value, and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine islands and granting the right to the city of St. Louis to erect a free bridge across the Mississippi river at that point.

Senator Knox addressed the senate at length yesterday in support of the lock type of the Panama canal.

Thursday.

Washington, June 22.—An understanding was reached by the conferees on the railroad rate bill last night which, it is predicted, will result in a complete agreement being reported to-day. The conferees will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning to draw up the agreement. It is the present purpose to have it presented to the house to-day that it may be printed in the Record, as required by the rules, that it may be called up for action Saturday.

There are yet three points which will receive discussion in the morning, but even on these the conferees know the position of their number so well that the result may be predicted with reasonable certainty.

Friday.

Washington, June 23.—The opposition to the committee amendment to the sundry civil bill appropriating $25,000 annually for the payment of the traveling expenses of the president which was begun by Senator McLaurin, resulted yesterday in the withdrawal of the amendment by Senator Hale, in charge of the bill, and the subsequent passage of the independent bill, providing practically for the same appropriation which was recently passed by the house of representatives.

Considerable other business was transacted, including the passage of the sundry civil appropriation bill. The bill as passed carries an appropriation of about $102,400,000. The bill also retains the house provision for a lock canal at Panama.

Pure food held the attention of the house throughout yesterday. The constitutional features of the pure food bill were debated by the leading lawyers of the house.

Held Up and Murdered.

Cordell, Okla., June 24.—James Locke and John Wallace, farmers, were held up and murdered on the road between Foss and Arapahoe yesterday. The man who is alleged to have committed the crime is under arrest. He is thought to be insane.

Lightning Starts Big Fire.

Reading, Pa., June 24.—Lightning last night set fire to the Prospect Dye works of this city, and the entire plant was destroyed. The loss is estimated

POLICE CAUSED THE MASSACRE

ATTITUDE OF GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBLE FOR OUTBREAK AT BIALYSTOK.

St. Petersburg, June 24.—At a crowded meeting of the Constitutional club last night Deputy Stchepkin reported the findings of the committee of the lower house which went to Bialystok to investigate the anti-Jewish outbreak there. According to this report, the police, with the aid of subordinate officers of the police and military, caused the outbreak by circulating false rumors against the Jews. The governor of Bialystok, though not directly responsible, was said by M. Stchepkin to have been undoubtedly criminally guilty of prolonging the excesses by abandoning his post. The governor washed his hands of the affair, not knowing the attitude of the officials at St. Petersburg. The local police assumed that the Goremykin ministry, which had printed Black Hundred circulars, would not punish those who participated in the outbreak. It is the two-faced attitude of the government, M. Stchepkin asserted, which was principally responsible. In concluding the report says:

"The ministry must be changed and one must be chosen from the majority in parliament, or otherwise Russia will fall to the level of Persia and Turkey and ultimately come under the tutorship of a really civilized government."

ONE CHANCE IN FOUR FOR LAND.

Crow Reservation Registration May Reach 16,000.

Billings, Mont., June 24.—Exceptionally large delegations came in yesterday from the West and the Burlington train from the East was also heavily laden with homeseekers. Yesterday's registration numbered 849, and the total registration in Billings aggregated 6,506.

Five days yet remain of the registration period and the land office officials now estimate that the total registration for this city will be between 11,000 and 12,000, according to the present rate. The registration for the three places probably will be about 16,000. This will mean that the prospective seeker has something like one chance in ten of securing a farm susceptible to irrigation, and he will have about one chance in four of drawing a claim of any kind.

PURE FOOD LAW IS UPHELD.

Supreme Court Affirms Decision in Test Case.

St. Paul, June 24.—Minnesota's pure food law was upheld in part by the supreme court yesterday in the opinion handed down in the case of the State of Minnesota against V. A. Tetu. Tetu was fined $20 in test proceedings brought by the manufacturers of an evaporated milk. The product was labeled evaporated cream in large letters, but in small print it was stated that the product was nothing but prepared milk. It was held that the label constituted a fraud, and the product was condemned by the state dairy and food department. The supreme court sustains the conviction of the defendant.

PUT PRICE ON TRACTION LINE.

Chicago Companies Will Sell for Close to Fifty Millions.

Chicago, June 24.—The traction companies have given the council committee on local transportation the figures at which they would agree to sell to the city their present tangible properties. The figures are:

Chicago City Railway company, $20,103,935; Union Traction company, $27,401,218; total, $47,505,153.

Mayor Dunne at once declared the figures to be "grossly excessive," and the committee referred them to two experts for analysis and a report.

Longworths Start for Germany.

London, June 24.—Congressmen and Mrs. Longworth left London for Kiel yesterday. Ambassador Reid, Mrs. Reid, the full staff of the American embassy and many other friends gathered at the station to bid them farewell.

Electrocuted in Her Home.

Kaukauna, Wis., June 24.—Mrs. Noble Watson was electrocuted in the basement of her home yesterday. While inspecting an incubator she grasped an electric light wire and her body to her waist and her arms were badly burned.

Blast Kills Two Men.

Butte, Mont., June 24.—Foreman G. Hancock and John Louman were killed, and W. C. Whitman and Swan Ylinen were seriously injured by an explosion of dynamite in the bottom of the shaft of the Six O'clock mine yesterday.

Want Maneuvers in Montana.

Helena, Mont., June 24.—The Montana delegation in congress is seeking to have Fort Assinniboine selected for next year's annual military maneuvers. The military reservation is large and well adapted for that purpose. The war department is said to favor its selection.

Fire at Seaside Resort.

Santa Cruz, Cal., June 24.—The main building of the Casino at the seaside resort was destroyed by fire early yesterday. Loss $144,000.

IN MINNESOTA.

State News of the Week Briefly Told.

The state summer school opened at Mankato with a large attendance, and with President C. H. Cooper as conductor.

B. F. Brown of Bagley has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Robert Ecker, court commissioner.

Flag Day was appropriately observed in Detroit by the old soldiers and settlers of Becker county, who had a picnic at the lake.

Albert Runge, aged forty years, who had a family at Madison, was struck by a freight train at Hixon, and probably fatally injured.

The Faribault county old settlers' meeting, held in Winnebago, was a grand success. The address was made by Judge Vance of Blue Earth.

By a fall of ore in the Webb mine, near Hibbing, Louis Kililander, aged forty, and Albin Beile, aged twenty-two, both Austrians, were smothered to death.

Pailful of poison placed on a stove in a tinshop at Red Wing exploded. The walls and ceiling were shattered by the force of the explosion but nobody was injured.

Joe Smith, coal dock tender at Iron Mountain, while on duty, fell from the dock and was instantly killed. The body was picked up by the crew of a train of empty cars.

Fire caused by a gasoline stove destroyed the two-story frame building at Belle Plaine, occupied by Mrs. Sisterman as a millinery store and residence. Loss, $800.

Capt. F. G. Wilcox has resigned his position with Company D, Third regiment, M. N. G., stationed at Zumbrota. His successor will be elected before the company goes into camp.

John Benz, an unmarried man twenty-four years old, was drowned while bathing in the Mississippi opposite Winona. This is the first drowning here since the bathing season opened.

Kust Jaloean, a Finlander, has instituted a $30,000 damage case at Two Harbors against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company on account of personal injuries which he says he received.

Edward Lozo, a young man employed as a brakeman at the Wacootah mine, near Virginia, was perhaps fatally injured while coupling cars. He was caught between the bumpers.

While working on a steam shovel for the Milwlaukee road, a few miles above Wabasha, Edward Mason, an old citizen of Wabasha, was caught by a caving bank and instantly killed.

James Rock, employed as a teamster at Frank Kane's lumber camp, fifteen miles north of Good Harbors, was killed by being struck on the head by a limb of a falling pine tree.

The general merchandise store of Sjoberg & Billings at Bock, five miles east of Milaca, was robbed. The burglars secured $22 cash and some merchandise. There is no clue to the thieves.

Rosa Casper, aged eighteen, residing near Brewster, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. She was to have been married soon and was apparently happy, and no reason can be assigned for her act.

A. P. Epp of Mountain Lake, aged twenty, has been drowned in the Des Moines river at Windom. He and other boys went to the river to take a bath immediately after getting into the water and disappeared.

At a meeting of citizens at Lyle, it was decided to celebrate the Fourth this year. One thousand dollars will be expended, and no pains spared to make this the greatest celebration held in southern Minnesota.

Joseph Sadek, who owns a farm on the banks of Lake Greenleaf, near Montgomery, has turned a portion of it into a park, built a large pavilion and placed several good boats on the lake in which there is an abundance of fish.

General Gustaf Widell of Mankato has forwarded his resignation as a member of Governor Johnson's military staff. His purpose in doing so is to place himself in a position to take the field in behalf of the entire Republican state ticket.

One of the incidents marking the passing of the lumber industry in northern Minnesota is the announced intention to dismantle and ship away the big lumber mill at Milaca, belonging to the Foley-Bean company. The mill is to be taken to Georgia, where it will be set up and started to sawing timber which the firm has acquired in that state. The mill has sawed a large amount of lumber and has given employment to many men. The company's holdings of pine in this state having been exhausted, however, nothing remained but to move. The mill will continue to run until about the first week in August.

There is an unusually heavy movement in Steele county real estate. The transfers of the past week show $97,543 worth of property to have been transferred. The values in this county were never so high, but notwithstanding there seems to be every indication that the value of farm lands is still to increase materially in the next few years.

Four swarms of bees have taken up their abode in the residence of M. B. Harrison, a farmer residing in Selton township near Comfrey. The bees secured entrance underneath the cornice.

DAIRYMEN MAKE HIGH SCORES.

Results of First Butter and Cheese Contests at College of Agriculture.

The results of the first butter and cheese scoring contest conducted at the dairy school of the University of Wisconsin, just announced, are as follows:

Butter—First, Fred C. Anderson, Somers, 98; second, August N. Hein, Waukesha, 97.5; third, B. C. Shelton, Haugan, 97.

Cheese—First, O. F. Greunke, Clintonville, 99; second, Ed Klamerton, Fredonia, 98.5; third, H. H. Mueller, Sheboygan Falls, 94.6.

The 131 tubs of butter received averaged a score of 93.6, which indicates not only a widespread interest among buttermakers of the state in the contest, but also a very creditably high grade for all the butter submitted. There were forty-two entries in the different classes of cheeses.

The prize winners for the second cheese contest, in which sixty cheeses were submitted for the test, are as follows: First, O. F. Greunke, Clintonville, 99; second, H. A. Kalk, Plymout, 98.5; third, W. O. Stanton, Ostburg, 98.

In the second scoring, the contest now in progress, 137 entries have been received, in which the following awards were made: First, the Dee Town Creamery, C. J. Dock manager, 97.5; second, J. C. Weber, Fond du Lac, 97; third, A. G. Wileman, Milton Junction, 96.5

SURVEY TRACTION ROUTE.

Engineers Are Near End of Task on the Range.

Engineers who are at work surveying for the proposed electric line to connect Hibbing with Chisholm are expected to finish their work in a few days and then the acquirement of the right-of-way and actual construction will begin at once. The promoters say that an effort will be made to complete the line from Hibbing to Chisholm this fall.

The company building the line is the Northern Traction company, which has been granted a franchise to construct a street railway line in Hibbing. The company has not yet accepted the terms of the franchise and has been granted a thirty days' extension of time in which to do so. This expires June 23, and if by that time the franchise has not been accepted an option of thirty days will be given to the Mesaba Traction company in which to meet the proposed terms. This company is promoted by a Biwabik man who seeks to construct an electric railway connecting all the range towns.

Mr. Berdie, representing the Northern company, however, declares that his company will undoubtedly accept the terms of the franchise. He says that for the present they will be content with a line to Chisholm and extensions will be undertaken as necessity demands.

BIG DOUGLAS COUNTY PROJECT.

Crooked Lake Is to Be Drained, Reclaiming 5,000 Acres.

The biggest ditching project yet undertaken in Douglas county has just been reported upon by the engineer who made the survey.

The project is known as the Crooked Lake ditch and will be forty miles long. The estimated cost of construction is $56,000 and the engineer states that it will take two good-sized ditching machines two years to complete the work.

More than 5,000 acres of land will be reclaimed by the drain.

Crooked lake, which is a meandered body of water, will be drained and much rich farm land added to the surrounding property. These meandered lands have been subdivided among the adjacent property owners and if this division is satisfactory to the court many disputes and much litigation will be avoided.

Pioneers Hold Picnic.

The pioneer settlers of Goodhue county held their annual picnic at Zumbrota last week. The following officers were elected: President, Hon. J. W. Peterson of Vasa; vice president, William Boothroyd of Red Wing; second vice president, Mrs. Hasler of Red Wing; secretary, J. C. Holmen of Kenyon; treasurer, Harvey Miller of Red Wing. Mayor Farwell welcomed the visitors. Short speeches were made by old settlers.

Johnnie Saher, fourteen years old, living with his parents about six miles north of Bagley, while playing bear with one of his brothers was shot with a rifle, which was supposed to be unloaded, the bullet passing through his abdomen and lodging in the side. The wound is likely to prove fatal.

A thief with a sweet tooth broke into a freight car in the yards at Albert Lea and made way with ten 200-pound sacks of sugar. There were wheel tracks alongside the car which showed that a wagon had been backed up to the door.

Members of the Owatonna Grand Army post are agitating the proposition of taking the Owatonna Military band with them to the encampment in Minneapolis in August. The Owatonna band is one of the best in the state, and the soldiers will make every effort to secure its services.

R. K. Cornish, a well known farmer, purchased 360 acres of land just east of Fergus Falls from W. H. Hotchkiss for $12,600. The land was purchased by Mr. Hotchkiss in 1901 for $7,200, and his profit has been $5,400, a striking indication of the fact that it pays to invest in Minnesota lands.

It is to laugh!

Carry the news to Thief River Falls.

Thief River Falls attorneys, "How could we win."

The Warren Sheaf is preparing to issue a daily paper. Here' success to you.

The Thief River Falls papers don't move fast enough, editorially, to stop quick.

The Heron Lake News says the COURIER is a red hot Democratic paper. It is.

The Democratic state convention will be held at Minneapolis September 4. The Republicans will need all the start they've got and then some.

It is an aphorism, none the less true because couched in legal phraseology, that wealth is a quo warranto to seize upon the rights of the people.

The Red Lake Falls attorneys never won a legal point and it is not likely they ever will? Give your readers the news—just once—Mr. Eastman.

No, Mr. Greenbushki Journaloff, the Red Lake Falls papers are not filled with cries of anything. They are filled with news. Go thou and do likewise.

The Middle River Pioneer broke into the Red Lake county seat fight last week as a partisan of Thief River Falls. Editor Carr is supposed to be a sleeping Carr in this case.

The city attorney of Thief River Falls has resigned. But of course that has nothing to do with the prospects of an investigation—into the way that city gets its county seat fund.

It is sure funny to hear the Thief River papers advising their readers that a vote on the county seat matter is near at hand—"not to exceed two months." Another case of fourflushing.

Thief River Falls has five attorneys engaged for the county seat contest. It reminds us that in a multitude of counsel there is safety—safety for the counsel but none for the client.

The LeSueur News says "going to the devil" is a much more pleasant process than arriving there. Never having arrived we are content to accept the greater knowledge of the News on the subject.

Criminal prosecution of the Standard Oil company for conspiracy in restraint of trade and receiving illegal rebates on its shipments of oil, has been decided upon by the president. There are a few million people in the United States, who would rejoice over a conviction.

If we had, ever had, or ever expect to "had" that $16,000, we could swing Red Lake Falls itself for Thief River on the county seat removal proposition.—Thief River Press.

No, you wouldn't! You would employ a few more attorneys—and not be any nearer a vote than you are now.

To state that Cole's nomination is the result of corporate influence is no nearer the truth than it would be to say the COURIER man is a saint.—Plummer Pioneer.

If the Pioneer doesn't know any more about the causes which led up to Cole's nomination than it does about the COURIER man, it is no wonder it threw a bunch of foolish fits.

If you want to know who Cole is the Red Lake Courier says you can find out by reading the columns of the democratic newspapers. Which means that the democrats are thoroughly scared and will stop at no falsehood to defeat Cole.—Plummer Pioneer.

Is that a puerile deduction? It is. And Charlie Latta knowing so well that there will be as much truth in what he would call a Democratic lie as in the fulsome flattery he, himself, would deal out for Cole.

The Thief River Falls News says if it can be proven that any saloonkeeper of that city has donated one half of his license to a county seat committee, the citizens there will drop the county seat fight. Now what would you think of that as a four-flush proposition? The proof was offered to the county commissioners and three of them got the scare of their lives and refused to listen. As for the Thief River Falls attorneys, they went right straight up into the circumnambient and haven't descended to terra firma yet. Prove it? Why bless your insignificant souls, it can be proven beyond any peradventure of a doubt and so often that you, yourselves, would grow weak with the re-iteration.

AND HE WAS BEATEN.

The only way in which J. F. Jacobson can be prevented from receiving the nomination for governor at Duluth on June 13, is by the use of corporation money. If the corporations and the politicains keep their hands off he will be nominated by acclamation. He is the choice of the people. If the Republicans of Minnesota really want a Republican governor elected, the way is clear. Heed the voice of the people.—St. Cloud Journal-Press, (Rep) May 2.

STILL DOING BUSINESS.

Buffalo Journal (Rep.): The nomination of Cole was a great surprise to those who are not in the game and demonstrates that the corporations are still doing business.

INSURES JOHNSON'S ELECTION.

Hector Mirror (Rep): Every one who had any preference here was for Jacobson and the principal comment on Cole's nomination is that it insures the election of Gov. Johnson for another term. Practically every man heard making any comment on it gave that opinion.

EASY FOR JOHNSON.

Stewart Tribune (Rep.): Mr. Cole will not have the strength with the common people that Jacobson has had and we believe that the re-election of Governor Johnson has been made the easier by his nomination.

WE'RE FROM MISSOURI.

Dawson Sentinel: Mr. Cole, of Walker, is the Republican nominee for governor, but before the people will rally to him very strongly he will have to show beyond question that he is entirely free from corporation control.

NOT SO BAD, EITHER.

Madison Press (Rep.): "That means Johnson"-is what one hears quite frequently. That is probably very gratifying to Mr. Johnson's friends, but, what of it, he carried this county two years ago, didn't he?

POOR OUTLOOK FOR COLE.

Albert Lea Standard: If Gov. Johnson has no greater portion of devoted enthusiastic supporters in the rest of the state than he has in Freeborn county, he is not likely to be re-elected by more than about forty thousand majority.

ALSO A STRONG STOMACH.

Little Falls Herald: Cole has been a Populist, very strong, a Democrat, very strong, and now he's a Republican. The G. O. P. has an awful maternal bosom when it can embrace Cole.

A REPUBLICAN FOR REVENUE.

St. Cloud Times. A. L. Cole left Democratic party presumably because Democrats were not elected to office in this State. He has secured the nomination for Governor, but the office the people, not the politicians, will bestow. Cole will not be Governor.

CELEBRATION AT BROOKS

St. John's Day Was Properly Observed in That Town.

From a Correspondent.

The celebration at Brooks was a grand success, the committee carrying out the program to the satisfaction of all.

At three o'clock the tug-of-war was called between two picked nines known as the North and South sides, the North side winning. At 3.30 the boy's race, free for all, was won by Moses Bray; Dalore SaVoi, second Men's race, free for all: the Long Sweede, first; Gus Davis, second. The potato race was called off as there were no potatoes in town. The race for girls under 16 was also called off as there were no girls here under that age. The rest of the afternoon was devoted to dancing. At 10 o'clock there was a grand display of fireworks. Then dancing until morning.

John Guerard and Moses Guerard, jr., came over from Grand Forks to celebrate June 23.

Eusebe Patnaude and Miss Nettie Patnaude of Red Lake Falls were among those here for the celebration.

J. A. Lang and two daughters of Erskine were here Saturday.

The Plummer people were well represented here Saturday and the people of Brooks should all turn out and celebrate the 4th with them.

Dan Linnihan was here on business Saturday and staid over until after the celebration.

H. C. Selden, president of the H. C. Selden Lumber company was here Thursday to check up the agent, R. Poirier.

Odillon Bossoneau has resigned his position with Charles Wilbur and has gone to Duluth.

R. Poirier drove to the county seat Sunday to visit his family.

Plummer boys are expecting a large crowd from Thief River Falls to help them celebrate the Fourth. Boys don't depend on them, we understand there is to be a circus there that day. Good excuse.

Steenerson as an E. Z.

Dispaches from Washington convey the following joke about Congressman Steenerson:

"Representative Steenerson yesterday had his first introduction to Mr. Wm: Bunco. Bunco presented himself in the form of a cigar drummer with some superior goods on hand that he was willing to sell for a song. The Minnesota member was asked to sample one. He did. It was fine.

"How much a hundred for these?" he inquired.

"Five dollars," replied William, smiling blandly.

Mr. Steenerson invested $25. Then he tried the stock.

"Its the worst bunch of cabbage." he said that I ever tried. These cigars are simply awful."

We often see a friend, relative or acquaintace, apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal disease—appendictis. People seem to know so little about this disease and therefor are not prepared. We have read with great interest a book on appendictis written by Dr. Conrad Adler of Berlin. This book tells all about this disease, how it is caused and how it can be prevented and cured. For a free copy call at W. A. Schrieter. 34-37

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation con be taken out and this tube restored to its normal conition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MALARIA AN INSIDIOUS FOE TO HEALTH

Malaria is an atmospheric poison which we unconsciously breathe into our lungs through the impure air arising from low, marshy places, stagnant ponds, damp cellars, sewer pipes, improperly ventilated houses, decaying vegetable matter, etc. Day after day these germs and poisons are taken into the lungs, and as the blood passes through them it becomes infected with the poison and in its circulation distributes the microbes of disease to all parts of the body. Malaria is a very insidious disease; it gives no warning of its coming until the circulation is filled with the poison and this foe to health has the system at its mercy. The blood becomes polluted, thin and weak and its slow, irregular circulation fails to properly nourish and strengthen the body. Then the entire system is attacked, and if the germs and poisons of Malaria are allowed to remain the strongest constitution will break down. No one can feel well when the system is in a malarial condition; the vitality is weak, the appetite poor, digestion deranged, the complexion grows sallow and the entire body feels the effects of the poison. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation and the only medicine that can accomplish this is S. S. S. It not only cleanses the blood of all unhealthy, morbid matter, but destroys the germs, cures Malaria and restores this vital fluid to a strong, healthy condition. S. S. S. is made of roots, herbs and barks combining purifying and tonic properties which keep the blood free of all poisons and the system in perfect condition. While destroying the germs of Malaria and building up the weak, polluted blood S. S. S. gives tone and vigor to the entire system. Book on the blood and any medical advice without charge.

THE Brangwyn Mystery

CHAPTER I.

Reginald Truscott and Hamilton Billery had passed their boyhood together in a Warwickshire village. Truscott's father was the parson, and Billery's the squire. They attended the same local grammar school, and passed through Rugby and Oxford together. Then they both came up to London and plunged into journalism. Billery purchased a newspaper and brought himself to the verge of ruin in a single twelvemonth. It had been his ambition to reform the world, and the world was not eager to be reformed. Truscott bought him out for an old song and went to work with the single idea of making the venture pay. In seven years' time he was beginning to be a power in the land and was reputed wealthy. Billery served his quondam schoolmate in humble ways, and made a humble income. He was a shiftless, inconsequent dreamer of foolish dreams, and was always brimful of suggestions which would have ruined any newspaper enterprise in a week. Truscott, for old sake's sake, would listen to him when he could spare the time, and performed for him many little acts of kindness.

On a certain summer Saturday afternoon the editor and proprietor of the "Daily Record" was enjoying his weekly holiday in a punt which was moored in the shade at the foot of the lawn which ran down from the gardens of his pretty riverside villa. When he was at business he threw every energy of his mind into the task before him, but it was his boast that he could loaf as well as any man alive. The strain of the last six days had been prodigious, and he was stretched out now on comfortably arranged cushions, with his straw hat tilted forward over his eyes and a choice cigar between his lips, luxuriously relaxing brain and body. He was between asleep and awake—just conscious of his own beatitude—when a familiar voice broke in upon his hazy fancies, and there was Billery, seated on the edge of the lawn with his feet dangling over the pebbled margin of the stream. Truscott tilted his hat to the back of his head and looked lazily up at him. Billery was evidently very much excited. He had walked fast and his forehead was beaded with perspiration. His eyes goggled and gleamed, and his fat, clean-shaven cheeks were pale.

"Reggie," he said, "I've struck the biggest thing that has been heard of this twenty years."

Truscott was unmoved by this announcement. Billery struck the biggest thing that had been heard of this twenty years about twice a month as a fair average. His editor contented himself with an interrogatory "'M?" and rolled over to listen.

"There's no mistake this time," said Billery. But Billery always said there was no mistake this time, and his chief was used to him. "You remember the Brangwyn case seven years ago?"

"I ought to remember it," Truscott answered, idly.

"By Jove, you ought," cried Billery. "That case made the 'Record.' Whilst I owned the wretched rag it cost me about a thousand pounds a week. It was no sooner transferred to you than up springs the Brangwyn mystery, and you were a made man in a month."

"I ran the thing for what it was worth," said Truscott. "What about it now?"

"Reggy," said Billery, "I'm bringing you the biggest journalistic scoop you've ever had. I've found old Aloysius Brangwyn's body, and I'm the only man who has identified him. I kept my own counsel, and I came off straight to you. I wish you'd take me in and give me a drink, old man."

"Come indoors," said Truscott, rising and stepping alertly to the turf. He led the way along the lawn and through the French windows of a shaded breakfast room. There, with a motion of his hand, he indicated a buffet at the wall. "Help yourself. The tantalus isn't locked. There's soda water in the gasogene. Take a cigar and come into my study."

Billery took his whisky and soda at a gulp, mopped his beaded forehead with a dubious handkerchief and obeyed his host's command. Truscott walked into his study, pointed to a chair, closed the door and sat down to listen.

"If I begin by telling you what you know already," Billery began, "it's only to show you what a consecutive yarn it makes. Here's old Aloysius Brangwyn, sinfully rich, lonely, eccentric, aged eighty-five, as well known as any man in London. His solitary man servant bids him goodbye at noon one day and goes away to see a relative in the country. He returns on the evening of the following day. The old man has disappeared, utterly and completely. His two great nephews move heaven and earth to find him, and spend money like water in the search, but from that day forward he has never been seen or heard of. There is a legal presumption of his death, his estate is administered, the excitement has all died down, and to-day I find his body."

"Where?"

"Wait a bit. I'll come to that. I find his body. Now, I knew him well. The last time he went out of town he went to see my governor. I saw him the very week before he disappeared, and talked to him for a few minutes in the Strand. That's nearly seven years ago. To be accurate, it's six years, eight months and five days. Now here's the amazement. When I saw him to-day he was wearing the identical suit of clothes in which I met him last. The body is very slightly decomposed and I could see that he hadn't changed a hair. He doesn't look an hour older. He was covered in a half-liquid mud in the cellar of a ramshackle old house which had been deserted and locked up for years. A fortnight ago there was an unusually high tide, and the row of which this deserted old house was one was under water. They had been pumped dry by the fire engines. When the firemen found the body they turned the hose on it and washed all the mud away, and I give you my word of honor that there was not a sign of wear about his clothes—not a whitened seam, not an inch of nap worn away at the elbows. There's positively nothing changed about him. He's just exactly as he was when I last talked with him."

"What brought you on the spot?" asked Truscott.

"I was just prowling round," said Billery, "as I do every day, in one quarter of the town or another. I saw a crowd and went for it. They told me that a dead body had been found, and I thought there might be a half-sovereign to be made. It's worth more than that, I fancy."

"Yes," Truscott assented. "It should be worth more than that. Take this chair. Here are pen, ink, paper. Get to work at once and make the most of it. I'll telephone to the office to have all the evening papers sent down here. If your information is exclusive it will be valuable to you. I'll look after that. Meantime ,if you want to consult me, I'm going back to the punt."

Billery worked steadily for an hour or thereabouts, and then arose and with a somewhat furtive air opened the study door. He stood listening there for a moment. A subdued murmur of voices rose from below stairs. He straightened himself and walked to the breakfast room, whence he looked across the lawn to the river. When he had quite satisfied himself that no one was in sight, he said, half aloud:

"I don't think I need bother Truscott about a little thing like that. Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. Old Rags can afford himself the best of everything. And his whisky is really super-excellent. Guaranteed twenty years old by the excise, and matured in sherry casks. I believe there is no better treatment known. It is an admirable stimulus to mental exertion, when taken in moderation." He approached the buffet with a guilty look and discovered that the tantalus was locked. "Rags did that," he said, in a tone of chagrin. "It's hard—it's very hard—when one old pal can't repose trust in another. Rags, my boy, Ithink this want of confidence was unworthy of you."

He stifled his regret and, consoling himself with a cigar, went back to his work and wrote, somewhat less steadily than at first, for another hour. Then he laid down his pen. "Since no liquid nutriment is here available apart from the consent of the occupying tenant, I must even ask for it. And, after all, perhaps it is the nobler and the manlier plan."

He took his sheaf of manuscript in his hand and strolled through the lengthening shadows across the lawn, and at the river side he sat down in an attitude of exaggerated ftaigue. Truscott held out a hand.

"Finished?" he asked.

"All but finished,' said Billery. "Perhaps you can suggest a trot for the avenue. Reginald, do you observe that you are growing absent-minded?"

"Am I?" asked Truscott. "How?"

Billery waggled his head in an odd compound of humor and confusion.

"You forgot to leave the tantalus open. I am parched with mental effort."

"One," said Truscott, holding out a bunch of keys toward him. "Only one now ,on your word of honor."

"Only one, upon my word of honor," Billery answered.

Truscott settled himself to read, and was left undisturbed until the end.

"Hamilton, my child," he said, as he walked toward the house, "if you were not the biggest fool alive you would be a man of remarkable talent."

Billery sat in an anrm chair in the breakfast room. His hands were on the shiny knees of his threadbare trousers. He leaned a little forward. His nose was red and his eyes were moist. He gave a solemn hiccough and rolled a little, as if his armchair was a boat at sea. Truscott glanced at the square-cut glass decanter and saw that it was empty.

"Billery," he said, "you gave me your word of honor. Only one."

"I've only had one," Billery answered, with a drunken laugh. "I took it in a celery glass which I found upon the sideboard."

"Well," said Truscott, "this makes an end of confidence. "I will never trust you any more."

"Oh, I say," Billery responded, rising to his feet with something of a lurch. "Rags, you were born without a sense of humor. I thought you'd take it as a joke. Upon my sacred word of honor I did."

"I don't see where the fun comes in," said Truscott. "To me it looks like a mean and greedy evasion."

"Look here!" cried Billery, flushing angrily and raising his voice. "Have you ever found me mean and greedy in my intercourse with you?"

"I tell you," Truscott answered, "that this is a mean and greedy act, and that if you were in your sober senses you would be ashamed of it."

"I suppose I should," the other answered, falling back into his chair. "I'm ashamed of most things when I'm in my sober senses. But it isn't like you to grudge your oldest friend a drink."

"Grudge!" said Truscott, in a voice of cold disdain. "I grudge to see my oldest friend making a fool and a beast of himself. I grudge to see him obscuring a nature originally honorable and lovable."

"Oh, hang your sermons," answered Billery, with an utterance which thickened every moment. "I can preach 'em for myself. I can be a lot more convincing and eloquent than anybody else can. Look here, I wantagorasleep."

"That's the best thing you can do," said Truscott, curtly, and so left him maundering unintelligibly. "The beggar's spoiled my one day of rest," he grumbled, as he entered his study. He sat down and began to rake discontentedly amongst the papers on his desk. A ring sounded at the door, but he took no heel until a page boy entered with a card upon a salver.

He took up the card and read the name of Mr. Aloysius Brangwyn.

CHAPTER II.

"Odd," thought Truscott. "Show the gentleman in here," he said aloud.

The boy retired, and immediately ushered into the study a tall, pale, heavily mustached man, quietly attired who bowed and seated himself in silence as the door closed behind him. His pallor was accentuated by the darkness of his hair and eyes. His face was keen and hawk-like, and had once been strikingly handsome. He conveyed at a second glance the impression of being still in early middle life, but the clean-cut lines which ran outwards and downwards from the inner corners of his eyes, and in the same direction from his nostrils and the corners of his mouth, spoke of great and prolonged suffering, and gave him a premature look of age. Every detail of dress and bearing was a warrant for breeding and refinement, and his manner was marked by a certain dignity and repose which were very curiously contradicted now and then by an intent and listening look which had something of terrer in it. This vanished so quickly when it came that it was difficult to analyze it. The idea it left on Truscott's mind was that it was produced by some premonitory symptom of a pain the man had learned to dread.

(To Be Continued.)

Time for Rejoicing.

The editor of the Bacon Ridge Heason came out on Main street and tossed his hat twenty feet in the air. "Praise to Providence," he whooped, dancing around like an Indian.

"Are you crazy?" demanded the only policeman in town. "What do you mean by cheering when the cyclone has carried away your office?"

"That's just it, friend. "I have been complaining for twenty years because the circulation of my sheet was so limited, and now there's a chance of it being circulated in four states and twenty counties. Wouldn't be surprised if one copy don't blow clear to Europe."

He Wasn't Romantic.

She nestled her head on his manly breast.

"Oh, George," she whispered, "how loud your heart beats! And every beat is for your own Angeline, isn't it, dear?"

He looked uncomfortable.

"Well, the fact is," he said, "that the engagement ring cost so much that I'm—er—obliged for the present to carry one of these dollar watches. That's what you hear."

Incidentals.

"This bill for your new frock is really a bit high," observes the plutocrat to his daughter. "Six thousand dollars is considerable to pay for just one auto suit."

"But, papa, the suit itself really is quite inexpensive. The most of that bill is for the trimmings."

"Trimmings?"

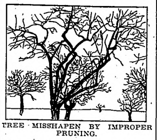
"Yes. I spent $5,200 for an auto of the right tint to match the dress."

In dealing with the world you are apt to be all out of shape by the time the bumps are knocked off you.

Humor heals, while wit sacrifices or amputates.

Right and Wrong Way to Prune a Fruit Tree

One important lesson which many otherwise excellent farmers have neglected to learn relates to the proper pruning of fruit trees. Perhaps the chief fault is cutting away the lower part of the tree instead of opening up the top and forcing the growth in the limbs nearer the ground. The two accompanying photographs illustrate the wrong and the right way to prune an apple tree according to modern ideas. No. 1 shows a tree which has been pruned altogether too high. That is to say, the lower limbs have been trimmed off, but the owner has made no attempt to check the tree's ambition to rival the elm along the roadside in height. As a result, he has exposed the trunk of the tree to the scorching rays of the sun and has made it practically impossible to secure the fruit except by knocking it off with a pole.



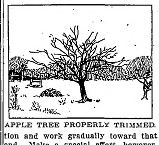
TREE MISSHAPEN BY IMPROPER PRUNING.

Tree No. 2 has been pruned as a tree ought to be pruned. It has been headed in from the top, giving it a symmetrical appearance, letting in sufficient sunshine to ripen all of the apples evenly, but at the same time shading the trunk from the too searching rays of the sun. The apples which grow on this tree can be picked without difficulty and without bruising them.

It is an interesting fact that these two trees stood on opposite sides of a line fence. As may be imagined, the contrast could hardly have been greater. The poor job of pruning was done by a farmer who was plodding along in the old rut and who refused to profit by the example of his neighbor who owned tree No. 2, and who was an up-to-date horticulturist.

Oftentimes old apple trees may be given a new lease of life and be made to yield a good profit by severely heading them back, forcing the growth of the lower limbs and shoots. This fact only holds good when the trunks are sound. Young trees should be watched all summer to prevent the growth of branches not needed in order to grow a good head. It is worth while to pay a little attention to governing the growth of young trees. It should be remembered in applying the pruning knife that work of this kind in the summer has a tendency to check growth, while in the winter the tendency is to increase growth. It is better to do a little pruning each year, rather than to cut away a large portion of the tree in one season.

According to a suggestion by the Farmer's Voice, the best plan is to acquire a mental picture of how the tree ought to look when in proper condition and work gradually toward that end. Make a special effort, however, to cut away each season all dead branches and also the weaker branch when two rub against each other. Suckers may be removed by a sharp blow with the side of the hand, but an occasional sucker on the principal branches should be allowed to grow in order to make new-bearing limbs.



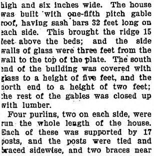
APPLE TREE PROPERLY TRIMMED.

Modern Glass-Covered House for Winter Gardens

The long, narrow glass houses used by so many market gardeners are obsolete. It is just as well to throw all the inclosed space under one roof, so far as success is concerned, and even better on the score of convenience. An Oregon man who tore down his old glass buildings and erected in their place one large, new building, 60 feet wide and 150 feet long, tells how he did it.

The foundation walls were of rough stones picked up from the fields and put in a trench one foot deep till they reached ground level. On top of these was built a concrete wall four inches high and six inches wide. The house was built with one-fifth pitch gable roof, having sash bars 32 feet long on each side. This brought the ridge 15 feet above the beds; and the side walls of glass were three feet from the wall to the top of the plate. The south end of the building was covered with glass to a height of five feet, and the north end to a height of two feet; the rest of the gables was closed up with lumber.

Four purlins, two on each side, were run the whole length of the house. Each of these was supported by 17 posts, and the posts were tied and braced sidewise, and two braces near the south end used to brace the house lengthwise. The sash bars were one and three-quarters by two and three-quarters inches, with upper corners rabbeted and the glass was 14 by 14 inches, lapped one-sixteenth inch, imbedded in putty and fastened by nailing a strip three-eighths by three-eighths by ten inches long above each end. Eight courses of glass were laid and then a board eight inches wide, which serves as a walk when it is necessary to repair the roof, was put on.



INTERIOR OF GLASS COVERED HOUSE.

In the south end were made four doors, each three feet wide, and in the north end three three-foot doors and one ten-foot door to admit a team and wagon when hauling manure for the beds. These doors provide the only means of ventilation necessary. When the temperature within is too high, the doors are opened until it is right.

Among the principal items of expense were: lumber, $150; putty, $17; concrete, $8; nails and bolts, $10; coal tar (for painting woodwork) $8. Besides these was the glass. In a large building of this kind the beds can be laid out to much greater advantage and none of the space is lost. The Rural New Yorker says all the usual market products, lettuce, cucumbers, tomatoes, celery, cauliflower and cabbage plants, etc., may be grown with success.

A CLEAN FARM.—What does clean farming mean? It means everything where it belongs, the best crops we can grow, houses fit for folks and their friends to live in, and good clean folks living in those houses.

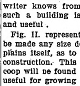
Handy Devices for the Poultry Yard

In Fig. 1 we have a plan for making a paper brooder house, or colony coop.

Notice how quickly the frame of 1 x3 inch strips can be put together. The "rafters" are just far enough apart to permit a strip of red rosin-sized building paper to be tacked on, overlapping the next strip. The joints may well be covered with laths. No boarding is used except the paper, and the door that laps over the end shown is a light frame covered with stout paper. A square window is fitted in the other end. The writer knows from experience that such a building is entirely practical and useful.

Fig. II. represents a coop that can be made any size desired. It fully explains itself, as to construction. This coop will be found useful for growing chicks, and can be utilized during the winter as a roosting pen, or even to set "broodies" in mid-winter. Coops of this nature are always useful.

Fig. III. gives a watering device. A tin pail is, in many ways, the best sort of watering device for fowls. It is instantly emptied and easily kept clean; but, says the Farm Journal, in order to keep the water clean, the pail must be kept out of the way of flying bits of litter, thrown up by the fowls when scratching. The cut shows a device that not only keeps the pail rigidly in position, but affords a raised platform for the fowls to fly upon when desiring to drink. A bent nail will hold the pail in place. Lard pails are useful for this.



POTATO BLIGHT.—Late blight of the potato is almost unknown in Nebraska. Early blight is somewhat troublesome in certain parts of the state, however, and Nebraska experiment station is recommending spraying with bordeaux mixture at intervals of two to three weeks, beginning when the plants are six to eight inches.—R. A. Emerson, Horticulturist, Nebraska Experiment Station.

EXPERIMENT CAREFULLY.—The best way to find out whether we can make a success of certain things on the farm is to try them. Not on a heavy scale at first, but take a bit of ground and set it apart for the experimental garden. Here test some of the seeds; give them all good attention, and the result will be interesting and profitable.

SCIENCE OF AGRICULTURE.—If there is one vocation in the world that needs the help of science it is the vocation of the farmer. All around him are elements that he cannot understand without the help of the scientist. The man is wise that realizes this and lays hold of every aid that he can find.

COUNTRY'S REAL WEALTH.—The real wealth of this country is in its soil. When agriculture is neglected the nation must go to the wall.

TERRIBLE ITCHING SCALP.

Eczema Broke Out Also on Hands and Limbs—An Old Soldier Declares: "Cuticura Is a Blessing."

"At all times and to all people I am willing to testify to the merits of Cuticura. It saved me from worse than the tortures of hades, about the year 1900, with itching on my scalp and temples, and afterwards it commenced to break out on my hands. Then it broke out on my limbs. I then went to a Surgeon whose treatment did me no good, but rather aggravated the disease. I then told him I would go and see a physician in Erie. The reply was that I could go anywhere, but a case of eczema like mine could not be cured; that I was too old (80). I went to an eminent doctor in the city of Erie and treated with him for six months, with like results. I had read of the Cuticura Remedies, and so I sent for the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and continued taking the Resolvent until I had taken six bottles, stopping it to take the Pills. I was now getting better. I took two baths a day, and at night I let the lather of the Soap dry on. I used the Ointment with great effect after washing in warm water, to stop the itching at once. I am now cured. The Cuticura treatment is a blessing, and should be used by every one who has itching of the skin. I can't say any more, and thank God that He has given the world such a curative. Wm. H. Gray, 3303 Mount Vernon St., Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 2, 1905."

"Oh, forgive me, Katherine! I forgot all about this being the night your beau is due."

"Don't speak of him, Mayme. Here it is 8:15. If he doesn't think enough of me to call on time, he may stay away altogether."

"Gracious; I—"

"Oh, I mean it. You shall stay with me all the evening, and if he comes, remember, I'm not at home."

"Really!"

"Eight thirty! The idea! I shall close the storm door and lower the blinds. I wouldn't so much as look out if he rings all night, and—"

"Oh, there's the bell—"

"The bell! Oh, it's him. Mayme, you slip out by the back way and call some afternoon. Oh, how grand! To think it is really Jack. Poor fellow! Maybe he was delayed and ran all the way. I shall not even ask him why he was late."

A Case of

STOMACH CATARRH.

MARY O'BRIEN

Miss Mary O'Brien, 306 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Peruna cured me in five weeks of catarrh of the stomach, after suffering for four years and doctoring without effect. In common with other grateful ones who have been benefited by your discovery, I say, All hail to Peruna."

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes:

"I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago.

"There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured, for I do not feel any more ill effects, have a good appetite and am getting fat.

"So I am, and will say to all, I am cured for good.

"I thank you for your kindness.

"Peruna will be our house medicine hereafter."

Catarrh of the stomach is also known in common parlance as dyspepsia, gastritis and indigestion. No medicine will be of any permanent benefit except it removes the catarrh.

A Great Tonic.

Mr. Austin M. Small, Astoria, Ore., writes: "During the hot weather of the past summer I lost my appetite. I tried Peruna, and found it pleasant to take, a splendid appetizer and a great tonic."

A Real Boon to Automobilists.

The very latest thing in the automobile line is a portable bail bond for reckless chauffeurs. One of the big bonding companies has already begun to issue these useful documents, and others are preparing to follow suit. Armed with one of these handy protectors, the automobilist can violate all the speed laws and rules of the road, secure in the knowledge that his arrest will not be followed by a night in the police station, nor the necessity of leaving his car as security.

The company issuing these bail bonds, which are in the form of power of attorney authorizing the holder to sign the company's name as surety, reports a very large demand for them.

Titled American Women.

A remarkable list, collected for the first time, shows that American women have within a few years gained twenty-three titles by marriages into English families, twenty-six German titles, fourteen French, seventeen Italian and six Russian. It is further estimated that 160 American heiresses have brought to Europe in dowries no less than $150,000,000. In Great Britain the American wives of British husbands help to control about 2,000,000 acres of land.

THE DOCTOR'S WIFE

Agrees With Him About Food.

A trained nurse says: "In the practice of my profession I have found so many points in favor of Grape-Nuts food that I unhesitatingly recommend it to all my patients.

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick) and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumen water very nourishing and refreshing. This recipe is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice or flavoring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest stomach can assimilate without distress.

"My husband is a physician and he uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients.

"Personally I regard a dish of Grape-Nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well or sick." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

In any case of stomach trouble, nervous prostration or brain fag, a 10 days' trial of Grape-Nuts will work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding, and in this way ending the trouble. "There's a reason" and trial proves.

Why She Wouldn't Pay.

"I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am," insisted a conductor, speaking to a quiet looking little woman seated beside a boy on a Pennsylvania train.

"I guess not," she replied, with decision.

"He's too old to travel free. He occupies a whole seat, and the car's crowded. There are people standing."

"I've never paid for him yet," the woman retorted.

"You've got to begin some time," persisted the conductor.

"Not this trip, anyway."

"You'll have to pay for that boy, ma'am, or I'll stop the train and put him off."

"All right, put him off, if you think that's the way to get anything out of me."

"You ought to know what the rules of this road are, ma'am. How old is that boy?"

"I don't know. I never saw him before."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Tasty Chop for Invalid.

Trim away every particle of fat from a neck or loin chop, melt a piece of butter on a plate, sprinkle the chop with pepper and salt; dip both sides in the butter, and sprinkle a little lemon juice over the top, leaving it in the butter for at least two hours. Put the yolk of an egg on a plate, with a teaspoonful of grated cheese. Mix it together, and mask the chop freely with the mixture. Have ready some boiling dripping in a frying-pan, lay in the chop, and let it cook thoroughly, first on one side, and then on the other; it will take quite six minutes to cook, the fat being kept boiling the whole of the time. Drain it on a piece of clean paper, and serve on a little mound of nicely mashed potato, as hot as possible.

Involved Vociferosity.

"Gentlemen of the jury," erupted the attorney for the plaintiff, addressing the 12 Arkansas peers who were sitting in judgment and on their respective shoulder blades in a damage suit against a grasping corporation for killing a cow. "If the train had been running as slow as it should have been run, if the bell had been rung as it ort to have been rung, or the whistle had been blown as it should have been blown, none of which was did, the cow would not have been injured when she was killed!"—Puck.

Macaroni and Cheese.

Into two quarts of boiling water break half a pound of macaroni. Add half a teaspoonful of salt and boil 20 minutes. Drain through a collander. Line your well-buttered baking dish with cracker crumbs, then add a layer of macaroni, a liberal sprinkling of grated cheese, dust with cracker crumbs, and use dabs of butter. Repeat this until your dish is full. Then pour over all a cupful of milk or cream if you have it. Brown in the oven before serving.

Hollow Cheeks.

To fill out the hollow cheeks, stimulate the circulation and build up the tissues, there is nothing better than the habit of bathing the face with very cold water every morning, also at night after the facial tubbing with warm water, pure soap and a correct complexion brush. Proper massage, with orange flower skin food and a rotary movement with the finger tips will prove helpful. Make it a practice to sip a glassful of hot milk at bedtime.

To Remove a Grease Spot.

Here is a way to remove a grease spot, which answers excellently: First place a double thickness of blotting paper on an ironing board. Lay the material on this and sponge well with benzine. Now put two more thicknesses of blotting paper on top and iron with a moderately hot iron. Remember that benzine is inflammable, so don't do this near a fire or light, and see that your flatiron isn't at scorching heat.

Compliment for English.

Chinese Commissioner Shang Chi Heng before leaving England for France recently paid the British quite a compliment in a farewell interview. He said: "What has chiefly impressed me is the dignity and solidity of your nation. There is a compactness of spirit and conservatism which in spite of any political differences keeps the race well together. You remind me of the Chinese in this respect."

A Ham Sidedish.

Nice for luncheon is this entree of cold boiled ham: Chop enough ham to fill a coffee cup and add to it two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, a little cayenne pepper and two tablespoonfuls of cream. Fry rounds of bread in butter and spread over the ham mixture. Grate cheese over the top and brown in a hot oven.

Paper Bags.

Housekeepers should know that paper bags are made of composition of rags, lime, glue and other substances mixed with chemicals and acids. When the paper is dry it is harmless, but if wet it is not fit to touch any sort of food, as there may be injurious consequences.

Up to Her.

"Yes," said the stern woman, "I am masculine in my dress and I am proud of it! You notice I wear a man's straw hat?"

"I see you do," yawned the meek husband.

"And a mannish stock and shirt waist?"

"Yes."

"Also a mannish shoe?"

"H'm."

"And I can whistle as good as any man?"

"The meek man yawned again.

"Well, Maria," he said slowly, "if you are all that mannish, I guess you are the man of the house. So you can just pay the bills."

Diplomacy.

Senator Long said of diplomacy at a dinner:

"That was a very diplomatic young lady whom I heard about the other day.

"'What do you do,' some one said to her, at a ball, 'when a man persists in asking you for a dance, and you don't want to dance with him?'

"'I tell him,' she replied, 'that my card is full.'

"'But supposing it isn't, and he still persists?'

"'Then,' said the young lady, 'I insist it is, and at the same time let him see it isn't.'"

Fortune's Wheel.

"See the old chap?" remarked the clubman, pointing out the window to an old peddler, who carried a basket of shoe laces. "Well, he came to this country from Russia ten years ago. He borrowed some money to purchase a basket and began to peddle shoe laces. How much do you think he's worth to-day? Just make a guess."

Several large sums were mentioned expectantly.

"Wrong," said the clubman. "He isn't worth a cent and he still owes for the basket."

Needed a Boat.

"Who got up the folder you sent me advertising these lots?" growled the suburbanite in his hip boots.

"Why, I think it was a reporter," replied a suave land agent.

"H'm! Must have been a marine reporter."

"Why so?"

"Because there is more water out here than there is land."

Different Viewpoints.

"But," protested the man who was looking for a home, "the walls of this house are damp."

"Oh, that's one of the advantages," explained the real estate agent. "In case of fire, it won't be so apt to burn."

Another Hold-Up.

Hobo Hank—Say, mister, I found de dorg dat yore wife is advertisen' a reward of $2 fer.

Mr. Enpeck—You did, eh?

Hobo Hank—Yes; an' if youse don't gimme $5 I'll take it back to her. See?

Talking.

Wife—You were talking in your sleep again last night, dear. Why do you persist in doing it?

Husband—Good Lord, Maria! A man ought to be allowed to talk sometimes, oughtn't he?

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments.

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

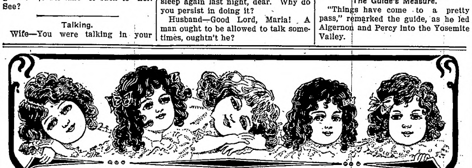
The Guide's Measure.

"Things have come to a pretty pass," remarked the guide, as he led Algernon and Percy into the Yosemite Valley.



WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

Aye, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw.

No, Commissioners Demann and Falardeau.

The board proceeded to consider said petition and to count and determine the number of names thereon and to ascertain the number of votes cast at the general election in 1904.

Charles E. Boughton asked permission to introduce testimony and George G. Williams was sworn and testified before the board.

It was moved by Commissioner Ekstrom and seconded by Commissioner Johnson that no evidence be admitted except such as bears directly on the matter that the board was called to consider as defined by the statute, which motion was declared carried, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw voting aye and Commissioners Demann and Falardeau voting No.

The following offer of Chas. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady was submitted to the board and made part of the record:

C. E Boughton and F. A. Grady offer to prove by witness, G. G. Williams, that he is a saloonkeeper of Thief River Falls; that he was ordered and instructed by the city council of said city in the years 1904 and 1905 to pay $500.00, same being ½ his saloon license money in said city, to the city treasurer and $500.00 the other half to a committee of said city intrusted with getting signatures to the county seat petition now under consideration and that said money was used by said committee wrongfully and fraudulently in influencing voters to sign said petition by paying them for same and buying and giving them intoxicating liquors and that a large number of signatures to such petition were obtained by such means.

It was moved by Commissioner Demann and seconded by Commissioner Falardeau that said offer of C. E. Boughton and F. A. Grady be accepted and considered.

The motion was declared lost on the following vote:

Aye, Commissioners Demann and Falardeau.

No, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw.

On motion made by Commissioner Ekstrom and seconded by Commissioner Johnson and carried unanimously a recess was taken until 8 o'clock a. m., June 12, 1906.

It was moved by Commiseioner Wm. C. L. Demann and seconded by Commissioner Falardeau that the three hundred and twenty-five names and signatures which are on "Exhibit 5" be stricken from said county seat removal petition on the ground that it appears on the face of said Exhibit that said exhibit consists of six sheets of paper pasted together and that the names on the lower pages were signed before they were attached to the sheet next above it and that M. V. Evenson and Wilhelm Michelet signed said Exhibit at the top of the first sheet thereof and verified the same on the last sheet thereof and that they did not attach their affidavit to the sheet which they signed or any sheet at all except the last sheet which they did not sign.

Aye, Commissioners Demann and Falardeau,

No, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw.

No, Commissioners Ekstrom, Johnson and Shaw.

Commissioner Demann moved that the names on "Exhibits 2" and "3" containing [illegible] county seat removal petition on the same grounds as set forth in the motion to strike out the names on "Exhibit 5" only that the exhibits differ in the number of pages attached and in the names of the persons whose affidavits are attached to said "Exhibits." J. McNiven and Nels Swanson one of the subscribing witnesses on each of said "Exhibits" were not at the time of the circulation of said "Exhibits" obtaining signatures thereto and at the time of signing and verifying the same, legal voters of said county.

VOL. VIII—NO. 37. RED LAKE FALLS, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1906. WHOLE NO. 401

WON MANY PRIZES

Red Lake Falls Firemen Gain Honors at Warren ---Next Year's Tournament to Be Held in This City.

The Red Lake Falls firemen were conspicuous at the Northern Minnesota Firemen's tournament at Warren last week both in numbers and in achievement. Seven prizes with a total cash value of $250 were the visible evidences of their prowess. They had to work for what they got but they had to be reckoned with in the several events in which they drew blanks.

The tournament was an immense success and to the good people of Warren belongs the credit for doing everything that could be expected to produce that end. Seven cities were represented and the town was crowded with visitors at all times. Warren was decidedly en fete for the occasion, everyone was made to feel at home and when the business of the tournament for each day was over there were entertainment and amusement to satiety.

It is not too much to say that Red Lake Falls played a most important part all thro the tournament, beginning with the parade and ending with the zig-zag on the last evening. For the opening parade, the Red Lake Falls firemen won the $25 prize for having the most men in line and gave Hallock a close run for best appearance. As for the Red Lake Falls band, which accompanied the firemen and remained during three days, it found instant favor with the lovers of good music and its reputation increased with each appearance. The favorable and, at times almost flattering comment would fill a book. But it was a firemen's tournament and the chief interests centered in the various contests.

In the first day's events the Red Lake Falls firemen failed to get started but on the second day out of three events they captured two first prizes, tied for another and drew a third prize. On the third day there were two principal events; the wet test, in which Red Lake Falls had no hope to make a showing for lack of opportunity to practice; and the hub-and-hub race which they won in magnificent style. It was the most exciting of all the races. Six teams were entered, running two at a time. Warren and Red Lake Falls each defeated its opponent in the same time, 25 seconds flat. When they lined up to run off the tie the excitement was intense. It was a wonderfully pretty struggle as they tore down the 200-yard stretch almost hub to hub. Only in the last 25 feet of the distance did Red Lake Falls slowly draw away from its splendid opposition, finishing by a narrow margin in the record-breaking time of 24 seconds. Then pandemonium broke loose and the big audience forgot its partisanship in thunderous applause at a well-earned victory. Quickly the Red Lake Falls band and firemen were out on the track in front of the grand stand and all business was at a standstill until the Red Lake Falls rooters—and they weren't all from Red Lake Falls either—had howled themselves hoarse.

A remarkable thing about the tournament was an entire absence of petty jealously. There was at all times a healthy rivalry in the sports but when a race was won the winners were cheered and congratulated by all the others.

The zig-zag parade on the last evening was a fitting and spectacular close. Headed by the Red Lake Falls band, all the firemen in town lined up for a march thru the principal streets, everyone carrying flags, banners, or some form of color, which, together with the different uniforms, gave a kaliedoscopic effect of considerable brilliancy, as they marched and counter-marched. In the center of the parade the big key to the city was triumphantly carried by the Red Lake Falls boys. They had captured it the night before by a clever ruse. While Frank Jefiers entertained all the other firemen he could find in another part of town, several of the Red Lake team hurried down the street with a ladder. To climb up, cut the wires and get back to their headquarters with this, still another prize, was but the work of a very few minutes. The enthusiasm grew as the parade progressed and when, in grand finale, the band circled up on a corner surrounded by firemen and played one of its most stirring pieces, the vast crowd broke loose and the cheers continued until after the train departed which put an end to probably the most successful tournament ever held by the Northern Minnesota Firemen.

Following is a more detailed account of the races run:

Association hook and ladder race: Red Lake Falls, 26 seconds, $60; Blackduck, 26 4-5, $50; Crookston, 27 4-5, $20.

Ladder climbing: Blackduck, 8 seconds, $15; Red Lake Falls, 8 and 8 1-5, $10 and $5.

Combination hook and ladder: Red Lake Falls, 24 3 5, $75; Blackduck, 25, $45; Warren, 26 1-5, $20.

Hub and Hub: Red Lake Falls, 24, $60; Warren, 25, $30; Bemidji, 25 3-5, $20.

Flag race: Bemidji, 67, $20; Red Lake Falls, 68 4-5, $15.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Following are the officers elected by the association for the coming year: President, Milton Converse, Red Lake Falls; vice-president, C. C. Jackson, Thief River Falls; secretary, Fred Borchers, Red Lake Falls; treasurer, Thomas R. Johnson, Crookston.

The tournament goes with the presidency, so next year it will be held in Red Lake Falls and if this city is to make good the promises of performance at Warren, there will have to be a lot of hard harmonious work. Much will be expected of the city and it will be a point of wisdom from every standpoint to exceed expectation.

NOTES.

Helmuth Zaiser acted as a social committee and committee on invitation to Red Lake Falls next year. He has the promise of all the Warren ladies that they will be the first to arrive here and last to leave.

Jim Armstrong must have concealed his identity purposely. Most of the time he was addressed by Warren people as Mr. Cox.

Harry Healy was the busiest man in town, playing with both bands, a member of the running team, third baseman for the Warren ball team and at the dances in the evening—well he was doing more there than in all the other engagements.

Henry Hennemuth laying about him with a cot in each hand when early morning visitors sought to disturb his slumbers was like a war horse smelling the battle from afar and crying in a loud voice, ha, ha! Jim Ford went out of a window, Happy Hanson shinned up a chimney, Otto Zaiser wished he hadn't come and several others got out so quickly they never knew they were there at all.

Frank Grady was ever active and to his hard work much of the credit for the Red Lake Falls running team's successes is due.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church at Warren seemed well grounded in the knowledge that the way to a man's heart is thru his stomach. The meals they served were a constant delight.

The Red Lake Falls boys were given a rousing welcome on their return home. Even at 2 o'clock in the morning a large number of citizens were abroad with fireworks and the beating of tom-toms. Then there was another zig-zag and noise and music in which all participated for great was the rejoicing.

Joe Ritko Gets Big Verdict Against John Grove Land Co.

The case of Joe Ritko, formerly a resident of Red Lake county, against the John Grove Land company of St. Paul, was tried in the district court of Ramsey county last week and a verdict was recorded for Ritko for damages in the sum of $3881.

The action originated in the alleged fraudulent misrepresentations of the Land company in a trade to Ritko of land in the southern part of the state for a half section of land in Red Lake county. The case was tried in St. Paul and lasted three days and a half. It was a difficult and hard fought action and was a legal victory for the firm of Germo & Farley of this city who were retained by Ritko. Mr. Germo conducted the case on its trial.

A COWARDLY ACT

Thief River Falls Attorneys Worsted at Every Turn, Would Throw the Blame Upon the County Auditor.

One of the most amazing and contemptible tricks of spite-work and petty meanness ever perpetrated has been the act of a certain attorney of Thief River Falls who has been connected with that city's end of the county seat contest. Baffled and beaten at every turn, with voluminous promises to his clients unfulfilled, and no prospect of ever making them good, himself disappointed and humbled in his own estimation because of the constant brags he had made and his utter failure to get within a year of a vote, compelled to withdraw from a legal fight rather than be told by the court he had no standing, this attorney prefers charges against the county auditor as the last expiring gasp of one who sees the handwriting on the wall. This attorney goes back to Thief River Falls from his defeat at Crookston and weaves a weird tale of perfidy by the county auditor as an excuse for his defeat. The Thief River Falls papers—more shame to them—believe him and print equally weird stories how thru the perfidy of the county auditor the interests of the people of the county had been allowed to suffer. The attacks on the county auditor were cowardly and shameful and only made use of as a subterfuge to cover up the chagrin and failure of the attorney who had boasted that the injunction against the county auditor was a fake injunction.

Then this attorney had to do something to substantiate his charges that the county auditor had acted perfidiously. He went to St. Paul and again he bragged that he would have a commission appointed to consider the county auditor's removal. This attorney consulted with the attorney general and Governor Johnson. Has that commission been appointed? Not yet! What the result of his consultation with the attorney general was, is not known but as for Governor Johnson, it is unofficially announced that he will not interfere in a county seat fight. Score yet another failure for this tormented and maddened attorney. He had boasted over and over again that the county seat fight would be all over and an election held this summer. On the strength of his imagined victories he would ride into the county attorney's office this fall on a popular wave, because, forsooth, he had proven himself the peer of them all, a lawyer mighty in battle of legal wit and acumen. Already in dreams had he placed the laurel wreath of victory upon his noble brow. "In dreams thru camp and court, he bore the trophies of a conquerer." But alas how the mighty are fallen.

Listen you good people of Thief River Falls to the truth; there is no more honorable or conscientious public official on earth than County Auditor James E. Ford. It was no act of his, either of commission or omission that lost the battle to Thief River Falls. Place the blame where it belongs and if anyone would know where the fault lies, listen again. County Commissioner Ekstrom was injoined from acting with the board on the canvass of the petition for removal. On the advice of the Thief River Falls attorneys he disregarded the injunction, thereby invalidating all the proceedings. This disregard of the injunction was the basis of the injunction against County Auditor Ford restraining him from calling an election. That there was merit in the last injunction was abundantly shown when the Thief River Falls attorneys withdrew their motion to dissolve it before Judge Watts had an opportunity to decide it. What Mr. Ford did or left undone had no more to do with the result than man's puny will has to do with the persistent force of specific gravity.

If the Thief River Falls papers are honest with themselves and their readers they will place the blame where it belongs—in the fatuous, inflated, bombastic, unfulfilled promises of an attorney who was intoxicated with the exuberance of his own verbosity.

Later information tells of the interview of the Thief River Falls attorney with the attorney general. The charge preferred against the county auditor was that of not informing the Thief River Falls attorneys that an injunction had been served upon him. This attorney seemed to have an idea that he was the county auditor's legal as well as confidential adviser. For his benefit and the information of those who feel inclined to blame Mr. Ford, it can be stated that the county attorney is the proper legal adviser of the county auditor, and there is no more reason why Mr. Ford should have told the Thief River Falls attorney than that he should report it to the fourteenth assistant attorney general of Lithuania.

The attorney general of Minnesota decided that there was not even ground for demanding an investigation. There you have the Thief River charge of perfidy. It has been dissipated into thin air by both the attorney general and Gov. Johnson. There wasn't, and there isn't anything in it.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

Celebrated on the North Side—Unmarred by Serious Accident.

The only attempt at celebration yesterday by Red Lake Falls people was that indulged in by the north side citizens. It was attended by most of the citizens of both sides and was as enjoyable as tho more elaborate preparations had been made. There were various forms of entertainment, horse and foot races, ball games, an excellent concert by the band and a largely attended dance during the evening. The day was a perfect one and that alone, after the continuous rains of spring and summer, was enough to put everyone in a fit mood for enjoyment.

One of the best things of the day was the freedom from the usual accidents that so often mar a celebration. No serious accidents have been reported. There were a very few cases of burning from powder but nothing that will cause any lingering regret for the day.

Scarcity of Freight Cars.

"During 1905," writes George R. Metcalf, M. E., in the March Technical World Magazine; "the railroads of the United States ordered new locomotives to the number of 6,300, together with 3,300 passenger cars and 340,000 freight cars. These last figures give a good idea of the relative importance of passenger and freigh traffic to a large railroad. The rail mills started the new year with orders for 2,500,000 tons on their books. "In spite of these great orders and in spite of the best efforts of the railroad managers, pile after pile of thousands of bushels of corn has been heaped up on the ground in Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska for want of storage room or transportation facilities; while in North Dakota alone, over a million bushels of wheat has rotted on the ground for want of freight cars to move it."

Reform in College Athletics.

The aim of the reformers in school and college athletics should be clearly and directly the betterment of conditions, not the extirpation of the love of combat which is inherent in the nature of mankind. The notion that hard general work, resulting in full muscular development, saps vitality, weakens the organs and is a wearying incubus to the individual is so illogical as hardly to deserve an answer, remarks the Boston Post. But some persons believe this. Such should pity the wild animals that, guided only by an instinctive physiological need, run, jump, pursue and wrestle with one another, thereby using and developing fully their whole bodies.

Extravagance for the Dead.

Burial customs were once modest with our people. But complicated and costly living appears to have made simple dying impossible, remarks the New York Mail. We run to weak ostentation in the surroundings and trappings of mortality. It is necessary to obtain this, to purchase that; it is the only good form, nothing else will do. It is the consideration of the living that we think about, not the simple respect due the dead. We forget that the costlier the earthly memorial we erect the shallower may be the record that we cut upon the tablets of our hearts.

Watch Speaks Time.

A Swiss watchmaker has invented a watch which speaks the time from a tiny phonograph. A very small hard rubber plate has the vibrations of the human voice imprinted on it, and is actuated by clockwork, so that at a given time the articulation is made, indicating the hour. The utterance is sufficiently strong, to be heard 20 feet away. It is possible by means of a device of this kind to combine sentiment with utility, as the vibrations can be made by any clear voice, and a man's watch may tell him the time in the tones of wife or children.

Eye-Openers.

An aged Scotch minister, about to marry for the fourth time, was explaining his reason to an elder. "You see, I am an old man now, and I canna expect to be here verra lang. When the end comes I wad like to have some one to close my eyes." The elder nodded and said: "Ah! weel, meenister, I have had twa wives, and baith of them opened mine!"

Pretty Baby Blanket.

A very pretty baby blanket is a square of white elderdown flannel, having three rows of white flowered ribbon, which were appliqued on by baby ribbon in cross stitch down each side of the ribbon. It was finished all around the edge of the blanket by a large white silk cord.

Cabbage-Head.

"I want to get a head of cabbage,' said the man who had been sent to market.

"Large or small head?" asked the grocer.

"Oh, about 7¼," said the man, absent-mindedly.—Yonkers Statesman.

HARVARD WINS RACE FROM YALE

VICTORY SWEET, INDEED, COMING AFTER YEARS OF DEFEAT TO CRIMSON.

YALE ROWED A GREAT RACE

THE KILLING PACE PROVED TOO MUCH FOR TWO YALE MEN, WHO COLLAPSED.

New London, Conn., June 30.—Harvard's varsity triumphed over Yale yesterday before the greatest crowd that ever gathered here on a race day, and, coming after years of defeat, victory was sweet indeed to the crimson.

It was a great Yale crew that Harvard defeated, a crew that had broken all records on the Thames in practice and went to the stake boat a favorite, and last night Harvard's joy was unconfined.

To Capt. Filley and Coach Wray the supporters of the crimson are offering the greatest tributes that ever athletic heroes received.

Yale Rowed Great Race.

Harvard won, but Yale rowed a race yesterday afternoon that will long live in the annals of college sports. Not once from the start until the last sixteenth of a mile did the shells cease to lap each other. The men in the rival boats could see each other for more than three miles and a half, as first one coxswain and then the other called upon his crew for leg drive and body swing to push his shell ahead. Then, and only then, did Harvard really get the lead, for the killing pace proved too much for two of the Yale men and in the final spurt Boulton and Noyes of the blue were done, their oars literally slipping away from them.

Yale Men Collapse.

Here Harvard began to open clear water between the two shells and in the last ten or fifteen strokes of the race she pulled away from her rival. Noyes, Yale's No. 6, absolutely exhausted, began to miss the stream on the catch and swing his oar through the air.

He sat up in his seat until the flag dropped, and then he fell backward into the boat like a dead man. Chase, at No. 5, raised Noyes' head and dashed some water on him, but he remained unconscious for a considerable length of time. All the way down the last mile and a quarter the Yale coxswain had been throwing water into Boulton's face, and when Coxswain Barkalow finally yelled "Vast!" Boulton fell forward on his oar. Dick Morse, Yale's captain, splashed water upon his men and called to them to sit up in the boat. He had lost the race and the dearest prize of his college career, but he was game to the finish

Harvard Men Go Wild.

Harvard's men, in the intoxication of their victry, did not stop when the flags fell, but rowed on under the draw bridge amid the din of hundreds of yacht whistles, the boom of cannon and the shouts of Cambridge men, who almost jumped out of the observation train into the Thames to get at their crew.

Harvard won the race by less than two lengths and a half. Her time was 23:02; Yale's, 23:11.

While the crews had the tide with them, they had a brisk quartering wind, which made fast time impossible. The record for the course is 20:10, made by the Yale crew in 1888.

MOST SERIOUS OUTBREAK YET

GARRISON AT OSOWIEC IN MUTINY—CZAR MUST DISMISS CABINET.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—Late last night it was reported that most serious disorders had broken out in the garrison of Osowiec, one of the great fortresses defending the Polish frontier against German invasion. Owing to the fact that the office of the general staff was closed when the report became current, and to the reticence of the military authorities, it has been impossible to obtain details of the reported mutiny; but an army officer intimated to the Associated Press that the affair was far more serious than any that has hitherto occurred.

The campaign which the opposition elements in parliament are waging to compel Emperor Nicholas to dismiss the Goremykin cabinet and accept the principle of a responsible ministry, promises soon to be crowned with success. But the emperor and court are being frightened into surrender, less by the violent attacks made on the government in the lower house than by the alarming spread of disaffection among the troops. When the Prebrobjensky regiment, "his majesty's own," pronounced its solidarity with parliament and its agrarian program in the big camp of the guard regiments at Krasenloe, caused the emperor's eyes to open and the court began realizing that there was only a step from that to declaring allegiance to parliament as against the government.

DITCH DIGGER'S PERIL.

Buried by Cavein and Not Rescued for Ten Hours.

New York, June 30.—Buried for more than ten hours under tons of earth and stone, Herman Fisher, a plumber, living at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, directed the work of his rescuers.

As the earth and stone began falling on Fisher, Patrick Ryan threw his body across the top, bracing his feet against one side of the narrow excavation and his shoulder against the other. In this way he stopped the cavein before his comrade had been completely buried.

Fisher, Ryan and two other men were laying water pipes in Richmond turnpike.

Chicago, June 30.—A cable dispatch to the Tribune from Paris says: The market in Limoges was yesterday filled with girls bargaining for the sale of their hair. It was the periodical hair fair, where dealers find the best tresses in the world.

The girls stood demurely, while dealers from Paris, Berlin, London, Moscow and elsewhere critically examined their hair. A price being agreed upon, they accompanied the buyers to appointed places to have their tresses cut off. The prices varied from 43 to 53 francs a pound.

One family unitedly parted with eighty-six pounds of hair, realizing for it over $900.

Hamilton, Ohio, June 30.—Several armed tramps captured north-bound freight train No. 82 on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad near Glendale yesterday afternoon, and at the muzzles of revolvers forced the crew to leave the train. They then started the train toward Hamilton. A large police squad was rushed to South Hamilton to intercept them, but they abandoned the train at Crestview, after running it ten miles, and escaped. The tramps have not been captured.

IS INDICTED FOR MURDER OF WHITE

HARRY K. THAW MUST STAND TRIAL FOR MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

WIFE REFUSES TO TESTIFY

FEARS TO HARM HER HUSBAND—NO TIME YET SET FOR THE TRIAL.

New York, June 30.—Harry Kendall Thaw was indicted yesterday for murder in the first degree for the killing of Stanford White last Monday night on the Madison Square roof garden. His wife, Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw, appeared as a witness before the grand jury, but begged to be excused from giving any testimony whatever. She was treated kindly by Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who did not insist that she should answer any questions. Thaw will plead to the indictment in court this morning.

No time has been set for the trial until District Attorney Jerome's return to the city.

Thaw Calmly Hears Testimony.

The grand jury's injury followed a perfuctory inquest, which rendered a formal verdict that White's death had been caused by young Thaw. The latter calmly listened to the testimony. When the jury had completed its verdict Thaw was recommitted to the Tombs without bail. His indictment was announced soon afterward.

Mrs. Thaw, following her appearance before the grand jury, crossed the Bridge of Sighs and entered the city prison to see her husband.

Mrs. Thaw Blocked by Crowd.

They talked together for a long while, and when Mrs. Thaw finally attempted to leave the great granite building she found her way blocked by the largest crowd, the police say, that has ever gathered about the structure. She was virtually held a prisoner by the inquisitive throng for thirty minutes, when reserves from many police precincts managed finally to clear a way for her.

Stanford White was buried yesterday with simple ceremonies at St. James, L. I., where he had a summer home. The services were held in the St. James Episcopal church and interment was made in the graveyard surrounding the quaint little edifice.

White's End Near, Anyway.

In the opinions of physicians who performed the autopsy on White's body, the life of the architect was shortened not more than two years by the bullets from Thaw's pistol. He was found to be suffering from Bright's disease, from incipient tuberculosis and from fatty degeneration of the liver

Thaw sent a message from the Tombs yesterday to Anthony Comstock, president of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, saying he had received a letter which it would pay Mr. Comstck to investigate. An agent of the society called upon Thaw yesterday afternoon, but was not admitted at the time. It was said that either the agent or Mr. Comstock himself might see Thaw to-day.

Mrs. Thaw Refuses to Testify.

Mrs. Thaw's appearance before the grand jury had been looked forward to with considerable interest, as it was thought she possibly would take advantage of the opportunity to throw some additional light upon the tragedy. When she appeared and requested to be excused from testifying, the jury took the view that for the purpose of an indictment her evidence was not necessary.

Without becoming excited in the least, but in a calm and rather forceful manner, she said clearly, with emphasis on each word:

Might Harm Husband.

"I hope you gentlemen will not insist that I shall answer any questions. I must respectfully decline to answer the questions you intend to ask me. I say this with all respect to you gentlemen."

Mr. Garvan then asked her:

"Why don't you wish to answer?"

Addressing the foreman, Mrs. Thaw replied earnestly:

"I might say something that might do harm to my husband, and a wife ought to do all she can to protect her husband. I beg of you not to insist in putting further questions to me, because if you do I will have to decline to answer."

Mrs. Thaw was excused.

Girls' Dormitory Burns.

Knoxville, June 30.—The girls' dormitory of Knox County Industrial school, situated just beyond the city limits, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. Fifty-eight girls sleeping in the building escaped without injury.

U. S. Court for China.

Washington, June 30.—The conference report on the bill establishing a United States district court for China was adopted by the house yesterday, which passed the bill.

PURE FOOD BILL IS AGREED UPON

CONFEREES OF SENATE AND HOUSE GET TOGETHER ON A MEASURE.

DRASTIC IN ITS PROVISIONS

HEAVY PENALTIES ARE PROVIDED FOR INFRACTIONS OF THE LAW.

Washington, June 29.—The pure food bill was agreed upon by the conferees of the senate and house yesterday and was reported to the senate just before adjournment. The house bill was taken as a basis and on this were grafted many of the sections of the senate measure.

The bill now makes it a misdemeanor for any person to manufacture, sell or offer for sale any article of food, drug, medicine or liquor which is adulterated or misbranded, or which contains any poisonous or deleterious substance.

It prescribes for each first offense a fine not to exceed $500, one year's imprisonment, or both, and for each subsequent offense a fine of not less than $1,000 or one year's imprisonment.

Shuts Out Impure Food.

The bill prohibits the introduction into any state or territory or the District of Columbia, from any other state, territory or district, or any foreign country, or the shipment to any foreign country of any article adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the act, under penalty of a fine not exceeding $200 for the first offense, and $300 or one year's imprisonment, or both, for each subsequent offense.

The bill also provides for examinations of specimens of foods and drugs in the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture. Owners are to be given hearings, and if it is found that any provisions of the act have been violated the secretary of agriculture is to certify the fact to the proper United States district attorney for action, and the adverse judgment of the court is to be published.

Held to Be Adulterated.

Confectionery is held to be adulterated if it contains any ingredient or coloring matter deleterious or detrimental to health. Foods are held adulterated if containing any substance reducing, lowering or injuriously affecting its quality or strength; when any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article; when any valuable constituent has been abstracted; when mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained to conceal damage or inferiority, or when any poisonous or deleterious ingredients are added.

Use of Preservatives.

The use of preservatives by external application is permitted when the directions for the removal of such preservatives are printed on the covering or the package. Food products are declared adulterated, if in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or of any portion of an animal unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if the product of a diseased animal or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter.

The term 'misbranded" applies to foods or drugs whose package or label bears any statement, design or device false or misleading, or if falsely branded as to place where manufactured or produced.

EIGHT-HOUR BILL FAVORED.

House Committee Reports O. K. on Labor Law.

Washington, June 29.—Chairman Gardner of the house committee on labor yesterday filed a favorable report on the eight-hour bill. It is not expected that the measure will receive the consideration of the house this session. The report is in the main a reprint of the previus report on the same bill, with the addition of the remarks of the late President McKinley as a member of the house in 1890 in favor of an eight-hour bill then pending.

Many Railroads Charged With Violating Safety Appliance Law.

Washington, June 29.—Attorney General Moody has directed that suits be brought against a large number of railroad companies to recover penalties for violation of the safety appliance law, through failure to keep their equipment in proper condition.

The largest number of violations attributed to any railroad is fifty-two against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad company.

DESPERADOES BREAK JAIL

WIFE OF A PRISONER ASSISTS IN ESCAPE OF FOUR PRISONERS.

Richmond, Ky., June 30.—Through the assistance of his wife, J. E. Ball, of Middlesboro, Ky., one of the worst desperadoes of Eastern Kentucky, escaped from jail here last night, and James Sayler and Steve Turner, charged with murder, and James Turner, an alleged cattle thief, also escaped.

Mrs. Ball came to Richmond yesterday afternoon to see her husband, who was to have been taken to Frankfort in a few days to serve life imprisonment. When Turnkey J. E. Leads entered the cage to let out Mrs. Ball, she signaled to one of the prisoners to grab him and threw herself between the turnkey and her husband. A revolver was shoved in the turnkey's face and he was forced int the cell and the door closed. Mrs. Leads grabbed Ball and Mrs. Ball threw her arms around Mrs. Leads, holding her until the men had made their escape. Mrs. Ball was arrested. A posse is pursuing the fugitives.

REDEEM LIVES BY PRAYING.

Convicts Petition for Rain and Go Free When Showers Fall.

Chicago, June 30.—A cable dispatch to the Tribune from Tien-tsin says: Yuan Shih Kai, viceroy of Chi-li, has delivered an original judgment in the case of five prisoners who were liable to the death penalty. He gave them a chance to redeem their lives by praying.

It is a period of extreme drouth, and the viceroy ordered the men to pray for rain. If their prayers were not answered within three days they were to be executed. God mercifully sent a small rainfall and the prisoners were liberated.

The success of the experiment induced its repetition, and five other prisoners are now fervently praying for more rain on behalf of the community, but more particularly on behalf of themselves.

BEGS PARDON OF JAPAN.

Uxoricide Apologizes on Gallows for Disgracing Nation.

Honolulu, June 30.—Okomulu, Japanese, and Lorenzo Colon, a native of Porto Rico, both uxoricides, were hanged here yesterday. The Japanese, in a speech from the gallows, begged the pardon of his home government for having disgraced the nation and of the local government for causing it the trouble of executing him. Both men confessed to having murdered their wives.

Congress.

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

Thursday.

Washington, June 22.—An understanding was reached by the con ferees on the railroad rate bill last night which, it is predicted, will result in a complete agreement being reported to-day. The conferees will meet at 10 o'clock in the morning to draw up the agreement. It is the present purpose to have it presented to the house to-day that it may be printed in the Record, as required by the rules, that it may be called up for action Saturday.

There are yet three points which will receive discussion in the morning, but even on these the conferees know the position of their number so well that the result may be predicted with reasonable certainty.

Friday.

Washington, June 23.—The opposition to the committee amendment to the sundry civil bill appropriating $25,000 annually for the payment of the traveling expenses of the president which was begun by Senator McLaurin, resulted yesterday in the withdrawal of the amendment by Senator Hale, in charge of the bill, and the subsequent passage of the independent bill, providing practically for the same appropriation which was recently passed by the house of representatives.

Considerable other business was transacted, including the passage of the sundry civil appropriation bill. The bill as passed carries an appropriation of about $102,400,000. The bill also retains the house provision for a lock canal at Panama.

Pure food held the attention of the house throughout yesterday. The constitutional features of the pure food bill were debated by the leading lawyers of the house.

Saturday.

Washington, June 25.—The wheels of congress worked with unusual rapidity Saturday. There was the customary talk, but in both branches important action was taken and every energy seemed to be concentrated towards bringing legislative business to an end for the summer by Friday of this week.

In the senate the agricultural appropriation bill, containing the beef inspection amendment, was finally got to conference after several days' delay and several conference reports being acted upon.

It was in the house that interest centered. The substitute for the senate pure food bill was passed after much oratory with only seventeen dissenting votes, and the conference report on the railroad rate bill adopted. This, it is thought, precludes the possibility of the senate demanding that the measure be again sent to conference.

The senate in secret session confirmed, by a vote of 36 to 16, the nomination of B. F. Barnes, an assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, as postmaster at Washington. Mr. Gallinger (N. H.) was the only Republican to vote in the negative.

Monday.

Washington, June 26.—The senate yesterday discussed the conference report on the railway rate bill for more than four hours, but did not dispose of it. It was made evident, however, that another conference will be ordered.

The discussion dealt entirely with the anti-pass and commodity amendments, to both of which objection was made on various grounds.

Senator La Follette secured favorable action on a resolution extending the inquiry of the interstate commerce commission to the connection between the elevators of the Northwest and the railroads.

About 300 private pension bills were passed.

The senate held a night session and at 9:45 adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.

Under a rule limiting debate on all but two sections, the so-called immigration bill was discussed for three hours yesterday in the house and passed without a yea and nay vote being permitted on any of the paragraphs.

Tuesday.

Washington, June 27.—After two or three more speeches on the conference report on the railroad rate bill the senate yesterday sent the bill back to conference, again designating Senators Tillman, Elkins and Cullom as conferees. During the day the naval appropriation bill, which has been in conference for several weeks, was finally passed.

Under a rule limiting debate on all but two sections, the immigration bill was discussed for three hours in the house and passed without a yea and nay vote being permitted on any of the paragraphs.

New York, June 24.—Reports have been numerous recently that Charles M. Schwab would enter politics as a candidate for United States senator from Nevada. Mr. Schwab arrived in New York yesterday from Europe, and when asked concerning the story replied: "I have no political aspirations whatever."

NEWS OF THE STATE.

STRANGE CASE REPORTED.

Illegal Fishers Try to Escape the Penalty.

A peculiar case was reported to Sam Fullerton, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, and as a result, two suits, one civil suit for the recovery of money collected and one criminal prosecution, will be brought against a justice of the peace in Cass county. According to the report from J. P. Saunders, a deputy game warden, he found two men fishing illegally in Gull lake.

On June 10 he made complaint and swore out warrants for their arrest. The sheriff was busy and unable to serve the warrants at once, but a few days later telegraphed that he would have the men in Walker before Judge Wright. When the men were brought there it was alleged that J. H. Hallett, a justice of the peace in the town of Homebrook, Cass county, had during the week induced the men to come before him and each one made complaint against the other, one complaining that the other had caught two fish illegally and the other that the first had caught five fish illegally. In the complaint they gave the same date as the date on which they had done the fishing for which they were arrested.

Before Judge Wright they testified that the one who caught the two fish had paid a fine of $25 and the other a fine of $50, and that each of them had paid a fine of $1 and costs of 30 cents for breaking the Sabbath. They made the plea before Judge Wright that they could not twice be held for the same offense, and had to be released. But in the report of Justice Hallet to the county attorney it was stated that the fines had been suspended.

Sam Fullerton has taken the matter under consideration, and if the facts are found as reported a civil suit will be brought for the money the justice is alleged to have collected and also criminal prosecution for malfeasance in office.

$20,000,000 COPPER COMPANY.

Superior & Pittsburg Company Incorporated by Duluth Men.

The Superior & Pittsburg Copper company, a new Duluth corporation paid a filing fee of $10,025 to the secretary of state at the capitol last week. The fee is based on the capitalization, which is $20,000,000.

The articles were sent for filing by Billson & Congdon, a Duluth firm of attorneys, with a letter asking that they be immediately recorded and returned in time for an important organization meeting, which is to be held at Calumet, Mich., June 26, in the offices of the Calumet & Pittsburg Mining company. Though the headquarters of this mammoth concern are Duluth, the articles permit of a corporation office being maintained at Calumet.

The incorporators are Thomas F. Cole, W. W. Billson and Chester A. Congdon, all of Duluth.

The first board of directors is made up as follows: Charles Briggs, James Heatson, Thomas Heatson, Gordon R. Campbell and Peter Rupe, all of Calumet, Mich.; Thomas F. Cole, Charles d'Autremont, Jr., Chester A. Congdon, all of Duluth; George E. Tener and Henry R. Rea, both of Pittsburg.

The corporation's limit of indebtedness is fixed at the same figure as its capitalization, $20,000,000.

FIT IMPERILS FOUR LIVES.

Fisherman Falls and Companions Upset Boat in Helping Him.

As the result of a stout fisherman being suddenly taken with vertigo, four men had narrow escapes from drowning in Cedar Island lake, near Sparta. John Gehringer, William Zellar, John Hilary and Frank Burkholder, all from the southern part of the state, were in a skiff on the lake, engaged in fishing. Hilary, who weighs 210 pounds, was seized with a fit of vertigo and fell over the side of the boat, but not entirely overboard. His head was in the water, while his feet and legs remained in the boat.

Zellar tried to lift the prostrate man back into the skiff, but was unsuccessful. Gehringer and Burkholder then went to his assistance, and while the three were trying to haul Hilary back into the boat the skiff was overturned and all fell into the water.

Zellar, Burkholder and Gehringer were all good swimmers, but, handicapped with heavy clothing, and it was with much difficulty that they succeeded in reaching shore with their helpless companion. They finally succeeded, however, and after working over Hilary for half an hour he was resuscitated.

25 NURSES QUIT MADHOUSE.

Strike Is Declared at Fergus Falls but May Not Last.

A small strike occurred at Fergus Falls last week, twenty-five of the female nurses at the insane hospital tendering their resignations. One of their number thought she was not being fairly treated and the others walked out with her. Five of them repented and were taken back within a few hours, and it is said that the others are weakening. The walkout came as a complete surprise.

MEANS MUCH TO MINNESOTA.

President Barnard of the Drainage League Tells of Work.

Millions of dollars, an additional acreage as large as Massachusetts in size, and 100,000 settlers are three of the benefits which A. G. Barnard, president of the Minnesota Drainage league, expects to realize from a hard season's work at Washington and as a result of the drainage bill.

Mr. Barnard has been in Washington all winter in the interests of the league and the state.

"My work," said Mr. Barnard, "has been important for the state. We secured an appropriation of $15,000 for the topographical survey of the Red lake Indian reservation, and I also assisted Congressman Steenerson in drafting and pushing a drainage bill which received the co-operation of thirteen states. This was finally withdrawn and the Minnesota drainage bill was submitted, and we secured favorable report in spite of the opposition of the land commissioner and the secretary of the interior. By this bill all proceeds of lands after June 30, 1905, are to be reserved and set aside as a special reclamation survey fund for the examination and construction of means to improve lands in the northern part of the state.

"Seven millions acres of land belonging to the government are held in trust for the Indians, and 3,500,000 acres in the same part of Minnesota are held by the state.

"The work is to be laid out by and under the supervision of the state authorities, and the expenditures are to be under the direction of the secretary of the interior. This all dovetails well with the state's plan of eventual reclamation of its entire swamp area. It will add an area equal in size to the state of Massachusetts."

LABELS MUST BE TRUTHFUL.

Deceptive Trade Marks Are Against the Law.

The decision of the state supreme court affirming the right of the state dairy and food commission to condemn "evaporated cream" unless it has 20 per cent of fat, will have far-reaching effect in the work of the commission. Commissioner E. K. Slater says it will be a big help in the work and give the officers authority to enforce some rulings which they have heretofore been somewhat dubious about. The principle established will apply to a large number of things besides evaporated milk. In fact, it gives the commission a right to declare illegal practically all goods which have deceptive labels.

The manufacturers in this evaporated cream case and in many food cases have contended that a name which was established as a label and trade-mark before the passage of the present food laws cannot be put under the ban by the commission. Many food products are sold under a name which is deceptive, although a label under it in finer print may correct any misstatement in the brand. The milk company involved in this suit had "evaporated cream" in large letters on the can, and in smaller type stated that the contents is evaporated milk. The company argued that it complied with the law by stating that the product was evaporated milk and that the words "evaporated cream" is part of the trade-mark.

Consumptives' Sanitorium.

Dr. G. W. Weiser of New Ulm, one of the members of the commission selected to provide a state sanatorium for consumptives, has been notified that the bids for the erection of the building will be let July 5. Soon after that date he will meet the other members of the commission and go to Walker to locate a site for the sanatorium on the tract of land that has been provided by the state for the purpose.

It is contemplated at this time to erect only one wing of the building as planned by the commission, and add to it as fast as the needs of the institution require. The commission has selected 700 acres of land on a bluff some 250 feet above the water and thickly timbered. It is the choice of several sites considered by the commission.

Delay has been occasioned from the fact that when the commission desired to obtain title to the land it was found that a tract of forty acres was still government land, and a special act of congress had to be secured in order to get it. The government has given the commission the use of the land, but if the sanatorium should at any time be discontinued and the land sold this particular piece will revert to the government for homestead purposes. Dr. Weiser is of the opinion that the buildings will be up and ready for use by early fall.

VISITORS FROM AMERICA.

How They Have Been Entertained in Norway.

Norwegian newspapers devote long articles to the homecoming of hundreds of Norwegian-Americans to witness the coronation of King Haakon and Queen Maud. "Verdens Gang" tells of the welcome to Hellig Olav of the Scandinavian-American line at Christianssand, where the visitors were invited to attend a big fest at St. Hanshaugen, Christiania, and to participate in a movement for the creation of a Norwegian association to cover the entire world. Among those on Hellig Olav are named T. Guldbrandsen and family of Minneapolis, Dr. Anders Daae, Chicago; B. Amundsen and K. J. Haugen, Decorah, Iowa; Halle Stensland, Madison, Wis., and Thomas Stavrum, La Crosse. Other well known people were reported on the way, among them F. H. Gade of Chicago, accompanied by 500 others from the United States; Dr. H. O. Fjelde, Abercrombie, N. D., with 400, and Per O. Stromme with 500 more. In all upward of 2,000 Norwegians were expected.

The Feast at St. Hanshaugen on June 5 was a brilliant success. The popular park was full of people, and the American and Norwegian flags flew in profusion from every available place. After a sexa to some of the more distinguished visitors, the entire gathering assembled before the music pavilion from which the addresses were made.

In the gathering were Premier Michelsen, Foreign Minister Loevland, President Berner, Admiral Borresen and many other notable people. After calling for cheers for the king and queen the king's hymn was sung under the leadership of O. A. Grendahl and the students' chorus. Dr. Boegh in a few eloquent words spoke of President Roosevelt and was cheered to the echo.

President Berner spoke at some length on the relationship between the Norwegians on both sides of the Atlantic and extended the most cordial greetings to the sons and daughters of Norway who had found a home in another land, but whose sympathy and love for the mother country had been shown on many occasions. They had been a credit to their native land in their new homes, and Norway was proud of them. The time was ripe for the organization of an association with branches in all parts of the world for the preservation and encouragement of Norwegian culture. The moral support that Norway had received from all parts of the world during the trying days of last year was fully recognized and the events had brought the people closer together than ever before, although they were separated by great distances. The speaker closed with a call for cheers for the visitors, which were given with great enthusiasm.

Dr. Anders Daae responded in behalf of the Norwegian-Americans. The large company which had arrived with those on the way to Norway, testified to some extend of the feeling toward the other land. There were in the party persons who had not seen Norway for more than forty years, but whose love was still as strong as when they left. It was with sadness that they had gone, and although they had acquired a fair measure of prosperity in America, which they regarded as their home, they still had a place for Norway in their hearts. There were more than a million Norwegians in America and they supported many fine colleges, charitable institutions and no less than 1,200 churches. Last year they had planned to organize a defense union for Norway, although it was not publicly announced. Happily the crisis was peacefully settled and the treaty at Karlstad prevented a war.

At the conclusion of the address Dr. Daae placed the Stars and Stripes over the breast of President Berner while Mr. Amundsen likewise decorated Premier Michelsen, while the gathering cheered lustily and long.

The Danish Elections.

While the government party lost a few seats through the recent elections in Denmark, it is believed that the Christensen ministry will be continued in power with the aid of the Moderate party. Christensen's principal strength has come from the rural districts, and it is this element which will be in control. In the election of members of the folkething the Reform party secured fifty-five seate, with a net loss of three, the Social-Democrats twenty-four, the Conservatives thirteen, the Moderates, who are expected to vote with the government, nine, the Radicals nine, and there are three independents.

Hudiksvall Destroyed.

A fire started last Sunday night in the little city of Hudiksvall, and, fanned by a strong easterly gale, spread with such rapidity that all efforts to extinguish it were fruitless. Practically the whole town was wiped out and 1,500 families were made homeless. The fire extended to the borough of Avik, where 2,000 persons were burned out. The Hudiksvall Lumber company's large factory and a large amount of lumber were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at about $2,000,000.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$. OO Per Year, in Advance.

Cole's brother is chairman of the Republican state central committee. He will need the assistance of the whole Damn family.

It is the history of county seat fights that they last for years but just because she didn't get it when she asked for it. Thief River Falls is doing the baby act to a frazzel.

Has any one ever discovered a crooked attorney who has not a good excuse to offer when his client got left?—Plummer Pioneer.

And not always a good excuse either.

It is so difficult in the measure of the ebb and flow to ascertain the true drift of political sentiment, that it is surprising how many papers know such with certainty that one particular man is going to be elected.

The man who killed Stanford White denounced him as a fat scoundrel. Others refer to him as the most lovable man of his time. It is barely possible that the most lovable man of his time can also be a fat scoundrel.

The Thief River Falls papers are in the same boat with their attorneys. They have made so many promises about the county seat matter coming to a vote that they have had to hunt up a scapegoat. That accounts for the animus they display toward County Auditor Ford.

There was absolutely nothing that County Auditor Ford did or left undone that had the slightest effect upon the decision in the injunction case. Nor was it altogether the incompetency of the Thief River Falls attorneys. They had promised more than they could perform and would throw the blame of failure on the auditor. It is a mean, low, dirty, contemptible, dog's trick.

He is a fool who never changes his mind, but changes ought to follow some line of logical development. A change ought to mean something more than a flip or a flop. For instance, can Candidate Cole say that he left the Democratic party for any other reason than pique and disappointment? It is not easy to understand how an ardent Bryan and Lind supporter in 1896 and 1900 can be a consistent Republican in 1906.

The Republican papers are busily engaged in the arduous task of proving that while Jacobson was defeated by the intervention of the "interests," Cole's nomination has no suspicion of corporation influence. If Mr. Cole is a sincere reformer he has never given any indication of the fact at any stage of his variegated political career, either as a Populist, Democrat or Republican. It is a safe guess, too, that the corporations knew what they were about when they nominated Cole.

The Republican press is excusing Cole's former Democracy on the ground that John Lind and Frank A. Day were once Republicans. One thing stands out distinct and vivid. John Lind and Frank Day left the Republican party because they were no longer in sympathy with it. Cole left the Democratic party five years ago because of pique and personal disappointment. Because he was not nominated for senator by the Democrats of Morrison county he vented his spite by going to the Republicans.

Appropo of nothing in particular the COURIER preposes this toast to woman:

She is like an exquisite harp of gold; touch the strings gently and she responds in music like the plaintive vibrant sigh of an aeolian; strike upon all the chords with might and there is a crash like a Wagnerian symphony, but if the motif is there the touch of the one true artist brings harmony out of what, to others, is discord; play upon them, now soft and low, now quick and strong, and the grand harmonious whole is like a sea of melody lapping the strand of silence as the starry waves lap a sleeping shore at midnight.

GOOD MAN TO VOTE FOR.

Austin Heuald, (Rep.): Outside of the regular bunch of politicians no one in Mower county cares much who is named at Duluth this year. The Democrats are sure to renominate Johnson so that there is one man to vote for no matter who the Republicans may name. Were it not for this fact there would be less apathy about tha state.

A GOOD JOKE.

Little Falls Herald: Some holders of stock in Canadian land companies were strong for Cole, the development man. Good joke!

COLE AS AN EFFECTIVE SPEAKER.

The Little Falls Transcript of September 18, 1896, shows how effective a speaker A, L. Cole is. The Transcript said that after a debate with J. H. Rhodes at Lincoln, Morrison county, Cole speaking for the Democratic side, "nearly every person in the room signed the roll of a McKinley club."

COLE AND THE INTERESTS.

Henning Advocate, (Rep.): Hon. J. F. Jacobson, whom the people in the rural districts wanted for governor, and who had a following of 408 votes on the third ballot, was defeated. Because he would not accede to certain demands made upon him by the delegations from the large cities he was marked for the slaughter and his defeat was accomplished. Mr. Jacobson is an honest man and would not compromise himself in any manner, although the position of governor was at stake. This action on his part will be remembered with kindly gratitude by his army of friend-admirers. The man who is evidently willing to do the bidding of the corporations in the large cities and who was nominated for governor is A. L. Cole of Walker.

NOMINATED BY CORPORATE INTERESTS.

Redwood Reveille, (Rep.): "The state convention, at the behest of corporate interests, disregarded the will of the people in almost flagrant manner. The turning down of J. F. Jacobson was one of the most disreputable acts ever committed within the borders of this state by any political gathering. Other things followed in the train of this act which showed the hand of the corporations' but Jacobson's defeat stands pre-eminent as a bare-faced political outrage. Whether candidate Cole was a party to these disreputable tactics, the Reveille is unable to say. The fact remains that he was nominated by corporate interests which arrayed the cities against the country, the combines against the people."

EASY TO DECIDE.

Ada Herald: Governor Johnson will come before the voters of Minnesota for re-election this fall. He will come with untied hands as a candidate who aspires to the honor of the first citizen of the state on his merits and not as the result of any combination of political powers. It will be easy for citizens who place worthiness above political jobbery to decide how they shall cast their ballot next November.

JOHNSON'S ADMINISTRATION POPULAR.

Woodstock News, (Rep.): While it is an admitted fact that the discord that marked the Republican state convention of two years ago was not apparent in the Duluth convention, yet it is not an admitted fact that the people have "too much Johnson." Verily not! No man ever stood higher in the estimation of the people of a state than does John A. Johnson. His administration has been one that has met with popular approval and party lines will not be sufficient to convince the people that a change should be made. And "for the sake of the party" is the strongest cry the Republicans are offering.

Slaves of the Orient.

"In Zanzibar and Pemba slaves are very slow to take advantage of the regulations that give them the right to claim their freedom," says a traveler. "They realize that so long as they are well used their position is superior to that of the man whose freedom is his sole asset. I have found the same attitude in north Africa. From Morocco to Tripoli one sees most of the slaves well content and flourishing. The famine, the locusts, the drought and the tax collector have no terror for them. Work keeps them healthy, they have enough to eat and drink, and the future has no meaning at all. There is promotion, there are confidential missions to governors and friends that elevate a slave, if only in the eyes of his fellows, and there is always a chance of manumission when the owner dies and wishes to have some good deeds recorded in the books of Islam's recording angels. The sorry truth of the matter is that slaves under Mohammedan rule are much better off than they ever were under the rule of white men in America and elsewhere."

Poor Effort at Translation.

The English papers have lately been having fun with a new German-English and English-German dictionary. The best example of the work is said to be the translation of our word "gimcrack." According to the London Daily Chronicle four meanings have been given for this word, which, when translated back into English, are: "The handsome girl," "the bad machine," "the ordinary handshake," and "a magician."

Don't be fooled and made to believe that rheumatism can be cured with local appliances. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is the only positive cure for rheumatism. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.

Poison Made Body Luminous.

At the inquest of a man who died at the London Hospital recently from swallowing rat poison it developed that the whole of his body was luminous in the dark. The rat poison contained phosphorus.

AN EXCELLENT RAT TRAP.

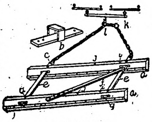
Home-Made Device Which Will Catch the Most Wary and Cunning Rodent.

The only kind of trap proved to the writer a complete success is the deadfall shown in the accompanying cut. It has been used in his family for nearly half a century, catching, during that time, an army of rats. Simple in construction, it is, nevertheless, so swift and deadly in its action that any rodent, having once sprung it, never escapes. Wonderful to relate, as many as eight rats have been caught in such a trap at one time, which, though it did not kill them, held them prisoners until they could be dispatched, says Fred O. Sibley, in Epitomist. The platform A should be about 20 inches square, and the drop B consist of hardwood plank with two holes bored through exactly middle-way, so that it will slide readily up and down the posts supporting the crosspiece H. Through the center of this is a hole for the similar action of the circular post D, which is securely embedded into B. A piece of light band-iron is G, which, when the trap is set, rests on the support H and, being loosely fastened to D at I by an iron pin, thus holds up the plank B. The rat enters and begins nibbling at Indian meal sprinkled in the groove of the platform at J, and finally reaching the spindle, hidden beneath it, agitates it enough to displace the bottom E on the outside; this, in turn, releases both the string F and band-iron G, the latter of which, owing to the weight of the plank B, is drawn upward into a groove, sawed middle-way through D by its sliding down the hole in the center of H and as the motion of B is then exceedingly fast, the victim, ere it can scramble over the sides round the platform, is caught and killed. Provided the affair is nicely adjusted and made so that it operates easily, there is no patented trap on the market, to my knowledge, half as good, for it has such an innocent appearance that the oldest and most cunning rat will ultimately be caught by it. To work well the spindle C should have a little play, and the more lightly the button E rests against the notch cut in it and yet will hold, the better. Made on a smaller scale, this kind of trap is also most excellent with which to catch mice.

HOME-MADE ROAD SCRAPER

It Will Do as Good Work as the High-Priced Grader, and Is Very Durable.

In the illustration a a are 3x12x8 feet long, bottom edge beveled with its hoe of steel ¼x4 inches, bolted on cutting edge as shown at g. The crosspieces, e e, are bolted with inch bolts in mortises 1x8, two inches from the top of a a, and made out of 1x4x30-inch iron, which has holes in front ends to fasten draft chain to, also a hole in e at the right-hand end to bolt brace, f, on, which is also bolted to the rear a at h. The guider, f, is 1x2 inches and six feet long, with holes in back end so the rear a can be changed at any time so it will properly follow front a. A seat board, b, is bolted to a a at i i when team is hitched at b for ditching, and at j j when smoothing up the roadbed. The right-hand ends of a a are sloped back 45 degrees to prevent catching in the bank of side ditch. If properly made of good material, this is very durable, and does almost as good work as a costly grader.—Farm and Home.



ROAD GRADER.

FARM FACTS AND FANCIES.

Farming is a poor business when the farming is poor.

Wire fencing is more durable and cheaper than wood.

A farmer without plans is next to a ship without a rudder.

One way to increase the profits in farming is to reduce the cost of production.

What per cent. of that seed corn do you think will grow? If you haven't tested it, you don't know.

The greatest saving of time is made by the use of the best tools in the preparation of the ground, planting the seed, and after cultivation.

It is much more profitable to keep land in good condition than to get it out of such condition by one-sided fertilization and then try to bring it back.

Time will be saved and you will be apt to be more careful in your selection if the seed corn is selected this month. If you intend buying seed, place your order now.

Every farmer should have his seed corn testing patch on which competing selections from his own fields and varieties secured elsewhere may be subjected to a careful field test under his own eye.

ECZEMA SKIN RAW AND FEVERISH-ITCHING INTENSE

Eczema is a tormenting, stubborn disease caused by an acid humor in the blood coming in contact with the skin and producing redness, inflammation and almost intolerable itching. An inactive state of the system and sluggish condition of the eliminative members leaves the waste and refuse matter of the body to collect and sour instead of passing them off through nature's channels of bodily waste. The blood in its efforts to purge the system of all foreign matter absorbs this acid and throws it off through the pores and glands of the skin. The acrid humor seems to ooze out and set the skin on fire, the straw colored, sticky fluid drying and forming crusts, and the itching is intense. When these pustules are scratched off the skin is left raw and feverish and often a solid sore is formed and kept up by the constant escape of acids from the blood. Local applications of salves, powders, lotions etc. are desirable and should be used because they allay the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative, because they cannot reach the seat of the trouble, which is in the blood.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE.

S. S. S. goes down into the blood, cleanses the circulation of all acids and humors, builds up the thin, sour blood and by removing every vestige of the cause cures Eczema permanently. The irritating eruptions disappear, the itching and burning cease, and the acid-fired skin, being fed by a fresh, cooling stream of blood, becomes soft and smooth again. S. S. S. is made of healing, purifying roots, herbs and barks that will not damage any part of the system. Book on skin diseases and any medical advice free.

RECORD TIRE CO CHICAGO

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

"I have ventured to call upon you," said the stranger, in a voice of rare melody and sweetness, "with respect to your tenancy of this house. I spend most of my time in Paris, but I am looking for a pied-a-terre near London, and the agent to whom I applied tells me that you are willing to dispose of the remainder of your lease."

"Yes," said Truscott, "I want to dispose of the house as it stands, if I can find a customer. The fact is, I'm going to get married, and I want a bigger place. I'm furnishing the Hall at Manor Wantage, and I'm ready to clear out at any moment."

"I could have possession in a month?" his visitor asked.

"Yes," said Truscott. "That could be easily arranged. I want to keep nothing but a few old prints and books—and this," he added, laying a hand upon the desk.

"An old friend?" said Brangwyn, sympathetically.

"My first purchase when I settled down to work ten years ago. An old friend, as you say, and in a way a sort of a mascot of mine."

"Well, Mr. Truscott," said Brangwyn, rising as he spoke, "we can each appoint a valuer, and may come to a conclusion of the business."

"You would like to see the place?" Truscott responded. "If you like I'll show you over." In his own thorough-going way he took his visitor from attic to basement. "It's a small place," he said. "I have to board out my groom and my chauffeur."

"I need neither," said Brangwyn. "A plain cook and a maid servant will serve my turn."

"There's rather a pretty garden," Truscott went on, "and a nice little stretch of lawn stretching to the river. If you'll come this way I'll show you."

He had forgotten Billery for the moment, and as he led the way he felt a keen sense of resentment and distaste at the sight of the sprawling, sleeping figure in the arm chair in the breakfast room. In spite of the widely opened French windows, the room reeked with the sleeper's whisky-laden breath. Billery, who was half-choked by a high, tight collar, was snoring stertoriously. Truscott, though habitually a man of perfect self-possession, felt in a shame-faced way that it was necessary in some measure to account for him. Brangwyn's fine nose was wrinkled in repugnance and Truscott felt savagely humiliated.

"A member of my staff on the 'Record,'" he said. "He came down here to-day on business, and I was injudicious enough to leave him with the decanter."

"I know him," Brangwyn responded, as he passed into the garden. "His father and my great uncle were great friends, despite a certain disparity of years." He stood bareheaded in the evening light and looked about him. His careworn and suffering aspect was more apparent here than it had been indoors. His half-bald dome of forehead was deeply ploughed with lines of pain, and that intent and listening look lingered in his eyes longer than it had done. It passed, and he turned to his companion with a touching and melancholy smile which looked half like the expression of an inward pang. "I heard casually a year or two ago," he resumed, "that our young friend there was going to the dogs. I should judge him to be pretty near the kennel now."

"Heaven help him," said Truscott, with a gust of genuine feeling. "I suppose so." They strolled in silence to the margin of the river, and there the tenant of the place turned suddenly upon his guest. "Mr. Brangwyn," he said, "it is a singular coincidence which brings you to my house to-day."

"Indeed?" asked Brangwyn, lifting his arched eyebrows in a faint surprise.

"I have been thinking that you could hardly fail to feel it strange when you come to read the news which is in my possession, if I made no allusion to it. Its publication will take place on Monday morning, and there is no one in the world whom it concerns more nearly than yourself."

"Indeed?" asked Brangwyn a second time.

"The news will bring a painful shock with it," said Truscott, "but you ought to know it, because it will fall to you, as the head of your family, to institute inquiries."

"Be at no pains to prepare me for any news you have to offer me, Mr. Truscott," Brangwyn answered him.

"Well," said Truscott, "the fact is that the body of your great-uncle and namesake, Mr. Aloysoum Brangwyn, has been discovered, under conditions even more mysterious and inexplicable than those which surrounded his disappearance. It was Billery who brought the news, and I had his narrative before me when you called."

"At last!" said Brangwyn, almost in a whisper; "and after all these years." It occurred to Truscott that he took the news oddly, and showed a strange want of interest as to the circumstances in which the man so long missing had been found. But that half-formed thought vanished when Brangwyn next spoke. "I have always known that this would happen. I have known in my inmost soul that heaven would not forever wink at murder. my uncle met with foul play. How he met with it and in what guise, only the murderer knows. . This discovery is the first link of a chain which will drag the blood-guilty to the gallows. I have waited in the certainty that it would be made, and I have felt lately that the time was near at hand." He spoke as if he was communing with himself, and though his glance was directed full on Truscott, he seemed to look through and beyond him, rather than to meet his eye.

"Upon my word," thought Truscott, to himself, "this is rather an eerie sort of a gentleman."

"Will you tell me where and how the body came to be found?" Brangwyn asked, as if suddenly waking from a dream.

Truscott told the story, as it was set forth in Billery's manuscript, but more tersely, and without ornament. Brangwyn listened in dead silence, with now and then a nod of the head which seemed to indicate a mental check of details as they succeeded one another. He drew a long sigh when the story was over, and held out his gloved hand to Truscott in farewell.

"You may know some day to what extent I am indebted to you, Mr. Truscott," he said, as he shook hands. "Just one point before I go. I understand that no one but this fellow Billery has yet identified the body, and that as a journalist he has kept his own counsel for professional reasons."

"That is so," said Truscott.

"And I suppose that for professional reasons you would prefer that I should make no motion in the matter until your news has become common property?"

"I should certainly prefer that," Truscott answered; "and I am obliged to you for thinking of it."

"It will not be long to wait," said Brangwyn, in the same strange, inward tone with which he had spoken earlier. "It will not be long to wait."

He roused himself again and, side by side with his companion, walked toward the house. As he passed into the breakfast room he looked at Billery with an expression of disdain. Reaching the hall he took his hat from the table on which he had placed it on his entrance.

"You will hear from my agent early in the week," he said at parting. "It will be more needful than ever now that I should be within easy reach of London."

Truscott opened the door for him and watched him as he walked to the gate. In spite of the pallor and the expression of long-endured suffering in his face, he walked with a resolute and elastic step. He passed out of sight, and Truscott closed the door and went back to his study, where, feeling himself no longer capable of repose, he attacked a great stack of correspondence, and read and wrote until the announcement of dinner brought his labors to a close.

The summer night had fallen and the full moon was rising over the river meadows when he sat with slippered feet, racing through the latest editions of the evening papers. Each and all had a fac-simile paragraph headed "Gruesome Discovery," but there was no hint of the identification of the body of Aloysius Brangwyn the elder. There was nothing in the details given to set the Sunday issues on the trail, and he experienced the satisfaction which all journalists feel in the exclusive possession of striking news. He was sure of a gigantic "boom" on Monday, and he owed it to Billery, who was still audibly choking in the next room. The ties of old association which bound him to Billery were strong, and Truscott, although unemotional and undemonstrative, was capable of a real friendship. He was planning ways and means of being of permanent help to his old comrade, when that victim of circumstances over which he had exercised no control began to give signs of a return to consciousness. The listener heard him stumbling about among the fire irons, and, taking a box of matches from the little smoker's table at his elbow, walked into the breakfast room and lit the gas.

"Oh," said Billery, with a simultaneous yawn and shiver. "I'm here, am I? I beg your pardon, Reggy. I hope I haven't been much of a nuisance to you?"

"You've been quiet enough," said Truscott. "Go into the next room and drink a cup of strong coffee. That will help you to pull yourself together."

Billery stood there, hang-dog, puffed, ashamed, with his eyes on the carpet, his hair in wild disorder, his shabby, cheap suit of reach-me-downs all wrinkled—a deplorable figure.

"I'd better go home," he said.

"Go into the spare room," said Truscott. Get a wash and make yourself fit to look at. Then come to me in the dining room."

His heart yearned over the old pal, but he hardened himself outwardly, and his tone was cold and masterful. Billery obeyed his injunction and went slowly up the stairs. Truscott ordered coffee and had a cold fowl set upon the table, and by the time his preparations were completed Billery returned. He drank his coffee with a zest, though he was still too much ashamed to face his companion's eyes, and he left the cold fowl untouched.

Truscott spoke more to put him at his ease than for any other reason.

"I had a visitor here this afternoon. No less a person than the nephew of the man whose body you identified this morning."

"Which of 'em?" asked Billery. "Alexis or Aloysius?"

"Aloysius Brangwyn was the man who called," said Truscott. "That's his card. He lives in Paris."

"I know," said Billery. "Rue de Bruxelles. What brought the saturnine beast here?"

"He wants a house not far removed from London. He thinks this place will suit him. He seems inclined to take it."

"Did you tell him about the discovery?" Billery was so far roused that he had forgotten his disgrace. He questioned eagerly.

"I thought he ought to know. He promised not to make any movement until the news was published."

"How did he take it?" Billery asked.

"Well, he said he had always looked forward to it sooner or later. He said he felt certain that his great uncle had met with foul play. He talked in a queer, raised kind of way, and he said that the discovery was the first link in a chain which would drag the blood-guilty to the gallows."

"Yes," said Billery. "I know his style. Was he—did he look scared?"

"No. Whatever else he was, he wasn't scared. Why should he look scared?"

"He was the only man to profit by the old gentleman's disappearance."

"Why, man!" cried Truscott. "You can't suggest that he had any hand in it! Don't you remember that he was living in Paris at the time, and came straight over when the news was wired to him?"

"Yes, I remember that. But—"

"But what?"

"Truscott," said Billery, "what are you going to pay me for to-day's work?"

"It's special work," Truscott answered, looking keenly at him as if in search of a reason for this sudden change of theme. "I've no doubt it will excite a good deal of interest. I'll give you ten guineas now, and if it pans out properly we'll talk about it."

"Ten guineas," said Billery, musingly. "Ten guineas. Yes, that will do it. But if I happen to want another, and if I wire to you from Paris for it, will you let me have it?"

"What do you want in Paris?"

"Reggy," said Billery, "I'm on the trail of a big thing. I'm going to forge another link in the chain Aloysius Brangwyn was talking about. No, you needn't look at me like that. I'm not seeing things through a decanter. Let me have the cheque now, please. I've a good deal to do in the meantime, and I must be in Paris to-morrow night."

"Give me the old understanding," said Truscott. "One month from now."

"One month from now," Billery echoed. "Not one drop of the infernal stuff shall pass my lips till the fifteenth of August. There's my hand."

"Good. I trust you. You can have cash if you like."

An hour later, whilst Aloysius Brangwyn was yawning fiercely in the gaiety stalls and the house round him reeked with laughter, Hamilton Billery was paying off the driver of a hansom at the head of a dilapidated street of houses near the river in the far east of London. And the thoughts of the two men met at the same point of interest.

Explained.

"Now, Tommy," said the fond mother, "look at that little man over there. He doesn't go around playing with bad boys on the lots and lumber piles. Look how white and clean his hands are."

Tommy looked at the soft, mushroom-like hands of the lad on the corner and then his brow contracted in a frown.

"Aw," he sneered, "that's one of them kids that their mothers keep home and make wash the dishes."

Too Much for Him.

Jack—Too bad about young Nay, isn't it?

Tom—What about him?

Jack—He was sent to the insane asylum last week.

Tom—You don't say. What was the cause of it?

Jack—He undertook to study Greek and shorthand at the same time and got the characters mixed.

Proper Authority.

"Say," queried the snake editor, "can you tell me where Griggsby hangs out?"

"No," replied the horse reporter. "Ask the obituary editor."

"Does he know?" asked the s. e.

"He ought to," answered the h. r. "The subject of your inquiry was buried about three weeks ago."

Knows Him.

Mother—Do you think you are true to Charlie in letting so many other men call on you?

Daughter—Oh, you don't know Charlie. If he thought he was the only man that wanted to call on me he'd break the engagement.

RODENT ENEMIES OF THE FARM AND WARFARE ON THEM

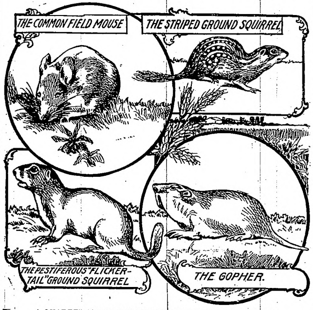
Two-Thirds of the Farm Area of the United States Suffers from the Depredations of the Little Animals.

Time was when the American farmer would have laughed to scorn the notion that he could be afraid of a mouse. And yet this is undeniably the situation in which he finds himself to-day.

There is a plague of meadow mice, which at periodical intervals assumes the proportions of an epidemic, the little rodents multiplying in enormous numbers and devouring the trees and crops. Such an epidemic recently extended clear across the country from Massachusetts to the Rocky mountain, the mice appearing in veritable armies. In the Mississippi valley they did hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of damage.

These are not the common field mice. They are of quite a different species—thick-set little fellows, with square heads and short tails. Assailed by them, the farmers are well-nigh helpless, inasmuch as they are too small and too numerous to be destroyed by guns, or by traps, or by poisons. For which reason it is that the department of agriculture is trying to find a new and effective means for wiping them out wholesale.

It is a microbe that is wanted—a bacillus which can be used to infect the rodent legions with a deadly and easily distributed malady. Such germs are obtainable—one of them has recently been employed with most satisfactory results in Europe—and the government experts are looking for a suitable kind. When it is obtained they propose to propagate it artificially, placing "cultures" of it in the hands of farmers perhaps, with instructions for using the stuff in such a way as to make it as detrimental as possible to the mice.



THE COMMON FIELD MOUSE
THE STRIPED GROUND SQUIRREL
THE PESTIFEROUS "FLICKER-TAIL" GROUND SQUIRREL
THE GOPHER.

A QUARTETTE BEFORE WHICH THE FARMER TREMBLES.

The meadow mice are especially destructive to fruit trees, the bark of which they know, but they also attack crops. They cut down the stalks of grain, spoiling in this way several times as much as they eat, and when the grain is harvested and left standing in shocks they take possession of the latter, building their nests in them. In winter they make tunnels under the snow, carrying on their mischievous work unobserved.

Now, the chief cause of the mouse plague seems to be found in the reckless killing off of the natural enemies of the little rodents, such as foxes, weasels, owls and hawks. Owls and hawks, which are among the best friends of the farmers, and the deadly foes of the mice, are destroyed whenever possible, bounties for them being actually offered in many of the states. In this way the balance of nature has been upset, and hence the enormous multiplication of the furry pests that occurs at intervals. The same remarks, indeed, apply to other kinds of gnawing animals which are at the present time eating millions of dollars worth of crops in this country annually.

In Florida, owing to similar causes, cotton rats have become vastly destructive. In fact, all along the gulf coast they swarm, and at times they multiply to such an extent as to amount to a literal plague, like the voles which from time to time have overrun parts of Europe. Living under cover of tall grass and weeds, around the edges of cultivated fields and along the banks of streams and ditches, they make bulky nests of grass on the surface of the ground or in underground burrows. They eat both the green and the ripening grain, and often their runways are fairly lined with cotton that has been pulled from the bolls and dragged under cover. Some of the cotton they carry away for their nests.

Nearly related to the cotton rats are the rice rats, which range as far north as the dismal swamp of Virginia.

Of much more serious importance than the mouse problem is another rodent pest that devours the crops to a greater or less extent over most of the west. This is the "spermophile," or ground squirrel—a small burrowing animal which eats pretty nearly everything that the farmer grows, and which will even carry off young chickens from the poultry yards when it gets a chance. Two species of these ground squirrels annually destroy from two to five per cent. of the grain crops in the state of Washington, and from four to ten per cent. of all crops produced in that state, where the total loss caused by them runs up into millions of dollars yearly. In the wheat fields (Washington raises about $15,000,000 worth of wheat per annum) the loss is at least one dollar per acre. All of which makes no reckoning of money spent in trapping and poisoning of the pestiferous creatures, which in a single county (Whitman) amounts to $500,000 each twelvemonth.

Twenty years ago Dr. Elliott Coues, a famous naturalist, wrote of some observations which he had made of one species of ground squirrel, commonly known as the "flickertail," on a journey through the northwest.

The evil in question is one of great magnitude over more than two-thirds of the United States. There are about 35 species of these ground squirrels, and one of the most destructive of them, the striped spermophile, has a special trick of digging up newly planted corn. In this way large fields of corn are often destroyed by them, and have to be planted over several times. It is the same way with wheat, oats, barley and rye. As the grains begin to develop soon after blossoming, the ground squirrels cut down the stalks and eat them. And later on, when the grain is hard, they carry quantities of it into their burrows, to be consumed at leisure. They dig up squash, melon and other seeds; and another little trick of theirs is to cut holes in nearly ripe muskmelons and watermelons, to get at the seeds.

Yet another rodent nuisance which does immense damage is the "gopher," a little animal, often confused with the ground squirrel, but which is altogether different, living underground like a mole and rarely appearing above ground. It is described by Dr. Merriam of the department of agriculture as one of the most ferocious of living animals. Apparently it is not afraid of anything, and it will even attack a man on slightest provocation and try to eat him up. Its tail is an organ of touch, and it can run backwards as rapidly as forwards. But the most remarkable thing about it, perhaps, is its battery of teeth, with which it is able to make 13,200 cuts a minute.

This remarkable creature is found everywhere in this country west of, and in, the Mississippi valley, and south of the Savannah river.

Here again the farmers have been making the mistake of killing off the weasels and harmless bull snakes, which are the worst enemies of the gophers. It is a favor which the gophers should highly appreciate, but for the interests of agriculture it is extremely unfortunate. Tillers of the soil in this country are the most intelligent and best-informed people of their class in the world, and it is high time they should realize the danger of interfering with nature too much. Nature makes abundant provision for regulating the numbers of animals and preventing their too rapid increase. But, in their blind efforts to arrange their friends instead of their foes—a kind of mistake which is largely accountable for the rodent plagues that are causing so much anxiety at the present time.

AN OPTIMIST.—Secretary Wilson is surely an optimist. He says: "The grasshoppers will soon find so much to eat, that they will not be noticed, and the hot winds will find so much fresh and green to blow against that they will be checked and cooled. * * * In 1910 the production per acre will be twice as great as it was in 1900."

FEEDING ENGLISH BACON HOGS.—In England, practically all the breeders of "bacon" hogs use dairy by-products as the principal feed in their stock.

COLORADO'S LAMB CROP.—Over a million lambs were raised in Colorado last year. In the San Luis valley alone there were over 300,000 sheep.

EARTHQUAKE RECORDS

GOVERNMENT GEOLOGICAL SURVEY COLLECTS HISTORY.

International Seismological Association Invites Delegate from America—The Apportionment.

Prof. Harry Fielding Reid of Johns Hopkins university, who is in charge of earthquake records for the United States geological survey, has sent out circular letters through which he expects to obtain important scientific data concerning the recent earthquake in San Francisco.

It may not be generally known that a few hundred dollars are devoted each year by the survey to the collection of records concerning earthquakes. No very active seismological investigations have ever been made by this bureau, but a small allotment is granted Prof. Reid, which enables him to correspond with observers all over the country and procure data recorded on seismographs at many different points. Reports of his investigations are published, from time to time, in the Weather Review, the official organ of the weather bureau.

It is interesting to note that Prof. Reid was appointed by the state department, as delegate from the United States to the international seismological conference held in Strasburg, Germany, from July 24 to 28, 1903. Delegates were present by invitation of the German government from 19 countries, and an international association was then formed for cooperative investigation of earthquake phenomena. The constitution adopted provides for a general assembly to meet at least once in four years and a permanent commission, composed of one delegate from each nation, which will direct the work of the association. A central bureau is located at Strasburg in connection with the imperial seismological station there, and reports are forwarded to its director and are published from time to time.

The association was joined by many countries but the United States has not yet signified its intention of becoming a member. The permanent commission or executive committee of the association was organized in Berlin last summer. Prof. Reid was present at that meeting also. After his return he recommended, as he did after his return from the Strasburg conference, that the United States join the association.

The director of the geological survey has recommended in a letter to the secretary of the interior, that the United States accept the invitation of the German government to join the international seismological association, provided that congress shall see fit to make the necessary appropriation. The total sum that congress is called on to appropriate annually is $1,300, which includes $800, the fee that the United States would be required to contribute to the association and $500 for the expenses of the delegate.

It is not likely that a delegate from the United States will ever have anything more important or more disastrous to report than the records of the earthquake which devastated the metropolis of the Pacific coast.

WHY POE LEFT WEST POINT

He Was Given to Escapades Out of Limits and Was Caught in the Act.

Several army officers were sitting in a New York hotel recently, discussing old times at West Point. The talk turned on the instructors who used to put them through their paces, relates Success Magazine.

"I shall never forget old Prof. Church," exclaimed one. "He always impressed me as being about a hundred years old, and I guess he was pretty well along, because one day, up in the library, when I happened to be looking at a portrait of Edgar Allen Poe, he informed me that he had taught the poet mathematics, and explained how the young man came to leave.

"It was as much of a crime in those days as now for a cadet to be off limits without permission. It meant dismissal. Poe, being an untamed spirit, couldn't resist the temptation to take a chance now and then and run down to a resort at Highland Falls. He and four other cadets stole off late, one night, and were having a high old time, when they heard a squad from the Point coming down the road. You can imagine the wild scattering. Two cadets sought the cellar, and two more the rooms above; Poe was small and was lifted into a convenient sugar barrel. The four other fugitives were quickly discovered. It was an afterthought on the part of the lieutenant in command to lift up the lid of the sugar barrel. He dragged Poe out and marched him, with the others, off to the guard house. He had offended before, and was regarded as the ringleader in the escapade, and so his career as a soldier came to an end."

"And a mighty good thing it was," exclaimed one of the listeners, "for the world of letters!"

Difficult Tongue.

Eskimo has the reputation of being a difficult tongue to understand, even more to speak. All manner of parts of speech may become joined to verbal roots and the whole may be conjugated like a simple verb—which is muddling to a foreigner. One missionary brought back a word which, when written on the blackboard, was quite 2½ yards long.—Boston Transcript.

FACTS GUARANTEED

Neuralgia and Anæmia are Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

For nearly a generation the people of this country have known Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, during which time proof of thousands of cures by this remedy has been published and confirmed and not one person has been harmed in the slightest degree by their use. The pills contain no opiate, narcotic or stimulant, nor any drug which could injure the most delicate constitution.

"For over a year," says Miss Charlotte Van Salisbury, of Castleton, N.Y., "I suffered from neuralgia and palpitation of the heart. My skin was pale and sallow and I was troubled with dizziness, fainting spells and fits of indigestion. I was very nervous and would start at the slightest sound. At times a great weakness would come over me and on one occasion my limbs gave way under me and I fell to the sidewalk.

"Of course I was treated by our local physicians and also consulted a noted doctor at Albany, but nothing they gave me seemed to benefit me. One day I read in a newspaper about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I immediately gave them a trial. I soon felt much better and my color had begun to return. I continued using the pills and by the time I had taken eight boxes I was entirely cured.

"My sister, Sarah Van Salisbury, suffered terribly from anæmia. She was pale and thin and we feared that she would become a victim of consumption. She tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and in a short time she began to gain in strength and weight. She is now strong and well and we both heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are in ill health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Descriptive pamphlets free on request.

Strains of Modern Life.

We must admit that the accessories of modern life in general are placing greater and greater strain on the faculties of the individual.

His eyes are strained by the intense artificial lights, his ears are worried by the unnecessary din of the streets, and his nose is offended by the vaporization of offensive fumes of oil or by the fetid air of the "tube." That simpler life appeals to him more than ever which removes him from the maddening sphere of the inventors' activities.—Lancet.

THE OLD KENTUCKY HOME.

Sons of the Bluegrass Will Be There for a Week.

"Old Home Week," which has become an institution in New England, has been adopted by the Kentuckians, according to Everybody's Magazine. Founders of states, dauntless pioneers, great by many names and in many ways—it would be painting the lily to praise the sons of Old Kaintuck; and the loveliness of the Kentucky women is beyond all praise. Land of colonels and rivers and mountains and blue grass; raiser of horses swifter than the wind and mint julips inimitable; rich in statesmen, big, fertile; she of the kind heart and the "glad hand"—come, come, we shall be dropping into poetry next, and Kentucky has poets enough of her own. This is to say, "homecoming for all Kentuckians who have wandered to other lands or foreign shores" is scheduled for Louisville this month. Judges and governors by the mile will be on hand. Henry Watterson is to make the main speech of welcome. "Don't you want to come home and see the folks?" You bet!

CLEVER DOCTOR

Cured a 20 Years' Trouble Without Any Medicine.

A wise Indiana physician cured 20 years' stomach disease without any medicine as his patient tells:

"I had stomach trouble for 20 years, tried allopathic medicines, patent medicines and all the simple remedies suggested by my friends but grew worse all the time.

"Finally a doctor who is the most prominent physician in this part of the state told me medicine would do me no good, only irritating my stomach and making it worse—that I must look to diet and quit drinking coffee.

"I cried out in alarm, 'Quit drinking coffee!' why, 'What will I drink?'

"'Try Postum,' said the doctor, 'I drink it and you will like it when it is made according to directions, with cream, for it is delicious and has none of the bad effects coffee has.'

"Well, that was two years ago, and I am still drinking Postum. My stomach is right again and I know Doctor hit the nail on the head when he decided coffee was the cause of my trouble. I only wish I had quit it years ago and drank Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Never too late to mend. Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee works wonders. There's a reason.

TONY'S FRIEND

By COSMO HAMILTON

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Burke stuck out his slippered foot, and with it pressed the button of the electric bell until the rheumatic servant hurried in.

"Is—is anything the matter, sir?" he gasped with his remaining breath.

"What's the time?" asked Burke.

The old man looked affectionately at Burke's good-natured face, with its blue, whimsical eyes, straw-colored mustache, and big cleft on the square chin, and took out his watch gravely. "It's past 12 by two and twenty minutes," he said.

"Twelve!" yelled Tony. "It can't be! The missus said she would be back straight from the St. James'. . . . It is, though. Twenty-three minutes past. I thought the print of that book was dancin' a bit."

"Perhaps madam has gone to supper with Lord Reginald, sir," said Pullen, with less meaning in his voice than he would have liked to convey.

"Are you going up now, sir?"

"Go before the missus? Not much, by Gad!" said Tony aloud, lying on his back among the cushions with his head in the palms of his hands. "Why, she's such a sensitive little beggar she'd think I was beginning to get indifferent or some such bunkum. Women are such quaint little jokers in that way. Tired of Enid! Ye gods! The earth will get tired of rain before I get tired of the best, the sweetest—She loves me, too, now. She didn't, of course. Everybody knows that. But she does now all right. Rather. . . . I can't help it. I know it's dashed selfish, with all this sickness and suffering about. But I'm as happy as—What?—what?—wh—"

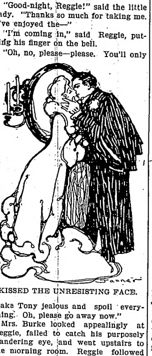
His eyes closed, his hands relaxed, his voice refused to work. Tony slept.

The big clock tolled one o'clock and half-past one before Mrs. Burke and Reggie Glynde returned.

"Good-night, Reggie!" said the little lady. "Thanks so much for taking me. I've enjoyed the—"

"I'm coming in," said Reggie, putting his finger on the bell.

"Oh, no, please—please. You'll only make Tony jealous and spoil everything. Oh, please go away now."



KISSED THE UNRESISTING FACE.

Mrs. Burke looked appealingly at Reggie, failed to catch his purposely wandering eye, and went upstairs to the morning room. Reggie followed her closely, shut the door, crossed the room to Mrs. Burke's side, and caught her hands eagerly. In the shadow, Tony's great form was unseen by both.

"It's not a bit of good, Enid. All that jargon about it being a foul thing to love the wife of your best friend doesn't have any weight with me now. I can't think about Tony and dishonor. I love you, and I know you love me. The devil take everything else. . . . There! Now you know in plain English what you've seen in my eyes, and what, God knows, I've done my best to hide for months. Don't try and pull your hands away. We can't help ourselves. It had to be, and it is. What's the good of kicking against the traces? Why struggle against fate? Now that I've told you, bang out, I'm glad. I feel as though some one had untied a great rope which has been cutting into my muscles. Kiss me now, will you?"

"No, no," cried Enid Burke.

Reggie bent down and kissed the unresisting face. His eyes were alight, and his sulky, determined expression had given way to one of almost boyish delight.

"Let's arrange to go away as soon as ever we can, darling. Tons of people have done it before. Why shouldn't we? Why should we be the only people in the world to pose as angels? Why should we be the only ones to resist and suffer, when we know that the first plunge is the only thing that matters? Life's so beastly short, let's make the most of it together. Of course, deep down in my boots I'd rather you had been any other man's wife than Tony's. He and I have been pals since we were kids. But he's not the kind of chap to mind—at least, not for long."

Enid's face was just as eager and excited as Reggie's, but there was something in her eyes which his didn't contain,—something which showed that she could see into the future—a kind of fear, perhaps.

"Oh, Reggie, how can I say I'm glad? Think of poor old Tony. I love you—I think I've always loved you; but what will poor old Tony do? I believe I'm all the world to Tony. Think of that."

"Think! What's the use of asking me to think?" cried Reggie. "Tony didn't ask me what I had to say to his marrying you; why should I think about what he'll say to my marrying you?"

"But you'll never marry me, Reggie. Tony will never divorce me."

Reggie kicked the fender impatiently. "Oh, well, what does it matter? Why argue? It can't be helped. We didn't fall in love with each other on purpose. It's—it's—I dunno what to call it. Fate, if you like. How soon can you come? To-morrow? the day after? Enid, you will come?"

Tears were streaming down Enid's face, but she clung tight to Reggie.

"To-morrow," said Enid Burke.

With a kind of shout he caught her tight, and was on the point of kissing her again and again, when something near the sofa in the recess fell with a crash. Enid flung him away, and turned towards the sofa with both hands to her lips.

Reggie turned too, with a gasp, and saw Burke sitting up, looking from one to the other in a dazed kind of way.

Burke sat rubbing his eyes, only half awake. Enid, as though turned to stone where she stood, hardly breathed, her fingers still on her lips, her eyes filled with a mixture of horror and pity.

As for Reginald Glynde, with head held high and a kind of sneer on his face, there he stood between his oldest friend and the wife of his oldest friend, tingling to the finger-tips with rage and devil-may-care.

"Well, we may as well settle this business straight away now, and have done with it. There's not much to choose between us, anyway. I think the decent thing to have done would have been to tell us you were here, instead of spying on us from dark corners. However, you haven't heard anything I mind your knowing, that's one thing."

"Heard?" said Tony, still only half awake.

"Oh, that'll do. It's not the faintest good pretending you weren't listening. You heard what I said to your wife, thinking you were in bed. To show you that I'm not afraid of saying it before your face, I tell you I love her more than anyone else on earth."

Tony sprang to his feet, with all the blood in his veins in his face.

"Yes," cried Reggie. "Put that in your pipe and smoke it. I've always loved her, and I've been waiting an opportunity to tell her so."

Tony, as pale as his shirt-front, slowly crossed the room and stood in front of his best friend. "Have you told her so?" he said.

"Yes, I have," said Reggie, looking him square in the face. "Here, to-night, as you, who spied on us from the corner, know very well. And more than that, you know that I have asked her to leave you—a man she doesn't love—and come away with me. Listeners never hear much that's pretty, do they?"

For an instant it seemed that Burke meant to take Reggie by the throat and shake the life out of him. His hands, tense, with the veins standing out upon them, went up, only to fall again almost instantly.

"Enid," he said, "go to bed, dearest. Reggie and I have something to say to each other alone."

Enid wavered, looking from one man to the other.

"Please," added Burke, holding the door open for her.

Mechanically Mrs. Burke picked up her fan and the programme of the theater and slowly left the room.

Tony shut the door calmly, turned quickly, and going back like a whirlwind, with a face twisted with an agony which brought beads upon his forehead, gripped Reggie's two shoulders, and cried: "Did she say she would go with you?"

Reggie looked up into his friend's face—the man he had fought with, rowed with, hunted with, shared banking accounts with. In the eyes he knew so well he read a look of appeal which startled him. The "yes" stopped at the tip of his tongue, and he saw himself, under the hands of the man who loved him, a sneak and a blackguard.

"Tell me," cried Tony again, hoarsely, "for God's sake."

"Didn't you hear anything we were saying, then?"

"No, of course not. I was asleep. I woke up when I put out my arm and knocked over the little table. I heard nothing—nothing. I ask you, for the sake of old times, to tell me the truth."

Almost against his will, filled with a remorse and a pity he would have sworn he was incapable of feeling where the love of a woman was concerned, Reggie spoke: "Your wife is the best woman I have ever met," he said, slowly. "I love her well enough to sacrifice her honor, my honor, and yours; but when I asked her to leave you and come away with me, she—she said: 'No'."

"No! Then—then she doesn't love you?"

"No," said Reggie again. "Oh, Tony, I'm the worst scoundrel that ever breathed. I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

Reggie was too broken up to wince under the crushing grip Tony gave his hand, and both men were afraid to trust themselves to speak.

"Thanks, old man," said Reggie at last. "I'll wipe this out one of these days, and come back again to you. In the meantime I'll get away for a bit. I told Enid to-night I was a man who believed in all or nothing. I think nothing is best. Good-by!"

Neither of them heard the suppressed sob, the quick, quiet closing of the door, or the swift rustle of skirts. And neither of them saw the woman lying face downwards on her bed, sobbing with heaving shoulders and crying out: "Thank God, thank God!"

TORTURED WITH GRAVEL.

Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills, Not a Stone Has Formed.

Capt. S. L. Crute, Adjt. Watts Camp, U. C. V., Roanoke, Va., says: "I suffered a long, long time with my back, and felt draggy and listless and all the time. I lost from my usual weight, 225, to 170. Urinary passages were too frequent and I had to get up often at night. I had headaches and dizzy spells also, but my worst suffering was from renal colic. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I passed a gravel stone as big as a bean. Since then I have never had an attack of gravel, and have picked up to my former health and weight. I am a well man, and give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for it."

UNIFORM TEMPERATURE.

A Friendly Talk on How It May Be Attained.

"John, go down to the basement and shut off that furnace; this house is like an oven."

Down John goes to the cellar, closes all the drafts and returns to Mary's side to enjoy his evening's rest.

It is a bitter cold night outside and John, in his anxiety to keep the house at a comfortable temperature, had heaped up the furnace with good hard coal, opened up the drafts and "let her run." The result was as Mary said, the house soon was as hot as an oven, and John had to take another trip to the basement to close the drafts he had an hour previously opened.

Time passed quietly and pleasantly in this happy home and John and Mary sat reading, occasionally chatting and thoroughly enjoying their comfortable evening together.

"It is a terrible cold night?" John remarked, "and I believe the thermometer will get away down in the forties before morning,—I guess I will sit up until after midnight to keep the furnace going pretty strong."

"You had better attend to it now," said Mary, "for I begin to feel the cold creeping down my back."

Down to the cellar again goes John and opens up the drafts which but a short time before he had closed.

John was naturally a good-natured fellow, but when he returned to his cozy chair he muttered, "I wish I had a machine to regulate that furnace."

"Well," said Mary, "Why don't you buy one? When I was at Aunt Sarah's in Minneapolis last year she had what they called a Thermostat in their sitting room, and that opened and shut the drafts to the furnace so that the house was always at a uniform temperature."

"Why, how could it do that?" said John.

"Oh, simple enough," said Mary. "It worked by contraction and expansion of metal caused by the change in the temperature of the room. As the metal in the Thermostat contracts or expands it comes in contact with a metal point which is connected with an open circuit battery and a spring motor which is connected by chains running over pulleys to the furnace, so that when either circuit is closed the motor is set in motion and the drafts are opened or closed as may be directed by the temperature of the house."

"That is certainly wonderful," said John, "but it will keep the house too hot for some people and too cold for others. Different families like different temperatures."

"That is so," answered Mary, "but you can set it to any degree of heat you wish between 60 and 80 and it will always respond just where you set the index."

"You certainly have interested me," said John, "and I will look into the matter further. If it will do what you say I shall certainly have one. Will it work on anything but furnaces?"

"Certainly; hot water or steam plants and all kinds of stoves can be fitted with this apparatus, anything that has a front and back draft."

"Where did you say she got it?" asked John.

"I didn't say," said Mary, "but they are made in Minneapolis by the Electric Heat Regulator Co."

"Well, I'll write to-morrow for one," said John.

"I know you will never regret it," answered Mary.

Longfellow Estate Changes Hands.

The famous Longfellow estate in Byfield, which has been in possession of the family for more than 200 years, has been divided and sold, says the Newbury (Mass.) Dispatch. The house is now occupied by Charles Longfellow, eighth in line of descent. Notwithstanding assertions to the contrary, it has always been declared by the Byfield Longfellows that the poem "The Village Blacksmith" was written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in recognition of the smithy which once stood on this very site, and was conducted by Stephen Longfellow, the second of the name, who was born in 1685. Other famous poems were written there.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Monks as Chauffeurs.

The monks of the Grand St. Bernard will soon make their debut as chauffeurs.

After a struggle lasting over a year they have received the permission from the Valais and Italian authorities to run a motor car service between the hospices of Grand St. Bernard and Simplon—their properties—and Domodossola and Aosta.

The chauffeurs will be chosen from the monks themselves, who will wear cowls.

The cars, which are being specially constructed to climb the steep gradients, will at the beginning be employed for the transport of supplies only.

Later, however, the monks intend to start a service for tourists who wish to visit their hospices in the summer season.—Geneva Correspondent London Express.

Mrs. Willadsen Tells How She Tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Just In Time.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen

"Before I wrote to you, telling you how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady and spent lots of money on medicines besides, but it all failed to help me. My monthly periods had ceased and I suffered much pain, with fainting spells, headache, backache and bearing-down pains, and I was so weak I could hardly keep around. As a last resort I decided to write you and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so thankful that I did, for after following your instructions, which you sent me free of all charge, I became regular and in perfect health. Had it not been for you I would be in my grave to-day.

"I sincerely trust that this letter may lead every suffering woman in the country to write you for help as I did."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of an organ, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. Refuse all substitutes.

For 25 years Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, has under her direction, and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Gaurding the Sky.

From the publicity given in its inception, the patriotic company of German Jew financiers which is to guard the sky along the French frontier seems to be interested in hot-air-ships. A wit observed more than a century ago, that German philosophy was at its cloudiest that to England had been given the sea, to France the earth, while the only element left to Germany was the air. And now the Lebaudy brothers have the audacity to threaten that with their balloons!

FARMER ALMOST KILLED BY BULL

Paul Schoenauer Is Attacked by an Angry Bull and Nearly Loses His Life.

That the Bull Was Dehorned is Perhaps the Only Reason of Final Escape.

Paul Schoenauer, a farmer living about seven miles south of the city, was attacked by a vicious bull Monday morning and when found his life was slowly ebbing away.

Mr. Shoenauer, according to his custom, had gone out into the pasture to drive cows up for the morning milking. While doing so the bull charged upon him, knocked him down and stamped upon him, breaking every rib in his body and otherwise bruising and lacerating him. An hour and a half later, Schoenauer's daughter, wondering at the absence of her father, went out to look for him. She found him stretched upon the ground near the fence but on the inside of the inclosure and the bull was still keeping guard. She managed to drag her father thru the fence without further molestation. Dr. Lemieux and Father Ansgar were sent for and for a time it was feared that death must ensue. At the last account the victim is improving with a fair chance of recovery.

Mr. Schoenauer is a man nearly 60 years of age and the shock is unusually great. Perhaps the only reason he was not killed outright was that the bull was dehorned.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation con be taken out and this tube restored to its normal conition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How Fashions Are Made.

Several years ago when the present King of England, who was then Prince of Wales, was so unfortunate as to have a boil under his right arm. As a result of this, when he shook hands with his friends he was compelled to raise his right hand and elbow to the level of his chin. This immediately became the fashionable way to shake hands and was common in the "smart set" of two continents. We have not entirely lost the fashion to this day, but it seems to be going. One custom which is here to stay is the daily use of golden grain belt beer. To the families who observe this custom come health, strength and happiness. Order a case of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

COMMENCEMENT OF PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

A Highly Successful Program Was Given at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Twelve Scholars Are Graduated—Diplomas Were Presented by Rev. Fr. Fayolle.

The commencement exercises of St. Joseph's Parocial school were held at the Metropolitan opera house last Thursday evening and were entertaining beyond the expectations of even the promoters.

The opera house was handsomely decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers. The class motto, "Step by Step," was conspicuous in its place above the stage. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. The program was opened by the Orpheus quartette in one of its most pleasing selections and was followed by the class chorus, "Gathering Flowers in June." It was very nicely done. The hummorous dialogue, "Thief of Time," was well rendered. The Pantomime was given with the hall in darkness and was immensely pleasing to the audience. One of the best things on the program was the dumb bell drill by 20 small boys all dressed alike in white. When they finished in the figures of 1906, the applause was great. Rev. Father Ansgar delivered a splendid address taking for his subject Christian education. Rev. Father Fayolle spoke briefly in French, using the class motto as the basis of his remarks which were greatly enjoyed. Little Leo Kaufer and Monica Zeh acquitted themselves nicely in the song, "I'll Take Care of You Grandma." The valedictory was given by Napoléon Lemieux and the accompanists were the Misses Eva Paradis and Cora Paul.

PRIZES ANNOUNCED FOR A MARKET DAY

Saturday July 21 a Day of Profit and Pleasure to Those Coming to Town.

Special Sales at Stores, Prizes for Farmers Sports and Band Concerts

Red Lake Falls didn't celebrate the Fourth of July but it has in store for the farmers of the surrounding country a day in which there will be fully as much pleasure and considerable more profit to those coming to town. If the day is successful, and the measure of success will not be the amount of business done but the number of farmers that come to town, other market days will follow, probably once a month with every effort made to have each one different from the other.

From purely a business standpoint it will be an excellent time for farmers to come as some genuine bargains can be be had at the different stores. The special sales at the stores of Red Laka Falls will be bona fide sales and the COURIER can make the promise that they will be real and not a mere catch advertisement.

To make it still further profitable a number of prizes for various things are offered and a study of the list will show that every one coming to town has a chance to win one of some value. None but farmers will be allowed to compete. The prizes are:

Farmer bringing the largest family to town, boys suit $5, Berthon & Armstrong.

Oldest married couple, 75-piece dinner set, Theo. LaBissoniere.

Every baby under one year of age, a solid gold ring, H. W. Anderson.

Heaviest draft team, best whip in stock, L. A. Kaufer.

Couple married shortest time, sewing rocker, Anderson & Wander.

Tallest girl, pair $2 50 shoes, J. P. Harren.

Heaviest married couple. wall paper to paper a room 12 x 12, W. A. Schrieter.

Oldest settler, lap robe, Joseph Helm.

Heaviest man, 10 lb. roast of beef, Groshong & Blake.

One purchasing the biggest bill of goods at any store, 20th Century wringer, Hunt & Kankel.

Farmer coming the greatest distance, 12 piece chamber set China, Garceau & Zaiser.

A program of sports is being arranged for farmers or farmers' children only in which there will be cash prizes given. There will be a ball game and if possible two teams from the country towns will be gotten together for a cash prize. There will be an open air band condert by Red Lake Falls celebrated band. A rest room will be provided for women and children.

The main object of a market day is to bring the merchant and farmer closer together. The Red Lake Falls business men are among the first to realize that a town, supported by the agricultural resources of the surrounding country, must give encouragement to such resources. There is no better way of attracting settlers to a community or making the location more profitable than by showing them there is a good live town where they can go and get the right treatment.

Saturday July 21 is one day in particular when farmers from far and near will be especially welcomed within the city. And on their part farmers can encourage their own future profit and pleasure by coming in numbers. As was stated in opening the success will be judged by attendance rather than the business done on that day.

The Red Lake Falls papers should be studied for announcements of special sales and further details of market day.

G. A. R. Encampment.

For this event the Northern Pacific will sell round trip tickets to Minneapolis for $5.90. Dates of sale July 11 to 14, return limit July 31 with privilege of extension.

FIRST SUNSTROKES OF THE SEASON

Jack Connaughty, Living Near the City Suffers Serious Stroke at Crookston.

A. D. Reopelle Stricken in This City and John Amundson of Lillo The Third.

Three cases of sun stroke are reported in this city and vicinity as occasioned by the excessive heat of the past few days.

The first case of sunstroke is reported as happening on Monday. A. D. Reopelle, a farmer, living south of the city, had brought a load of hay to town and was overcome by the heat while unloading it. He was taken to Hunt & Kankel's store and Dr. Lemieux attended him. The case is not a serious one.

This afternoon at about one o'clock Jack Connaughty, son of Michael Connaughty, a prominent farmer, living between Red Lake and Gentilly in the big coulee, succumbed to the heat of the sun and other causes on Main street in front of the St. James hotel. For half an hour while a bystander was going for a doctor men struggled to hold the afflicted man. Dr. Dampier attended the patient. While the sun was the direct cause other natural causes contributed. After about half an hour he was taken to the St. Vincent hospital. He is in a very dangerous condition. He had been indulging in no liquors.—Crookston Journal.

A farmer by the name of Amundson, living at Lillo, suffered a sun stroke Tuesday and was taken to Brooks for treatment in a rather serious condition.

Bird Calls.

Most of our song birds have three notes expressive of love, alarm and fellowship, says John Burroughs in Country Life in America. The latter call seems to to keep them in touch with one another. I might perhaps add to this list the scream of distress which most birds utter when caught by a cat or hawk-the yoice species-dissonant and piercing. The other notes and calls are characteristic, but this last is the simple speech of common terrified nature. Keep the nerves strong with golden grain belt beer and you will not be easily frightened. Serve it regularly with your meals and you will notice a gain in strengah and vigor. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

COMMISSIONERS PROCEEDINGS

The Board Estimates County Expense and Fixes Levy for the Ensuing Year.

Supplemental List of Grand and Petit Jurors Certified and Filed With Clerk.

The board of county commissioners held a two days session this week and among the important business transacted was the estimating of the county expense and fixing the tax levy for the ensuing year. There is a considerable raise in the estimate over last year but it is expected it will be cared for in the increased valuation of property rather than an increase in the rate of levy.

The estimate is as follow: County revenue fund, $20,000; county road and bridge fund, $4,500; county bond and interest fund, $3,500; special road and bridge fund for the completion of the Huot and Poplar river bridges, $3,1000. The tax levy remains the same.

There were approriated from the county road and bridge fund, the sum of $75 for the town of Numedal, $100 for the town of Bray, and $100 for sections 9 10-22-23 Poplar river. The sum of $200 appropriated for the Red Lake County Agricultural society. An application from River Falls was rejected as the county has no money for drainage purposes.

Applications of Marit Hanson, Joseph Brenvold, M. E. Bjerk and Emery Dion for correction of assessment and abatment of taxes, were granted.

The per diem of an assistant county surveyor was fixed at $3.

J. K. Wood was appointed engineer and Robert A. Lee of Thief River Falls, Karl Johnson of St. Hilaire, and Fred Zaiser of Red Lake Falls were appointed viewers on county ditch number 27.

A supplemental list of jurors was certified to and filed with the clerk of court. It is as follows:

CHANGE IN POSTAGE FEE

The Government Has Announced a Much More Liberal Rate.

Postal charges for letters sent to foreign countries have been cut in half by an order of the postoffice department, received recently. Heretofore the rate has been 5 cents for each half-ounce or fraction thereof. This ruling was made in accordance with the postal convention recently adopted by the Postal Union at its meeting in Rome Italy.

Another ruling, also the result of the conveniton at Rome, has straightened out the tangle over the foreign post cards which have a space for communication on the left half of the address side. Such cards are common in all foreign countries, but are not authorized by the United States and until this last ruling have been charged full letter postage. This has caused much trouble at the local office, as the regular foreign rate for post cards is 2 cents, while the letter rate is 5 cents, and under the old rules persons reciving post cards from abroad had to pay 6 cents, double deficiency charge, to get them.

Wagons and high grade buggies on hand. See S. A. Swanson.

ATTENDANCE IS UNUSUALLY LARGE

State Training School at Thief River Falls Attracting Many Teachers.

An Able Corps of Instructors Is Present and Rapid Progess is Being Made.

The state training school for teachers opened at Thief River Falls Monday. The following account of it is furnished the Courier by one of the instructors:

The state teachers' training school for Red Lake county held at Thief River Falls, has opened up this year with more than usually bright prospects. The teachers have been very prompt in entering and are regular in their attendance, a fact which speaks well for the school officers and other educators of the county in working up the school spirit before the opening day.

A new feature this year is a class in civics under the direction of Supt. J. B. O'Brien of St. Hilaire. This is a subject made obligatory upon teachers this year by the state superintendent, and is proving of great interest and value under the able direction of the instructor. Conductor C. S. Yeager of Fosston is also ably assisted by Miss Charlotte Knutson of St. Cloud, who teaches primary methods, music and reading, and by Miss Mary Fanning of St. Paul in the departments of history, physiology and geography. The attendance has already reached the 100 mark and there are others yet to come in. While a good number come from Thief River Falls; Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire, Fosston and other Polk county districts are well represented. In point of attendance, interest on the part of teachers, and general efficiency of instructors the school is one of the best in northern Minnesota.

CROWN PRINCESS PRESENTS AN HEIR PRESUMPTIVE TO THRONE.

Berlin, July 6.—Crown Princess Eugenia was safely accouched of a son at 9:15 a. m. yesterday.

The guns of a battery of artillery began to fire slowly in the square opposite the palace at about noon and tens of thousands within hearing of the salute stopped in the streets or paused in their work, counting the guns, for it had long been announced that seventy-two shots would be fired for a girl and 101 for a boy.

"Seventy-one, seventy-two, seventy-three." Then the city knew that an heir presumptive had been born. An hour later half a million copies of the official Gazette containing the official proclamation were given away.

The boy is well formed and strong. The news of the birth of his grandson was communicated to Emperor William by means of a wireless dispatch from Kiel to the steamer Hamburg, on which his majesty is proceeding to Trondhjem, Norway.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

Fresh—Reliable—Brief

Washington Notes.

Dr. D. E. Salmon, former chief of the bureau of animal industry, has been advised by the Uruguayan government of the acceptance of his offer to organize a bureau of animal industry for that government at a salary of $6,000 annually in gold and all of his living expenses.

During the next three months the White House and the grounds surrounding it will be closed to the public, and the executive mansion will be in the hands of mechanics. A large amount of work will be done this summer, some of it being made necessary by leaky roofs of two large wings.

The next chairman of the interstate commerce commission probably will be James S. Harlan of Illinois, son of Justice Harlan of the supreme court and ex-attorney general of Porto Rico. This is the information received by those in close touch with the commission. It was unofficially said several days ago that the president probably would appoint Mr. Harlan and E. E. Clark of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, grand chief of the Order of Railway conductors, as the two additional members of the commission. Chairman Martin A. Knapp will remain a commissioner.

Casualties.

Fire at Cedar Rapids destroyed the Mott piano factory and Praverman's Island furniture store, entailing a loss of $18,000, with $8,000 insurance.

Adelia Peterson, the Carney girl who was so terribly burned two weeks ago while starting a fire with a ca nof kerosene, is dead at the hospital at Menominee, Mich.

Frank P. Clark, a marine fireman whose home is in St. Paul, while lying asleep on the Buffalo Creek railroad track at Buffalo, N. Y., was crushed to death by a switch engine.

Ray Browning, twelve years old, died at Elkhart, Ind., from lockjaw resulting from a wound caused by the explosion of a blank cartridge. Frank Beach lost an eye by the explosion of a giant firecracker.

Eckland, a young man employed at L'Anse, Mich., was drowned at Big lake, on Burned Plains. He was out on the lake fishing with a companion, and in attempting to change places the boat tipped over and Eckland was drowned.

A tornado at West Station, Tex., blew down a score of residences. Mrs. Mary Allen was badly injured and a man named Adams had an arm broken. The town has a thousand inhabitants, and was in total darkness all night.

The Silsbee mills of the Kirby Lumber Co., with the yards, containing 5,000,000 feet of lumber, and numerous dwellings were destroyed by fire at Beaumont, Tex. The fire originated from a hot belt in the mill. The loss on the lumber will reach $500,000, while the loss on machinery will exceed $200,000.

Frank E. Curless, fifteen years of age, saved the lives of three companions, but lost his own at Kokomo, Ind. His brother, Merrill Curless, and Palmer and Earl Dean were bathing when cramps seized Merrill and the Dean boys. By diving and using a plank Frank saved them. The boy then was attacked with cramps himself and drowned.

It cost the Munising paper mills at Munising, Mich., exactly $200 to kill one rat. The rodent, in order to escape a terrier which was chasing it, jumped onto a blanket of one of the machines in the paper mill, and was carried between the rollers. The rat's life was effectually extinguished, but it is necessary for the mill to secure a new blanket, which will cost it $200.

Crimes.

At a ball game at Patriot, near Vevay, Ind., Marshal Jacob Smith shot and fatally injured Charles Sutton. It is said that Sutton was resisting arrest.

An unidentified man committed suicide by jumping from the thirteenth floor of the Stewart building in Chicago into an era way in the center of the building.

Marion Hedgpeth, who was sentenced to twenty-five years' imprisonment in the Missouri penitentiary and has served twelve years, for the robbery of a St. Louis & San Francisco train at Glendale, Mo., has been pardoned by Gov. Folk.

John N. Faithorn and Fred A. Wann, former officials of the Chicago & Alton railroad have been placed on trial in the United States district court in Chicago on the charge of granting illegal rebates to the Schwarzschild & Sulzburger Packing company.

A dispatch from Manila announces that Lieut. Tallmadge H. Brerton of the Second infantry, committed suicide there by shooting himself in the head at the Army and Navy club. It is believed the act was committed while he was temporarily insane.

In an attempt to exterminate his family Charles Brewer of Lucedale, Miss., shot and killed his wife and his mother-in-law, wounded his wife's grandmother and his infant child and then shot and killed himself.

Swan S. Johnson of Garver, S. D., was separated from $60 in cash at the North-Western station at Sioux City by a smooth stranger from Missouri. The stranger had a $400 check, which he offered to exchange for any ready cash that Johnson had, and Johnson accommodated him and got the $400 on paper. The banks refused to cash it.

ARE GUILTY OF GIVING REBATES

ALTON ROAD AND TWO OF ITS FORMER OFFICIALS ARE CONVICTED.

MAY BE FINED $120,000 EACH

SCHWARZSCHILD & SULZBERGER GOT REFUND OF $1 ON EACH CAR.

Chicago, July 8.—The Chicago & Alton railroad and John N. Faithorn and Fred A. Wann, formerly officials of the road, were yesterday convicted in the United States district court of illegally granting rebates to the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Packing company. Sentence was postponed, pending arguments for a new trial, which will be heard to-day.

It was claimed by the government that the officials of the railroad company had allowed the employes of the packing company to travel free by refunding money for transportation.

Let Off on Two Counts.

It was declared by Judge Landis that this did not constitute a rebate, and he instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty on the two counts which charged rebating of this passenger transportation.

In the other eight counts, on all of which the defendants were found guilty, two offenses against the Elkins law were proved. It was shown by the government that the railroad company had charged $4 per car for handling the products of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger at Kansas City, and had then repaid the packing company $1 on each car. The government claimed, and the court held, that the failure of the railroad to publish in its tariff sheets the fact that the $1 was repaid made it a secret rebate.

Claim Refund Was Necessary.

It was claimed by the attorneys for the defendants that the refund of the $1 per car was necessary because the packing company owned the railroad track near its plant and compelled the railroad company to pay that amount for trackage when it hauled the cars away.

Under the law the maximum sentence of the court may be a fine of $120,000 for each of the three defendants. No imprisonment provision appears in the law. There are two specific allegations of rebating in the eight counts of the indictment upheld by the court.

WILL BE PAID $100,000,000.

That Is the Estimated Total of Adjusted Fire Loss in San Francisco.

San Francisco, July 8.—The Call says: One hundred and sixty-six settlements that have been effected by fire insurance companies indicate that in the business section of San Francisco more than $100,000,000 will be paid in coin to fire losers on the face of the adjustments made on losses that have already come before the committees. The average adjusted loss on the 166 cases mentioned is $84,325, the total payments being $14,000,000. The sound value of 166 properties is given at $19,000,000 by the adjusters. Consequently the reduction for earthquake damage and for all other causes in the adjustments is $5,000,000.

These figures are supplied by an entirely competent authority. The large sum of $100,000,000 for pending and effected settlements is an estimate upon the averages already noted.

The loss committees appointed up to date number 1,221. The $100,000,000 is based upon the multiplication of the average of $84,325 by 1,221.

ANARCHIST FROM SEATTLE ARRESTED BEFORE DESIGN IS EXECUTED.

Alton, Prussia, July 8.—It became known yesterday that August Rosenberg, an alleged anarchist from Seattle, Wash., was arrested here July 3 as he was leaving a train at Alton. Acting on information received from the police of New York, the authorities here were watching for Rosenberg, who has relatives living here.

Rosenberg, who was accompanied by his wife, came to Europe on the Hamburg-American line steamer Patricia, which left New York June 16 and arrived at Hamburg June 29. The prisoner affirms that he is an American citizen.

His baggage has been forwarded to another part of Germany and has not yet been searched by the police.

Numerous overwhelming causes for suspicion are said to exist, and it is believed that only the man's arrest prevented an attempt on the emperor's life.

Seattle Inquiry Continues.

Y., July 8.—When Sir Joseph Ward, premier of New Zealand, stepped from the train at Oyster Bay yesterday to keep a luncheon engagement with President Roosevelt, he frankly said that his chief object in visiting the United States is to develop a reciprocity sentiment between New Zealand and the United States. When Sir Joseph returned to the station, two hours later, having fulfilled his luncheon engagement, he remarked: "Reciprocity is not an easy thing to bring about in this country."

Sir Joseph, adhering to rules he has laid down for himself in his journey around the world, declined to discuss the exchange of ideas between himself and President Roosevelt.

"My hearty belief in your president as a statesman of strength, breadth and courage," he said, "has been most pleasantly and emphatically confirmed."

I have been maliciously misrepresented. My story will be told at the proper time. I am not in strict seclusion. Have received all friends, but denied all reporters."

ALL ENGLAND IS STIRRED.

Aroused by Prospect of Holy War in Egypt.

London, July 8.—The official announcement in parliament by Earl Grey, secretary for foreign affairs, that England is confronted by the possibility of the invocation of a Jehad or holy war in Egypt, and that it may be necessary to land an army there, has created a tremendous sensation. Earl Grey's statement came with a dramatic suddenness and has taken the whole country by surprise. The recent execution of five natives at Danishaw, Egypt, and the flogging of several others for the murder of English officers had drawn the denunciation of the radical press and served to bring forth Earl Grey's warning.

EPOCHAL STEP IS TAKEN BY DOUMA

VOTES $7,500,000 FAMINE RELIEF—FIRST STEP IN JOINT WORK WITH CABINET.

SOME MUSHROOM FINANCING

REVELATIONS OF PADDING OF ESTIMATES CAUSE A GREAT SENSATION.

St. Petersburg, July 8.—While the action of the lower house of parliament yesterday, in appropriating $7,500,000 to be dispensed by the administration for famine relief, was epochal as the first recognition of the cabinet by parliament and the first step in joint work, its importance was far overshadowed by the revelation of alleged admissions made by Minister of Finance Kokovsoff in the budget commission about the padding of estimates for the liquidating of war expenses in order to be able to extract a larger loan from the foreign markets. These developments made and were eagerly discussed in the corridors of the chamber, where it was declared that if the statements of the commission members were true, it placed Russian financial methods on a par with those of mushroom South American republics and would undermine the confidence of foreign financiers in the old guard, now managing Russian finances and immensely complicate future credit operations.

An Immense Sensation

All this naturally is fish for the net of the Constitutional Democrats, who see in the revelations the brightest prospects for forcing the transfer of administrative power to a responsible cabinet.

May Soon Take Reins.

All of yesterday's moves of the Constitutional Democrats point to a realization of their expectation that they may soon be intrusted with the full responsibility of government, unhampered by a beaucratic ministry. The speeches of Floor Leader Naboukoff and others on Thursday show that the decision to break with the extremists and socialists has been definitely taken, and that the party leaders are now looking forward to constructive work, in place of merely destructive criticism of anything governmental.

CLEAN BILL IS GIVEN PACKERS

CHICAGO-ILLINOIS CIVIC COMMITTEE INVESTIGATES PACKING PLANTS.

FOOD IS CALLED WHOLESOME

YARDS GENERALLY CLEAN AND INSPECTION EFFICIENT—WORKERS HEALTHY.

Chicago, July 8.—The report of the joint committee of the Chicago Commercial association and Illinois Manufacturers' association, appointed to investigate the packing industries of Chicago, together with the report of the experts who accompanied them, was made public yesterday.

The committee says "that a board of experts of the character employed, with professional ideals and guided and influenced by an 'esthetic sense' which embodies something of necessity and something more of luxury, should find the product 'wholesome,' the yards 'generally clean,' and the inspection 'efficient,' seems to your committee to cover the situation.

Wholesome Food.

"As a result of this investigation we ourselves have no hesitancy in stating that the meat products at the yards are wholesome and proper food.

"We find that improvements are constantly being made, and will be made, and we believe that the conditions and surroundings at the plants carefully protect the quality of the product."

The experts who accompanied the committee were:

Dr. W. A. Evans, professor of pathology, University of Illinois; Dr. Maximillian Herzog, late pathologist, bureau of science, Manila, P. I.; Dr. M. P. Ravenel, pathologist to the Philippines institute, Philadelphia; Prof. A. T. Peters, University of Nebraska, and Prof. M. H. Reynolds, University of Minnesota. Their investigation occupied two weeks.

Some Plants Up to Date.

They say that parts of most of the plants are up to date, but that in each there are some sections that are indifferently good and in most of them some things of which they cannot approve.

The committee is of the opinion that the canning departments visited are, in general, cleanly, and that the handling of the material is done in a cleanly manner by properly dressed, healthful persons, and that the finished canned meats constitute a wholesome and, in varying degrees, nutritious article of diet. The use of any spoiled meat unfit for food was nowhere noticed, though it must be conceded that some of the canned goods contained material which is of a low nutritive value, such as pigs' ears, pigs' snouts, tripe, etc. It is therefore recommended that the cans be correctly labeled as to their contents, so that the purchaser may be able to form a correct estimate as to their nutritive value.

Dangerous and Unhygienic.

Regarding hygiene and sanitation, the committee says some of the water closets are not of modern or proper construction, not well located, often deficient and often ventilate into the work rooms. This they regard as dangerous and unhygienic.

The medical members of the committee paid especial attention to the health of the operatives, particularly in regard to tuberculosis. They were not able to detect in the superficial examination possible any evidence of disease.

"It is certainly not true," the committee says, "that spitting goes on with consequent contamination of the food products."

In closing the report the committee refers to the new meat inspection bill and says that its provisions are so stringent that if, under its execution, any unwholesome meat gets into interstate or foreign commerce, the responsibility for such a circumstance must rest with the federal authorities.

AS IF SHOT FROM CANNON.

Two Workmen Meet Dramatic Death by Falling of Smokestack.

Cincinnati, July 8.—Joseph Ayers and Oscar Underwood, sheet iron workers, fell 100 feet with and inside of a great iron smokestack at the Front street pumping station yesterday and were probably fatally injured. Both men sustained fractured skulls and were otherwise horribly mutilated.

WAR ON IN SANTO DOMINGO

GOVERNMENT LEADERS ATTACK REBELS, WHO HAVE UPPER HAND.

Washington, July 8.—A cablegram received at the navy department late yesterday from Commander Sutherland, in charge of the American naval forces in Dominican waters, relative to the revolutionary situation in the northern part of Santo Domingo, says:

"The government leaders have attacked the rebels, but are being met by guerrilla tactics, and the prospects are that if these tactics are continued the government forces will be worn out. The leaders of the old revolutionary movement are endeavoring to return to the country."

In the case of a conflict in Santo Domingo it is the duty of the United States, according to a high official, to "see that the marquis of Queensberry rules are observed." The inference is that the United States government will not interfere unless the interests which this government, under the existing modus vivendi feels bound to protect, are disturbed.

The state department was advised yesterday by cablegram from American Minister Merry that he has arrived at San Salvador and is endeavoring to make arrangements there for an agreement between Guatemala and Salvador.

Roosevelt Has Used Power in Judge Tanner's Case.

Portland, Ore., July 8.—Former Judge A. H. Tanner, who committed perjury in order to shield his law partner, the late United States Senator John H. Mitchell, was pardoned by the president June 26.

Announcement of President Roosevelt's clemency to Tanner was made here yesterday by Francis J. Heney, assistant attorney general, who conducted the prosecution against Mitchell and Tanner. Sentence has never been passed against Tanner, and it had been expected that he would be pardoned in consideration of the service he rendered when he went on the witness stand and gave damaging testimony against Mitchell.

Host, state commissioner of insurance, on June 16, 1903, by taking a prepared decision in the Brunkhorst-Equitable insurance case from Robert Luscombe to the commissioner and telling him, as alleged in the complaint, that the Equitable society would contribute $2,000 to the La Follette campaign fund if such a decision were rendered. STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

WAR ON CABBAGE WORM.

State Entomologist Gives Several Remedies.

State Entomologist F. L. Washburn of the experiment station at St. Anthony Park is waging war against the cabbage maggot, which is bad this year and is destroying hundreds of dollars' worth of cauliflowers and cabbages, to say nothing of radishes and turnips. Various remedies and means of prevention are on trial, some of which are suited for plants in the garden and others applicable to large fields. Some of the methods employed are as follows:

Repellant or preventive substances are put around the base of the plant. Roots are dipped in poisonous mixtures, not injurious to the plant, when setting.

Substances are applied from time to time about the plant which will kill the maggot and not injure the root.

The soil is stirred occasionally, close to the plant, in order to disturb the eggs.

Peridically the fields are gone over with a hoe, scraping a little of the soil which is close to the plant away from it, taking at the same time, of course, the eggs contained therein.

The last method is not expensive and seems to be practical and efficacious. The eggs are scraped away with the earth at least twelve inches from the plant, a distance too great for the delicate young maggot to crawl after hatching.

Careful observation are being made on a Lecanian scale, which is promising to be a dangerous pest in Minnesota. It is found abundantly on plums, the elms and other shade trees, as well as the various shrubs. The eggs, which are found in enormous numbers under this scale, now are hatching, and the next two or three weeks is the best time to attack them with soapy washes or kerosene emulsions, which will not injure the trees if properly used. The adult insects are so thoroughly protected by the scale itself that nothing of this kind has any effect upon them, and they must be treated with stronger washes in the winter time when the trees are dormant or in the early spring or late fall.

Experiments also are in progress in varius parts o fthe state to afford a comparison of the merits of dust and liquid spraying.

RECALLS INDIAN TRAGEDY.

Death of Sole Survivor of a Massacre of the '60s.

Apparently in the best of health, Michael Miller, a pioneer resident of Stearns county, dropped dead one day recently of heart failure. He was seventy-four years of age.

His death recalls one of the tragedies of the Indian outbreak in this country during the '60s. Miller was then employed as a carpenter at Georgetown, on the Red river, and while en route from that place to St. Cloud by wagon, accompanied by three other men, the party was attacked by hostile Indians. All of Miller's partners were killed, and Miller managed to escape by crawling into the dense underbrush, where he remained hidden until the savages had finished looting the wagon and had retired with the gory scalps of his murdered comrades.

The Indians had watched the progress of the little party through the almost trackless wilderness, and while the men were encamped for the night the Indians suddenly rushed the camp and murdered the pioneers before they could raise a musket in their own defense.

OVER A THOUSAND THERE.

The Otter Tail county old settlers' reunion was held in Parkers Prairie, near Fergus Falls, and proved a thoroughly enjoyable event. The attendance is placed at from 1,000 to 1,500. A musical and literary program was enjoyed, a big picnic dinner served and a program of sports and races wound up with a grand dance in the evening.

It was decided to hold the next annual reunion at Underwood, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, H. P. Bjorge, Underwood; vice president, Allen Erckenbrack, Parkers Prairie; secretary, Oliver Olson, Fergus Falls; treasurer, Theo. Sjordal, Underwood; historian, George F. Cowing, Fergus Falls.

Third Artist (joining them)—How do you do, you fellows? I see they've hung your pictures side by side this year.

FINDS SON AFTER 38 YEARS.

Akeley Merchant Is Located After Long Search by Mother.

After a search lasting thirty-eight years, Andrew C. Anderson, a merchant of Akeley, has been located by his aged mother, who resides in Sweden. When Andrew was a child of four years he was adopted by an uncle and taken to a new home. When he was fourteen years of age, hearing a report of his mother's death, Anderson decided to come to America and shift for himself. After reaching New York the boy drifted to the Northwest. The uncle, too, came to America later, and the mother, who was not dead, lost all trace of her son and brother. She kept up a constant search, however, and her efforts at last were rewarded. The mother is now sixty-eight years of age and is anxious to have her son return home. Anderson announces his intention of paying a visit to Sweden and spending some time with his aged parent.

Dr. Myron W. Smith of Red Wing smashed his automobile and had a decidely narrow escape himself. He attempted to go up the steep hill to College Bluff. The clutch failed, the chain broke and the machine tumbled down a high embankment.

C. J. Weirth, for several years chief of the Red Wing fire department, and Albert Burkard, a liquor dealer, agreed to settle an old grudge by means of a fight and proceeded in the darkness to a secluded place. Burkard was first thrown, but got to his feet again and punished Weirth severely.

The Kasson village council having recently purchased a stone quarry near Mantorville, last week placed a crusher in position and has a crew of men at work improving the streets.

FOOD SHOW AT STATE FAIR.

Food Department to Give Continuous Performance.

The state food department will have a large display at the state fair this year. If arrangements can be made it will have a small building or a room to itself, but if this cannot be done it will have a large booth in one of the buildings. The state fair managers have asked the dairy and food commissioner how much space his department wants and he will ask for a room with a seating capacity of fifty to a hundred and arranged so that it can be darkened while stereopticon pictures are given.

The department is planning to give a continuous performance, including lectures on pure food and pictures showing practical and simple tests for adulterations and enlarged pictures of common violations of the food laws. This feature will be new at the state fair. It was tried on a small scale at the Elks' food show and will be attempted on a larger basis at the state fair.

Last year the dairy and food department gave its first exhibit of food adulterations. It had some difficulty in getting space, but got a small booth in the dairy building. The large crowds and the demand for the exhibit at the county fairs afterwards showed that the exhibit was a success. The fair managers noted that it was an attraction and therefore offer it lots of space this year.

An exhibit will be made this year like the one last year, showing all manner of fad foods, packages and labels, and members of the department will be on hand to explain the tricks of manufacturers and the deception practiced through some of the labels on goods sold. Even if room is not secured for the picture show, the food exhibit will be given and on a much larger scale than a year ago.

STATE'S PURSE WELL FILLED.

Nearly a Million Dollars More Than a Year Ago.

A small decrease in the revenue fund but a considerable increase in some of the other funds, is shown for June in the monthly statement of balances compiled Saturday by State Treasurer J. H. Block at the close of business. During the month the revenue fund has gone down from $376,996.40 to $333,703.58. The total cash in the treasury has increased from $1,243,810.71 to $1,466,902.76.

The balance in the revenue fund shows a much better condition than it did a year ago at this time. A year ago there was a deficiency in the revenue fund amounting to several hundred thousand dollars, and this had grown still larger by the end of the fiscal year, July 31. This year the balance is expected to grow during July so that the state will close the fiscal year with a cash balance in the revenue fund of $500,000 or more, which will be about $1,000,000 better than it was a year ago. There is considerable to come into the treasury this month from county tax settlements, land collections, inheritance taxes and other sources.

The special funds are in excellent condition. The general school fund, which was down to $17,319 a month ago, is now up to $274,395. The general university fund, which was down so low a month ago that the May salaries of the professors could not be paid, now has these paid up and a balance of nearly $30,000. The trust funds are in good shape. Although a couple of hundred thousand has been loaned to schools and towns during the month, there is still a balance of about $300,000 in these funds.

BULL MOOSE COMES TO TOWN.

Tormented by Flies, Big Animal Wanders Into Duluth.

A large bull moose wandered into the fashionable residence district of Edion, in Duluth, recently. He was first seen at Eighteenth avenue east and Jefferson street. He then went west toward the business section and paused to stand on the vacant lot adjoining John Millen's house at Tenth avenue east and Superior street for five minutes

He passed St. Luke's hospital on Ninth avenue and continued west on Second street, and was seen on the court house lawn at Sixth avenue east and Second street.

It is not known what became of the moose, but several persons later reported to police headquarters of having seen it. It is supposed the moose was tormented with flies in the woods and was getting away from them.

Harry Scherer and a young fellow by the name of Mullen narrowly escaped death by drowning in the creek west of Litchfield. The young men were driving at a late hour and when near town the horses became unmanageable and ran into the creek, where the bridge was washed out by high water a few weeks ago. The water was twelve feet deep and the occupants of the buggy reached the shore with difficulty. One horse was drowned, the other one broke the harness and swam ashore.

IN FAR NORTHLAND

Tid-Bits of News for Scandinavians.

VISITORS FROM AMERICA.

How They Have Been Entertained in Norway.

Norwegian newspapers devote long articles to the homecoming of hundreds of Norwegian-Americans to witness the coronation of King Haakon and Queen Maud. "Verdens Gang" tells of the welcome to Hellig Olav of the Scandinavian-American line at Christianssand, where the visitors were invited to attend a big fest at St. Hanshaugen, Christiania, and to participate in a movement for the creation of a Norwegian association to cover the entire world. Among those on Hellig Olav are named T. Guldbrandsen and family of Minneapolis, Dr. Anders Daae, Chicago; B. Amundsen and K. J. Haugen, Decorah, Iowa; Halle Stensland, Madison, Wis., and Thomas Stavrum, La Crosse. Other well known people were reported on the way, among them F. H. Gade of Chicago, accompanied by 500 others from the United States; Dr. H. O. Fjelde, Abercrombie, N. D., with 400, and Per O. Stromme with 500 more. In all upward of 2,000 Norwegians were expected.

The Feast at St. Hanshaugen on June 5 was a brilliant success. The popular park was full of people, and the American and Norwegian flags flew in profusion from every available place. After a sexa to some of the more distinguished visitors, the entire gathering assembled before the music pavilion from which the addresses were made.

In the gathering were Premier Michelsen, Foreign Minister Loevland, President Berner, Admiral Borresen and many other notable people. After calling for cheers for the king and queen the king's hymn was sung under the leadership of O. A. Grendahl and the students' chorus. Dr. Boegh in a few eloquent words spoke of President Roosevelt and was cheered to the echo.

President Berner spoke at some length on the relationship between the Norwegians on both sides of the Atlantic and extended the most cordial greetings to the sons and daughters of Norway who had found a home in another land, but whose sympathy and love for the mother country had been shown on many occasions. They had been a credit to their native land in their new homes, and Norway was proud of them. The time was ripe for the organization of an association with branches in all parts of the world for the preservation and encouragement of Norwegian culture. The moral support that Norway had received from all parts of the world during the trying days of last year was fully recognized and the events had brought the people closer together than ever before, although they were separated by great distances. The speaker closed with a call for cheers for the visitors, which were given with great enthusiasm.

Dr. Anders Daae responded in behalf of the Norwegian-Americans. The large company which had arrived with those on the way to Norway, testified to some extend of the feeling toward the other land. There were in the party persons who had not seen Norway for more than forty years, but whose love was still as strong as when they left. It was with sadness that they had gone, and although they had acquired a fair measure of prosperity in America, which they regarded as their home, they still had a place for Norway in their hearts. There were more than a million Norwegians in America and they supported many fine colleges, charitable institutions and no less than 1,200 churches. Last year they had planned to organize a defense union for Norway, although it was not publicly announced. Happily the crisis was peacefully settled and the treaty at Karlstad prevented a war.

At the conclusion of the address Dr. Daae placed the Stars and Stripes over the breast of President Berner while Mr. Amundsen likewise decorated Premier Michelsen, while the gathering cheered lustily and long.

The Danish Elections.

While the government party lost a few seats through the recent elections in Denmark, it is believed that the Christensen ministry will be continued in power with the aid of the Moderate party. Christensen's principal strength has come from the rural districts, and it is this element which will be in control. In the election of members of the folkething the Reform party secured fifty-five seate, with a net loss of three, the Social-Democrats twenty-four, the Conservatives thirteen, the Moderates, who are expected to vote with the government, nine, the Radicals nine, and there are three independents.

Hudiksvall Destroyed.

A fire started last Sunday night in the little city of Hudiksvall, and, fanned by a strong easterly gale, spread with such rapidity that all efforts to extinguish it were fruitless. Practically the whole town was wiped out and 1,500 families were made homeless. The fire extended to the borough of Avik, where 2,000 persons were burned out. The Hudiksvall Lumber company's large factory and a large amount of lumber were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at about $2,000,000.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.00 Per Year, in Advance.

A St. Paul man has fasted fifty-two days—but that's his business.

Are the Toledo ice men the only ones who belong in the penitentiary?

The Thief River Falls papers are a tame lot. They won't, or can't, fight a little bit.

Cannon booms are being heard for the presidency and William H. Taft is taking a shot at the prize.

Hearst says he will not be a candidate for the presidency in 1908. His decision is the wise one.

Lyman J. Gage, former secretary of treasury has not joined the Theosophists as has been reported, but he has our instant permission, if that is all he is waiting for.

The late Republican state convention was unanimously for Cole on the same principle that the old man's cow was white. It was all white except the body and head and three legs.

According to the Courier, the Red Lake Falls attorneys claim to have won a legal point in the county seat case, and wishes to inform this paper of that fact. The statement made in this paper some weeks ago to the effect that the Red Lake Falls attorneys had not won or would not win a single legal point in the county seat case still holds good.—Thief River Falls News.

Then why don't you hold your election?

Then followed a legal battle, an exact report of which is unessential to the story by reason of its technique.—Red Lake Courier.

It seems that the exact report of the matter was so essential that even the down-river papers felt ashamed to publish it.—Thief River Falls News.

We certainly would be ashamed to print some of the remarks of the Thief River Falls attorneys. And so would the News.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR (CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

WAIL OF ROYAL CHEF

WELL PAID BUT MASTERS ARE MOST EXACTING.

How the Kingly Menus Are Prepared —Franz Joseph Selects His Own—Kaiser Eats in Four Languages —Sultan Fears Poison.

London.—"Menus are the greatest burden of sovereignty," once remarked the emperor of Austria, and this, coupled with the statement of the late Czar Alexander III. that a monarch required more diplomacy in dealing with his cooks than with his ministers leads one to believe that culinary matters are a source of unceasing worry to every crowned head.

Emperor Franz Josef has, however, good cause to grumble, because although the actual cost of the food he consumes himself does not amount to $5,000 a year, he pays his chef—a Belgian—a salary of $10,000 per annum, and the kitchen expenses at the palace are never less than $75,000. The reason for this is that, whereas the emperor always takes his meals alone in his study, his palace dinners are produced regardless of expense.

The emperor's chef always submits a menu for the following day's dinner to his royal master when dinner is served. Punctually at six o'clock his valet enters with a large tray, which he places on the emperor's desk, and while Franz Josef is negotiating his soup he scans to-morrow's menu and crosses off with a blue pencil anything he does not care for.

At the German court things are somewhat different. There are four chefs—a German, a Frenchman, an Englishman and an Italian—because the kaiser never decides till the day arrives whether he will have a German, a French, an English or an Italian meal, with the result that there is much scurrying to prepare a menu. This is not an easy matter if there are many guests present, because each chef is only allowed so much a head, and he must serve up an elegant meal at that figure. Each chef has five assistants and has to render an account of each day's expenses to the head steward.

The chef at the Portuguese court is an Englishman and he receives only $4,000 a year. When King Carlos paid his first visit to England and was staying with the late Lord Salisbury, he said that what struck him most about Britain was the roast beef, and he forthwith took back with him an English chef. King Carlos insists on an English meal every day, but the queen and the members of the household have two French chefs to study their wants, and they each receive salaries of $5,500 per annum.

The most trying post any man can wish for is that of chef to the sultan of Turkey at the palace at Yildiz. Here the royal kitchen is situated right under the royal apartments; it is quite a small room, strongly guarded, and even the windows are barred. The sultan's horror of poison led him on one occasion to install a soldier whom he trusted as chef, and for two years he endured badly cooked food rather than face the risk of poison.

The present chef has held his post seven years, but he is only responsible to Kelarji, the chief steward, for the food, and this official is in his turn responsible to the sultan. When the meal is ready it is placed on a tray and the tray is then covered with a black cloth, the ends of which are sealed by Kelarji before it is borne into the imperial apartment.

The czar of Russia's chef is likewise a much harassed individual, but as he is well paid—his salary from all sources being over $10,000 a year—he is not to be pitied.

THIRTEEN PROVES UNLUCKY

Courtship Lasted 13 Months; April 13 Set for Wedding; Groom Dies After 13 Days' Illness.

Muskegon, Mich.—The number "13" proved unlucky to F. Delong, who died here after all preparations had been completed for his marriage to one of the most prominent young women of this section.

After a courtship of just 13 months Delong proposed and was accepted. April 13 was set as the wedding day, and all preparations for the wedding were completed when the prospective bridegroom became ill. For 13 days and 13 nights the bride-to-be was his constant attendant, even to eating her meals at his bedside.

The unlucky combination of thirteens had been noted, and when the thirteenth day of illness ended to-day the sudden death of the patient was hardly a surprise to his superstitious friends.

The young woman who was to be a bride April 13 is hysterical, and refused to leave the hospital or be consoled.

Never Had Seen White Men.

Nordenskjold, the famous arctic explorer, has returned to Montevideo, Paraguay, from an expedition into the interior of South America to the borders of Brazil, Bolivia and Peru, where he found Indians who had never seen white men. They are among the most primitive people in the world. They believed him to be some god because he gave them flesh of monkeys he had hunted. They begged him to remain as their chief, but he did not accept the offer, knowing the prestige would not outlive his ammunition.

Reaching the Goal.

Russia is to carry on the war to "the bitter end." There must be rather a bad taste in the Russian mouth already.

The Fourth of July was well celebrated at Mr. Kellog's farm five miles south east of town. It was a gathering of Lyon Co. people ten or twelve families who have settled in in the Red Lake Falls district. By eight o'clock in the morning they had began to arrive from all directions, to have a good time, and, were soon all there.

The day was well enjoyed by all with plenty of ice cream and lemonade. A picnic dinner in the ever beautiful grove took place at noon and closing the day by the young chaperons attending the ball at the Terrebonne hall.

S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD

The purifying action and curative properties of this great remedy have made "S. S. S. For The Blood" a household saying, and thousands who are today enjoying perfect health owe their recovery from blood or skin diseases to this universally used blood medicine. S. S. S. is made entirely from roots, herbs and barks which possess not only cleansing and healing ingredients, but building-up and strengthening properties to keep the blood in perfect order. No one can be well when the blood is impure; they lack the energy and strength that is natural with health, the complexion becomes pale and sallow, the vitality is weakened and they suffer from a general broken down condition. When the waste or refuse matter, which nature intends shall be thrown off, is left in the system because of a sluggish, torpid condition of the expelling members, it is absorbed into the blood, making this vital stream weak, sour and acrid, and its condition is manifested by boils, pimples, rashes, blotches and other eruptions of the skin. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes every particle of blood taint or poison of every character, makes the blood fresh and strong and gives energy to the entire body. When the blood has been cleansed by S. S. S. all skin diseases and eruptions pass away and the smooth, clear skin, glowing with health, shows that the body is being nourished by rich, pure blood. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders, and for their cure nothing equals S. S. S. It does not injuriously affect the most delicate parts of the body and can be taken with perfect safety by old or young. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

THE Brangwyn Mystery

CHAPTER III.

"I say, Belle. Come out for a couple of hours on the river. It's a shame to waste a day like this."

"I'm not wasting the day, Bob, dear," said the person appealed to. "I have my hands as full as they can hold. It's Lillian Lee's birthday tomorrow, and if I'm to have this finished in time I shall be at work till midnight."

"Oh, bother Lillian Lee's birthday. I've no more than a fortnight's leave, and we've hardly had a day together. I call it downright unsisterly. It's simply beastly."

"They don't teach ye manners on board ship, do they, Bob, darling?" said Miss Molloy, looking up at her companion with roguish eyes. "Ah, then, what's the use of your trying to be out of temper? Sit down now, like the good boy ye can be when ye like. Ye can smoke if ye want to, and we'll be just as happy here as we would be on the river."

"All right," said the young man, in a tone which indicated that all was wrong. His sister, who was engaged in the fine embroidery of some silken mystery, sat on the shady side of the veranda which surrounded a pretty little bungalow overgrown with Virginia creeper and roses. Her brother bestowed his flannel-clad figure in a long cane lounging chair, lit a pipe, and lay smoking for a while with an air of injury. "Ye're mighty fond of Miss Lillian Lee all of a sudden," he said. "I never heard of her till I came home this leave."

"Oh, yes ye have, then," responded Miss Molloy, "only ye've forgotten. We've been friendly this three years." The young man, yielding to the soothing influence of tobacco, lay quiet for a while, puffing rings of smoke into the tranquil air.

"Oh, Belle," he said suddenly. "I've news for ye. Ye're going to have a new neighbor. The newspaper man—what's his name again?—Truscott—is going to get married."

"That's an interesting fact in itself, but I don't know the man be sight," said the young lady. "Who's he marrying?"

"It's some tremendous swell, I know," said young Molloy; "but I've forgotten her name. I got the news from Billery. You remember Billery?"

"Faith I do, then," his sister answered. "It's the little man that ruined himself, and is always tellin' other people how they can make a fortune."

"That's the Johnny," said young Molloy. "But I've not told you me news yet. I say ye're going to have a new neighbor."

"Is the newspaper man leaving when he marries?"

"He is, and it's your own knight of the rueful countenance that's taken over his lease and is coming to live down here."

"Ye can't be meaning that Brangwyn man?" cried Miss Belle, dropping her work into her lap and looking at her brother with an air of great displeasure.

"I am," he said. "No less. Mr. Aloysius Brangwyn takes up his tenancy in about a week, so Billery tells me. Ye'll not be wanting for society now, Belle, me darlin'."

"Society!" cried Miss Molloy with a tone of great acerbity. "Is it society? Upon my word of honor if I were shipwrecked with the man upon a desert island I'd live on one side of it and banish him to the other."

"Ye would not, then," her brother responded. "I'm not saying I like him meself, for I don't, but I never met a soul in me life that had half the man's charm when he likes to use it. It's not six months since we were stationed at Villefranche, and I saw a great deal of him there. He'd a lovely yacht—the Seagull—a little thing of about three hundred tons, and I dined aboard with him. He was good enough to remember me, and at first it struck me that he was a lot too patronizing, but in a month we were as thick as thieves, and I tell ye, Belle, he was the idol of the place. The women were round him like shoals."

"Oh, the women," said Miss Belle, with a mighty disdainful inflection.

"I know your opinion of your own charmin' sex," said Master Bob, "and I needn't tell you that I share ut."

"You, ye whippersnapper," cried his sister; "an' what right have you to an opinion? The women are little enough to brag of. They're flighty and hollow-headed enough, poor things, but they're wisdom's self with any male creature of your age and experience."

"That's as may be," said Bob, complacently. "But I thought ye'd be interested in knowing that your own special bete-noir was coming to live within a hundred yards."

"I suppose this is your mean revenge, because I couldn't come on the river," said Belle, viciously, biting with her white teeth at a piece of scarlet sewing silk. "Of course that's nonsense. The man's coming, and ye're not responsible for it. But I'm sorry, and I'm sorry in me heart."

"He'll not trouble you, Belle," said young Molloy.

"But he will," declared his sister. "I know why he's coming. I'll tell you now. A child of nineteen is likely to care little about such things, but at any rate you can understand. The man's five-and-thirty if he's a day. If there is a darling girl in the world, as good as she's lovely, and as lovable as she's good, it's Lilian Lee."

"What's that mean?" asked young Molloy, rolling over idly in his chair. "Suppose he be five-and-thirty, and Miss Lee's good and pretty, what's the one thing to do with the other?"

"Oh, the density of it!" said Miss Belle. "Amn't I telling you? He's in love with her, and he pesthers the life out of her to marry him." In her anger the sweet musical hint of Irish in her speech broke into a most decided brogue. "And I'd invited Lilian to spend a month with me here, and now she'll be afraid to come. I'd been lookin' forward to it so, and now me pleasure's clean spoiled."

"If she doesn't like the fellow," said Bob, "why doesn't she send him about his business?"

"That sounds like a sensible question," Belle answered. "I don't suppose that ye'll understand a word of what I'm saying, but I've had it on me mind for more than a year, and now that the man's coming near, I know that he's made up his mind to lay a regular siege to poor Lilian. She's afraid of him. She doesn't like him. But—I could kill him for it—he has some kind of fascination or power or charm—I don't know what you call it."

"He can't make her say 'Yes' while she means 'No' I suppose," said Bob sitting up in the lounge chair and tapping his pipe against his heel.

"That's the misery of it," said Belle. "That's why he frightens her."

"Then," declared Master Molloy, rising for his tobacco pouch, "she must be a little chuckle-head."

"Indeed she isn't," cried Belle, vehemently. "She's as level-headed a gyurl as ever ye met in your loife. And she's plenty of courage and spirit and determination and all that. Ye've never seen her? I'll show ye her portrait, an' ye shall tell me if she looks the kind of girl to be affected that way."

She plumped the work on which she was engaged into a little fancy basket beside her, and walked into the next room. In a moment she returned with the portrait, mounted on a bevelled and gilt-edged plaque of cardboard, some ten by eight inches in size, and thrust it into his outstretched hand.

"I've seen this," said Bob. "I was going to ask you who it was, but I forgot. I say, Belle, she is a ripper and no mistake. By Jove, I wish I thought there was a nice young gal like that growing up for me."

The portrait had been tinted by an artist's hand. It represented a girl of twenty or thereabouts in winter costume in the open air, with a background of snow-laden trees. The figure was lithe and well posed, and through its furs revealed no more than that. The face was very beautiful, with eyes of an innocent childish blue, the lips not actually smiling, but looking as if they were about to smile, the whole countenance radiant with a gentle intelligence, and framed in hair of an unusual tint of reddish gold. The fault of the face was that it was too ethereal, too sensitive. It was not a weak face either, though any experienced observer, bearing Miss Belle's statement in mind, would have had no difficulty in understanding that its owner might very well be susceptible to influences of a kind which would leave other women of her years and intelligence untouched. The midshipman looked at it long and seriously. Perhaps because of his Irish blood, he had an intuitive unconscious understanding of it.

"I know what you're driving at, Belle," he said, at last; "I can feel it, though I can't say it. There are snakes, ye know, that'll look at a little bird till the poor thing grows bewildered, and will take a header into the jaws that are waiting for it. He's a snaky kind of a Johnny, is Mr. Aloysius Brangwyn, and this is just the sort of little bird for him. Poor little bird!"

He kissed the picture with a boyish impulse, and handed it back to his sister.

"I didn't think you'd understand, Bob," she said as she received it. "But ye see exactly how I feel, and ye know now what it is that makes poor Lilian afraid of him."

"Marry her off to some nice fellow that will take care of her," Bob counselled, sagely. "There ought to be lots who'd be willing to carry off a girl like that. Has she got money?"

"She's not rich, but she has enough and to spare, and there's more coming. But as for eligible men that are just pining for her—they're in shoals. There's that black-avised wretch's cousin, Alexis, for one."

"Well, marry her to Alexis, and I'll come and dance the sailor's hornpipe at the wedding. Why, you'd think there couldn't be a better match. He's rolling in riches. He's as straight as a die, and he's not ugly enough to set the dogs barkin', neither."

"I think he's the handsomest man I ever saw," said Miss Belle. "An' between ourselves, Master Bob, I could wish 'twas meself he'd taken a fancy to." She laughed as she said it, but she blushed at the same time, and a second later she gave a half-humorous little sigh. "But then, ye see, Bob, I'm a born old maid. I'm as plain as a pikestaff, and I'm on the shelf at four-and-twenty. If the late lamented Admiral Molloy had known the difference between a Derby winner and a clothes-horse I might have had a little money, an' so might you, poor boy."

"Don't," said Bob. "I wouldn't have changed the pater for all the money in the world. He was a nailin' good officer, and a man from his baldness to his boots."

"And when did you say," asked Belle, to divert the talk, "that Mr. Brangwyn was coming here?"

"Billery said he was coming directly. Billery always was a queer old bird, but he's queerer now than ever. He's just got back from Paris, and he's cram-full of mystery and importance. Poor old Billery used to booze a lot, but when I met him outside the Cri., and asked him to come in and lay the dust, he looked at me as if I'd asked him to pick a pocket. 'I'm off it,' says Billery, 'until my investigations are completed.' I never liked him to see that I was chaffin' him, and I asked him serious and solid what he was investigating. 'My lips are sealed,' says Billery. 'You will know in time. The world will know.' I think the chaps in the Cri. must have fancied I was mad, for I went in laughing fit to split."

He laughed anew at the recollection, and then began to fill his pipe when he heard a soft voice from the room behind him pronounce his sister's name, and almost in the same second that young lady shrieked aloud and rushed into the interior. He spun swiftly around on his heel, and was in time to see Miss Molloy cast herself into the arms of a young lady whom she kissed again and again with Irish fervor and with many tender murmurs of "Darling!" and "Dearest!" and "How delightful of you to think of me." And whilst Bob was still staring at this unexpected scene, Belle turned on him, flushed, touzled, and radiant, and, dragging her visitor forward by the hand, announced her as Miss Lilian Lee.

"This is me brother Bob, that's just back from the Mediterranean ocean. We were talking of ye only a minute or two ago, an' I was showin' him that lovely tinted portrait, and I can tell ye, darlin', that ye've made another conquest, and if Bob hasn't the courage and the honesty to confirm me, he's no Molloy."

"There's no doubt of me right to the name, Miss Lee," said Bob. "If ye can trust to Belle's criterion I'm a Molloy all over."

"That is very nice of you," said the newly-introduced lady, giving him her hand and laughing.

Master Bob, aged nineteen, was a lad of what may be called the handsome-ugly type. His tanned face, with its half-chiselled nose and chin and lips, spelt sincerity and courage. His six feet of unripened manhood had grace in every line of it, and his honest eyes spoke adoration. The woman who was to be twenty to-morrow looked at him with an almost motherly admiration. But before her Bob's heart went down like a ninepin.

(To Be Continued.)

Such Railroading.

"Such railroading," said President Baer of the Reading line, apropos of reckless running, "reminds me of an Irish brakeman.

"This brakeman, who was employed on a railway in the neighborhood of Cook, was annoyed one morning to find the train stopping in a desolate place miles away from any station.

"He ran to the cab and shouted to the engineer:

"'Hi, ye omadhoun, what are ye stoppin' here fur?'

"The engineer retorted angrily:

"'Don't you see the signal's agin us, ye gossoon?'

"'Musha,' said the brakeman, 'how mighty particular ye're gettin'.'"

From a Student of Women.

Dr. Emil Reich, the well known student of women, said at a dinner during his last American visit:

"It was a young lady of Baltimore who sat one afternoon reading a novel when a maid came and said:

"'Mr. Blankley is in the drawing room, miss.'

"A look of annoyance clouded the young lady's innocent blue eyes, and she said hurriedly, as she rose:

"'Horrors, and my hair isn't waved. Tell him he'll have to wait a little as I'm in the kitchen helping mother.'"

Being a Woman.

"The typewriter girl we have now," said Merchant, "can rattle things off the machine as fast as a fellow can talk."

"Do you mean to say she can take down remarks as fast as any one can make them?"

"I said as fast as any fellow can talk. She can't do it as fast as she can talk."

Drawing It Fine.

"She is daft on the subject of germs and sterilizes or filters everything in the house."

"How does she get along with her family?"

"Oh, even her relations are strained."

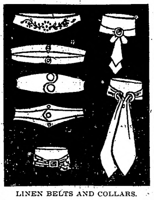
A man can always marry an heiress—in a novel.

THE VOGUE OF LINEN.

Linen Frocks, Linen Belts and Linen Neckwear—Many Dainty Dress Accessories of This Material.

Linen has played a prominent role in the comedy of the fashions during the last few seasons, and, while sheer lingerie stuffs have interfered somewhat with the vogue of the heavier forms of linen for ceremonious wear, the linen fad is still flourishing mightily in the province of the tailored shirt waist, the simple tub frock and the little dress accessories.

Open eyelets are sprinkled through the design of the belt embroidery, and some of the models show complicated and exquisite hand work.



LINEN BELTS AND COLLARS.

Attractive little pearl buckles in new shapes give individuality to many of the new models, and small pearl buttons are often used for a finish, but are more or less of a nuisance in laundering.

Very tiny buttons of pearl and worked loops set on the back of a stock will be found a much more satisfactory scheme than the usual pins or hooks and eyes.

One of the clever things in a perfectly plain stock is a close fitting model whose ends pass one through the other in the back after the well-known fashion and are brought back to the front. Here the rounded ends come nearer meeting than is the case when a model of this type is to be held by ribbon or scarf ties, yet they do not meet, and they tie as in other models.

The ends almost meet and in each end is worked a button hole. Link buttons like those used for cuffs are slipped through the buttonholes and hold the ends in place. This trim neck finish with collar link of cabochon stone set in a gold rim and matching cuff buttons is particularly effective upon the tailormade waist.

KINGS AND TALL QUEENS.

Nearly All the European Kings Are Below Their Consorts in Height—Tall Women of To-Day.

It has been noted that nearly all the European kings have consorts who are taller than themselves. Princess Ena is so much taller than the king of Spain that when they are standing to be taken by the camera the art of the photographer is exercised in many a clever device to bring their heads on a level. The queen of Italy towers above her king; and the stately queen of Portugal gains added state when beside her husband's jovial face and figure. The Czarina is in every respect built on a more noble scale than her husband, and the princess of Wales looks more robust as well as taller than the prince. This seems to show that there is some degree of "natural selection," as Mr. Darwin would have called it, even in the weddings that are so much matters of state as those of kings and heirs to thrones. The little woman, "just as high as my heart," is not in fashion nowadays; and queens, princesses and duchesses are all as notably affected by this modern taste as their less important sisters.

Large Veins.

Where the veins of the hands are so pronounced and the hands red there is poor circulation; you should see a physician for such condition. Or, which is very possible, you are wearing too tight collars or cuffs or your sleeves are too tight in the armhole. Anything that constricts anywhere about the body causes the hands to swell and the veins to show.

Green Coats.

Green silk coats, long or short, and in all the popular styles, have a considerable vogue and are attractive in combination with the lingerie frock. Little shoulder capes and pelerines, jaunty beleros, mantelets, paletots and long, loose wraps are all shown in the empire and emerald green tones and also in the new apple green, which is striking, but promises to be very much the thing.

Nail Powder.

Formula for nail powder: One-half ounce of violet talcum powder, one-half ounce of pulverized boric acid, one-half ounce of powdered starch, 15 drops of tincture of carmine. Apply first a little nail rouge, then put on the powder and polish with a chamois skin buffer. Only a slight rosy glow is necessary.

A Dance Frock.

A very charming dance frock for a young girl was made of painted muslin, the design pale-yellow roses and foliage, and hemmed with soft ivory duchesse satin, the top finished with inch-wide kiltings, both of muslin and satin.

Fond of Gardening.

The favorite hobby of Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, the most famous of all woman physicians, is gardening.

How Paris Honors Men.

Paris honors famous literary men by naming streets after them. The death of Henrik Ibsen has started talk of thus commemorating the great Norwegian. A dramatist of the lighter sort declared his readiness to vote for a Rue Henrik Ibsen on condition that there should also be a Rue Bjornstjerne-Bjornson. This, he explained, would not only be doing homage to the author of "Beyond Human Power," but would be productive of amusing results in the case of cabmen—as, no doubt, it would.

"OH, SAVE MY CANARY BIRD."

Appeals of a Frantic Woman While the House Blazed.

Upper Sherman street, Syracuse, experienced a little excitement recently. The neighborhood for blocks around watched the firemen battle for over an hour in subduing a blaze that completely gutted the interior of the houses 413 and 415, says the Syracuse Standard. The first blaze started from some unknown cause in 415, and an alarm was turned in from box 461. When the apparatus arrived both houses were filled with smoke and the fire was eating its way up through the partitions that divided them. Assistant Chief Walsh, who was first on the scene, immediately got a couple of streams going.

"Mr. Fireman, save my mother's picture," cried one woman.

Another yelled: "Oh, save my canary bird."

The bird was handed out of the window a few minutes later by Assistant Chief Shattuck and lay dead on the bottom of the cage.

The picture was still among the missing articles when the firemen quit.

DOCTOR'S SHIFT.

Now Gets Along Without It.

A physician says: "Until last fall I used to eat meat for my breakfast and suffered with indigestion until the meat had passed from the stomach.

"Last fall I began the use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and very soon found I could do without meat, for my body got all the nourishment necessary from the Grape-Nuts, and since then I have not had any indigestion and am feeling better and have increased in weight.

"Since finding the benfit I derived from Grape-Nuts I have prescribed the food for all of my patients suffering from indigestion or over-feeding and also for those recovering from disease where I want a food easy to take and certain to digest and which will not overtax the stomach.

"I always find the results I look for when I prescribe Grape-Nuts. For ethical reasons please omit my name." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The reason for the wonderful amount of nutriment, and the easy digestion of Grape-Nuts is not hard to find.

In the first place, the starchy part of the wheat and barley goes through various processes of cooking, to perfectly change the starch into Dextrose or Post Sugar, in which state it is ready to be easily absorbed by the blood. The parts in the wheat and barley which Nature can make use of for rebuilding brain and nerve centers are retained in this remarkable food, and thus the human body is supplied with the powerful strength producers so easily noticed after one has eaten Grape-Nuts each day for a week or 10 days. "There's a reason."

Demon Assists

By MARION WARD

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"It's all very well, Demon, but what is a poor girl to do? Did you ever know such stupidity as his, in all your life? I know he—likes me—very much and—and I know—I like him—and yet he won't say anything and I can't!"

Demon raised his ears into two sharp points of interrogation. The girl stroked his rough little head.

"What intelligent eyes you have, Demon," she said affectionately. "I verily believe you understand half what is said."

"Half!" he snorted indignantly. "That's just where the human intelligence falls short of the canine. We understand every word you say, but I'm blessed if I can make you understand me."

"Demon, dear, what are you mumbling about?" interrupted his mistress with concern, bending her pretty face down to look at him. Demon fairly gasped.

"Well," he demanded in dog language. "Can't you understand plain speaking, you poor dull witted mortal?"

Marjorie laid her soft cheek against the rough little head.

"Do you love me very much, Demon?" she questioned.

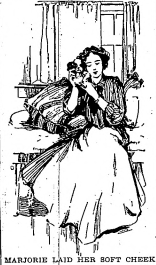
"Of course I do, better even than mutton bones," he replied loyally and kissed her in proof thereof.

"Well, then," she demanded with a little laugh, "why don't you help me?"

"Yes, why don't you help me, Big Eyes?" she teased.

He turned without a word and jumped from her lap to the floor. Then he gave a comprehensive shake from the tips of his ears to the end of his tail.

"Certainly I will," he said gravely. "Au revoir." And he trotted in a businesslike little manner out of the room.



MARJORIE LAID HER SOFT CHEEK AGAINST THE ROUGH LITTLE HEAD.

Thirty minutes later Demon came trotting importantly back.

"Here he is," he announced, proudly. "Now surely you can settle the business satisfactorily." He glanced back over his shoulder. "Come right in," he called condescendingly. "She's waiting for you."

And as though in response to his invitation a tall, broad shouldered young fellow with clear eyes and a tanned face came half hesitatingly through the door.

Marjorie dropped the book she was pretending to read with a bang.

"Howard!" she cried, staring at him with pink cheeks and astonished eyes.

He advanced shamefacedly.

"Really, Marjorie, now I am here I don't know how to apologize," he said. "It was all Demon's fault."

"Of course it was," interpolated the Irish terrier, complacently.

Marjorie stared from one to the other. An uncomfortable remembrance of her last injunction to the dog crossed her mind, but she dismissed it with a smile at her own absurdity.

"Demon?" she questioned, looking from him to the eager bright-eyed little animal, and back again.

"Oh!" said Demon, shocked. "You know you sent me!"

"Yes, I assure you it was," explained the young fellow, anxiously. "I was in the middle of a game of golf, and he came running up barking and pulling at my leg, and backing and going on like a small maniac. I only laughed at first and told him to shut up; but he wouldn't and then I saw he was trying to make me understand he wanted me to go somewhere. So I put down my club and followed him. And would you believe it, he brought me straight up to this door!"

Marjorie's cheeks were vivid carmine, and there was something almost like apprehension in her eyes as she looked at the self-satisfied Demon. Was it really just a peculiar coincidence? Or— She drew a deep breath.

"Quite a mistake, I assure you," she said rather frigidly.

"Oh!" from Demon reproachfully.

She turned round quickly and caught him up on her lap.

"Demon," she exclaimed, rather breathlessly, "you are uncanny this afternoon."

She looked at the big apologetic young fellow standing there, and something in his expression made her heart throb. She smiled at him suddenly, brilliantly.

"As you are here," she invited gently, "won't you sit down?"

"Thank you," he said in a low voice, and sat down in the lounge chair at the opposite side of the fire. Demon looked from one to the other expectantly.

There was a long silence.

Then simultaneously both started a sentence, colored, and stopped short.

"I beg your pardon—?" suggested she.

"No, yours," corrected he.

She bowed. "I was only going to ask you when the match had been decided for," she finished.

He told her, and once started, the conversation flowed on in casual commonplaces. Demon looked from one to the other with profound disgust.

"And after all my trouble!" he cried His feelings overcame him, and springing from her lap, he planted his four feet pugnaciously on the ground between them, and casting eloquent glances from one to the other howled forth: "Why don't you rub noses?"

They stopped talking in astonishment at this unusual behavior on the well-mannered little dog's part.

"Demon, dear," remonstrated Marjorie. She got up, and went over and knelt down beside him.

"What's the matter, dear?" she questioned gently.

Demon shook himself impatiently from her tender hold, and running over to the young athlete, began pulling and worrying at his legs, casting anxious and expressive glances from his big eyes.

Howard rose wonderingly.

"What does he want now?" he wondered. "What a queer little beggar it is."

"Come on," said Demon, sturdily tugging for all he was worth.

"I suppose he thinks I have been here long enough, and wants to take me back again," guessed the young fellow, laughing, and following obediently. But Demon had no such idea. Straight across the room he went with his captive in tow, till they arrived at within half a foot of where Marjorie stood amazedly watching. Then with a little sigh of exhaustion he released his hold and stood back, watching expectantly. The man and the girl stood close to each other, and the blue eyes looked deep into the grey.

The grey dropped first, and a scarlet wave of color crept into the girl's soft cheeks.

The man pulled himself together with a deep breath.

"What is the little beggar after?" he puzzled.

Marjorie looked down at Demon's expressive eyes, and backed hastily.

"I don't know," she said, hurriedly. "Demon, don't be so ridiculous," she added sharply.

Demon shook his obstinate little head.

"You asked me too," he maintained, and dragged the young man forward again.

"Don't you understand? Rub noses!" he commanded.

They looked at each other and at him. Then they both laughed out.

Marjorie bent down suddenly, and picking him up in her arms went back to her chair.

Demon fought himself free.

Then he sat in the middle of the floor, and lifted up his voice and howled.

"Demon!" said Marjorie.

He howled louder.

"Be quiet, sir, I am ashamed of you," said his mistress sternly.

Demon got up, and trotted across to Marjorie's chair, Howard in pursuit. Then, his pursuer reaching him, he sat down suddenly, pressed tight against Marjorie's knees, and looked up as quiet as a mouse, his beautiful eyes angelic in expression.

"Now—?" he wheedled.

The young man paused. "He seems quiet now—shall I leave him?" he suggested.

Marjorie caressed the rough little head. "Yes," she decided.

The young man took two steps away.

"Ow!" wailed Demon.

He paused, looking over his shoulder. Demon got up solemnly and towed him back.

A light broke in on Howard's brain.

"He wants me to stay near you!" he divined, brilliantly.

"Of course, stupid," agreed Demon.

Marjorie's cheeks burned. She said nothing.

Howard coughed.

"Perhaps as it seems the only way to keep him quiet—" he suggested deprecatingly.

"Yes," murmured Marjorie without looking up.

He pulled up a chair and sat down beside her, very close.

Demon sat in front of both watching them with bright eyes and one ear cocked expectantly.

The young man looked down at him. Her near presence intoxicated him. He was growing reckless.

"He still wants something," he hazarded daringly.

"Yes," murmured Marjorie again.

He drew a deep breath.

There was a long silence.

Then Demon, lifting up his voice gave a wail of disappointment. "Aren't you going to rub noses after all?" he wailed.

Marjorie laughed out suddenly, an hysterical little laugh.

"What are you laughing at," demanded her admirer?

She cast one swift glance at him; her eyes were infinitely sweet.

"I was only thinking," she replied desperately, "how much more intelligent Demon is than you!"

Demon glanced over at the dusky fire-lit hearth. Then he curled himself contentedly around amongst the satin sofa cushions, a strictly prohibited elysium.

"At last," he murmured, contentedly. "Lord, what a lot of assistance bipeds do need."

BLOATED WITH DROPSY.

The Heart Was Badly Affected When the Patient Began Using Doan's.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maxwell, of 415 West Fourth St., Olympia, Wash., says: "For over three years I suffered with a dropsical condition without being aware that it was due to kidney trouble. The early stages were principally backache and bearing down pain, but I went along without worrying much until dropsy set in. My feet and ankles swelled up, my hands puffed, and became so tense I could hardly close them. I had great difficulty in breathing, and my heart would flutter with the least exertion. I could not walk far without stopping again and again to rest. Since using four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills the bloating has gone down and the feelings of distress have disappeared."

Blamed It on the Chair.

At a "psychometric lecture" in London something of real value was brought out. A man always sober suddenly became a confirmed drunkard. There was no apparent reason. Then a psychometric expert was called in, discovered that there was something uncanny about the chair in which the fallen man habitually sat, and eventually found that he had bought it at a sale, and that it had been the property of a publican who died of drink! The chair was burned accordingly, and the man became a teetotaler again.

Miss Margret Merkley

OPERATION AVOIDED

EXPERIENCE OF MISS MERKLEY

She Was Told That an Operation Was Inevitable. How She Escaped It.

When a physician tells a woman suffering with serious feminine trouble that an operation is necessary, the very thought of the knife and the operating table strikes terror to her heart, and our hospitals are full of women coming for just such operations.

There are cases where an operation is the only resource, but when one considers the great number of cases of menacing female troubles cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after physicians have advised operations, no woman should submit to one without first trying the Vegetable Compound and writing Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice, which is free.

Miss Margret Merkley, of 275 Third Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, shooting pains through the pelvic organs, bearing down pains and cramps compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said I had a female trouble and ulceration and advised an operation. To this I strongly objected and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The ulceration quickly healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared and I am once more strong, vigorous and well."

Female troubles are steadily on the increase among women. If the monthly periods are very painful, or too frequent and excessive—if you have pain or swelling low down in the left side, bearing-down pains, don't neglect yourself: try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., and in order to buy the genuine article and to get its beneficial effects, one has only to note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package. DO YOU KNOW

That the wages of sin gather no moss.

That it is easier to be sick than it is to be good.

That the average woman likes to be kept guessing.

That good intentions cover a multitude of failures.

That a tailor knows a lot about the seamy side of life.

That the most serious part of married life is the length of it.

That even the weather proclaims too much Thaw in New York.

That fear of being reformed keeps many a man in the ranks of bachelors.

That the average man is an idiosyncratic concatenation of inherited tendencies.

That no man ever told his lawyer a straight story, uncolored by his own interests.

That there is always room at the top but the man at the bottom doesn't get such an awful fall.

That no woman is plain or ugly. The difference is that some are better looking than others.

That a pessimist is one who sees life as it is but without the courage or ambition to change it.

That it is generally the bald-headed man who sneers at the one who parts his hair in the middle.

That an exchange says when it comes to kisses few fellows are too proud to beg or too honest to steal.

That it is the easiest thing in the world to convince yourself that you are just a little bit better than your neighbor.

That A. M. Greely says if Heaven were pictured as a place of eternal office-holding, there would be more candidates.

That some one suggests a reason for the brevity of Uncle Sam's trousers—he gets his legs pulled so often that he can never maintain a fit.

That no man is so low, so debased or so degraded but that some woman will see some good qualities in him and love him for those qualities.

That it is said when a man spends too much money on his clothes he always tells his wife it is good business policy to keep well dressed.

That a girl doesn't care so much about being assured that she is the only one you have ever loved as that she is the only one you are going to love.

That woman is piqued by the reverse of compliment, but he must be past master of the art and a good side-stepper who undertakes to play the game.

That a chorus girl's costume is said to be merely a combination of the dress a woman wears to a ball in winter and the one she wears in bathing at the lake in summer.

That a spinster says how funny it will be when the new woman gets so far along that the man will scream when she kisses him—We would now if some of them undertook it.

That a spinster's meditations inform us that nothing more is needed to prove the natural deceit of man than the way he has of jollying along any ugly sort of an old woman if he wants to ask a favor of her.

That a judge tells a story which illustrates the difficulty met in trying to stop the carrying of pistols. A tough youth was brought before the judge, charged with firing a revolver in the street. The testimony in the case was to the effect that the young hoodlum had filled himself with whiskey and had discharged his weapon in a crowded street. "Twenty dollars and costs," said the magistrate. "But, your honor, my client did not hit anybody." "Why, you admit that he fired the gun? "Yes, but he fired in the air." "Twenty dollars and costs," repeated the judge. "He might have shot an angel."—Adrian Democrat.

That the News Tribune relates that a Duluth small boy and his little sister were being questioned in a friendly way by an admiring visitor. The little fellow was asked how old he was, but he had an attack of shyness and hung his head, while the sister volunteered the information that he was six. The next query was as to height, but at this both had to hang their heads and acknowledge that they were stumped. The visitor then obligingly gave up the attack and turned the conversation into other channels, but soon the girl edged around to her side and whispered, "You must not tell mamma, but Johnny is just nigh enough to reach the jam on the pantry shelf."

IN PIONEER DAYS

The cornet band are arranging to add two new instruments so as to make the set complete. On Wednesday next they give a grand ball in Kretzschmar's hall, the proceeds of which will be used to defray part of the expense for instruments. The boys are doing finely under their new leadership and should be well patronized.

F. E. Hunt has taken the lease of the Smith & Phelen store on Broadway; and is moving into it his hardware stock. An additional floor has been laid, and the shelving and counters are now being put in. Mr. Hunt has the greater part of his stock transferred, and is building a warehouse, 30 feet long in the rear of the main store, in which he will keep his stock of stoves, iron and heavy hardware.

The subscribers to the new Catholic church fund met on Saturday in Mr. F. J. Detling's office and selected a committee consisting of F. J. Detling, J. C. O'Brien, F. J. Rothpletz, Jos. Bischoff, J. M. Boyle, Fritz Schmidt, with Mr. Coad of Black River, Basil Emard and John DeForge of Gervais township. The committee meet next Sunday at 9 a. m. at Mr. Detling's office, when they will organize and elect an executive committee of five. Steps will immediately be taken to secure the ground and building will be pushed as fast as possible.

The new trustees appointed for St. Joseph's church by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Seidenbusch during his visit here last week, were Messrs. Pierre Bottineau, Charles Langevin and H. B. Kaufer.

The postoffice at Emardville is quite a convenience for the settlers of that vicinity. Mr. Emard and John Mathews have opened a grocery and general produce store there which is securing quite a trade. The Clearwater at that point furnishes a good water power which can be improved at little cost. Mr. Emard, proprietor of the town, will give good inducements to parties wishing to build mills or start business of any kind.

Mr. Pierre Emard paid us a friendly call on Friday last, and informed us that all of the wheat in his neighborhood will run over twenty bushels per acre No. 1 hard. The land in his vicinity (between the rivers) is all either timber or brush land, and is making the best of farms. Mr. Emard already has over one thousand bushels of potatoes harvested, and has considerable more to dig. Plenty and white winged peace are sure to dwell in so favored a locality as that.

Jos. Helm has appointed himself deputy street commissioner for his end of Broadway, and without waiting for the board to act, has cleared Broadway for some distance, of all stumps and obstructions in it. He does not want any teams breaking down near the blue front.

Our district schools are in full operation, and the number of scholars steadily increasing, and by the time the fall work is over, so as to release many of the older children, the teachers will have their hands full. Miss Kate Daragan has charge of the school on Bottineau avenue, and Mrs. F. Champlin has that in the Detling building on Sixth street.

We take pleasure in announcing to our readers that Red Lake Falls will within a very short time, add one more to her list of important enterprises. Without mentioning names, we will say that two gentlemen now in the town, possessing ample capital and backing, are completing arrangements for a bank, which will go into operation at once. In our next we will give full details.

The Papal Flag.

The papal flag is comparatively unfamiliar outside of the Eternal city. The war flag of the defunct temporal power of the pope was white, and in its center stood figures of St. Peter and St. Paul with the cross-keys and tiara above them. The flag of the merchant ships owned by the subjects of the states of the church is a curious combination, half yellow and half white, with the design of the cross-keys on the white. In the banner used by the crusader king of Jarusalem, Godfrey, the only tinctures introduced were the two metals, gold and silver, five golden crosses being placed upon a silver field. This was done with the intention of making the device unique, as in all other cases it is deemed false heraldry to place metal on metal.—Chicago Journal.

FARMERS COMING IN LARGE NUMBERS

Red Lake Falls' First Market Day Will Attract Them to the City Saturday.

Visitors Will be Given Prizes and Entertained Without Cost—All Welcome.

Red Lake Falls may prepare to receive a very large number of farmers in the city on Saturday, the city's first attempt at a market day. The event has been widely advertised and an unusual amount of interest has been created among farmers living as far as 25 and 30 miles from the city. The time of the year is not entirely advantageous as the farmers are very busy but there are enough coming to make a stranger think there is something doing.

On the part of the business men it may be promised that if the day is successful from the standpoint of attendance, and that will be taken as the standard, other market days will be held on varying lines with a greater number and more liberal prizes. So it is to the farmers interest to come for that reason and the further reason that even at this time merchants are haying special sales on many things which are seasonable and the reductions in prices genuine and liberal. It will pay to trade in Red Lake Falls on market day, Saturday July 21.

Beginning at one o'clock there will be a number of foot races for cash prizes in which all farmer boys and girls may compete. From 1:30 to 2:30 the Red Lake Falls band will give one of its best concerts. At three o'clock there will be a ball game probably between Red Lake Lake Falls and Fertile. It was found impossible to get two teams from the country. Each merchant offering a prize will be the judge in that contest.

The store formerly occupied by the O'Brien Rros. will be fitted up with chairs and toilet articles and used exclusively as a rest room for women and children.

For the benefit of those who have not seen the list of prizes, it is reprinted below:

Farmer bringing the largest family to town, boys suit $5, Berthon & Armstrong.

Oldest married couple, 75-piece dinner set, Theo. LaBissoniere.

Every baby under one year of age, a solid gold ring, H. W. Anderson.

Oldest settler, lap robe, Joseph Helm.

Heaviest man, 10 lb. roast of beef, Groshong & Blake.

Solemnities at St. Mary's.

Next Sunday a large class of children will receive their first Holy Communion in St. Mary's church, during Solemn High Mass celebrated at 10 a. m. Fathers Michael and Innocent, both of St. John's university, will be deacon and subdeacon of the Mass. The choir has exquisite music in store for the occasion. All in all the celebration will be unique.

By a recent indult of Pope Pius X a plenary indulgence by the first communicants and their relatives to the third degree inclusive, under the usual conditions. All who devoutly assist at first communion services can gain a partial indulgence of seven years and seven quarantines. Everyone is cordially invited to be present.

COMMERCIAL CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

Business Men Hold Enthusiastic Meeting and Plan Wisely for the Future.

Will Probably Engage Salaried Secretary to Devote His Time to the Business.

Red Lake Falls is to have a commercial club, one not organized in the heat of enthusiasm, but in the calm judgment of business men in the right way looking to the future welfare of the city.

A meeting was held at the city hall Monday evening and was presided over by Mayor Duffy. W. S. Cox was chosen secretary. Mr. Duffy explained the object of his call as a desire to discuss a number of questions of interest to the city but the talk following nearly all centered upon the organization of a commercial club in the thought that such a club might best settle the other questions of civic improvement and preparation for next year's tournament. Among those who spoke were Mayor Duffy, Frank Jeffers, S. M. Sivertson, F. A. Grady, P. B. Gaass, Thomas Germc, W. A. Schreiter, Fred Borchers, F. L. Farley and W. S. Cox. All favored the formation of a club. Mention was made of a similar club that had been organized here in past years, had flourished awhile and died without accomplishing anything and it was agreed that the present attempt might easily profit by the mistakes of the other and be run on different lines. One thing in particular was suggested that made toward accomplishment of things, that, when organized, a secretary be employed to devote his time to the work and to receive compensation for it.

Pursuing the purpose of organizing, a committee was appointed on permanent organization, consisting of Frank Jeffers, S. M. Sivertson, M. O. Sortedahl, Sam E. Hunt and Mayor Duffy.

Another meeting of the business men will be held at the city hall next Monday evening at which time the committee is expected to make its report.

No other notice of Monday night's meeting will be given but every man in town should make it a point to be there as it is a matter of vital import to himself personally as well as for the future welfare of the city. The time has arrived when something must be done and with the splendid opportunity going to waste day after day, an incalcuable amount of good can be accomplished by interested, concerted, harmonious action.

Let every man in town prepare to attend the meeting Monday night.

FERTILE WON THE GAME

Defeats Red Lake Falls By a Score of 10 to 4.

The Red Lake Falls ball team played its first game on Friday against Fertile, the aggregation that has been playing such successful ball all season, and lost out by a score of 10 to 4.

It was in the opening inning that Fertile played the home boys off their feet and by the aid of several expensive errors were able to accumulate six runs. Then the locals pulled themselves together and the remainder of the game was as pretty a contest as one would care to see, each side getting four runs. Harry Healy was in the box for Red Lake Falls and was caught by Richards. Garrity and Weller did the things for Fertile. Score by innings:

R L Falls....0 0 0 2 1 0 0 1 0— 4
Fertile......6 2 0 0 0 0 1 0 1—10

A FARMER LEARNS AN OBJECT LESSON

And Is Turned from a Catalogue House With Greater Profit to Himself.

Hunt & Kankel Duplicate an Order Giving Better Goods for Less Money.

An incident occured in this city within a day or two which is well worth chronicling to the world at large for it contains an object lesson to all who feel disposed to do their trading away from home. It was an incident that may have happened many times and is happening continually but seldom does one happen to get an inside knowlege of the deal.

A farmer living near Badger, whose name cannot now be given as his permission has not been received, came to Red Lake Falls with an order blank filled out ready to send to Sears, Roebuck & Co. It called for eleven gallons of soroco paint, four paint brushes and four quarts of buggy paint, the order amounting to $13.87. He was persuaded by a friend to first go to the hardware store of Hunt & Kankel and was taken in charge of by Sam Hunt. The order was duplicated for him at the regular prices charged at that store and he had completed his purchases, his bill was just $10. By patronizing a home merchant he saved $3.87 over and above what the catalogue house would have received. Did he get as good a quality of goods here? The soroco paint which he was to get from the $40,000,000 trust was analyzed at a North Dakata experimental station and shown absoltutely to contain in its liquid portion 24 per cent water. Hunt & Kankel sold him a paint analyzed as absolutely pure for less money than he was going to pay for a paint which was nearly one fourth water.

There is no better pleased farmer in Red Lake county today than this one who came so near paying a big price for a lot of cheap trash and the COURIER hopes to be able to give his name in the next issue so the story can be investigated if there is any one who possess a doubt.

This story is not an advertisement for Hunt & Kankel, tho they are well entitled to its results, but is given as an item of news which is valuable to every reader. The COURIER has little doubt that every other order on the Catalogue house can be duplicated with equal results at the other stores in Red Lake Falls.

Since the above was written Messrs. Hunt & Kankel have received the following letter:

GENTLEMEN:—

You are at liberty to use my name regarding my saving $3.87 besides freight on a bill of paint and brushes amounting to $12.87.

Yours truly,
Joe Ducharme.

DREAMS GO CONTRAWISE

Marcus Johnson Has One With Nothing in It But Cole.

Crookston Times: Marcus Johnson, the Red Lake Falls miller, passed through the city this morning enroute to the Falls, after a trip to the cities. In speaking of the election this fall Mr. Johnson said:

"The election of Cole for governor I believe is an absolute certainty. The convention was one of the cleanest ever held in the state or any other state, and there were no sore spots left. The conditions are not at all as they were in the campaign two years ago. Every man was nominated on his merits, and the entire ticket will be swept into office with an old time majority. Of course the Democrats make all manner of claims, but they know better, and I know of several men who were in the thickest of the fight for Johnson two years ago who are now shouting just as loudly for Cole."

HEALY NOW HAS BOTH FRANCHISES

Grand Forks and East Grand Forks Will Have Electricity From Red Lake Falls.

A Better Rate Has Been Sscured For the Company Than Was at First Asked.

East Grand Forks has gotten into line with the North Dakota town in the matter of the E. L. Healy electrical franchise and both towns have fixed a maximum and minnimum rate which grant a larger concession to Mr. Healy than was originally asked for under the application for a franchise.

A number of changes have been made in the original ordinances which will be understood from the following comparisons:

The original ordinance provided for the first five years a maximum service charge of $4 per month, and 6 cents per kilowatt hour. This is left unchanged.

For the second five years the original charge was $3.20 service charge and 5 cents per kilowatt hour. This was changed to $3.75 and 5½ cents.

It was originally provided that the rates for the next five years should be decreased by a percentage equal to 33⅓ per cent of the percentage of increase of the gross earnings of the plant, for the next five years a decrease of 30 per cent, similarly computed, and for the remaining ten years 25 per cent. The new ordinance changes these percentages to 15, 20 and 30 respectively, and provides that for the third five years the service charge shall not be forced by the city to a lower rate than $3.50, nor the service charge to less than 5 cents for the remainder of the life of the franchise to less than $4.75 and 4½ cents, respectively. The general effect of the changes seems to be that while the city is protected by having maximum rates fixed, the new ordinance protects the company by fixing minimum rates below which it cannot be compelied to go. The amended ordinance also provides in the computation of gross earnings account shall be taken from the business of the Grand Forks plant, a matter which was overlooked in the former ordinance.

The Winnipeg Exhibition.

Success greater than in any year of its history is now pratically assured the coming Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition, July 23rd to 28th.

The buildings and grounds are being placed in a condition that will meet not only the requirements of the great number of exhibitors, but also in a state conductive to the comfort and accommodation of the enormous crowds of visitors who are taking advantage of the cheap railway rates from the Great Lakes to the Rocky Mountains to see the the greatest exhibition ever held in Western Canada.

Entries in all the classes of all departments have been pouring in. The attractions' program is the finest ever offered in the west. The special attractions, "The Carnival of Venice," one of the finest scenic productions ever given, and the "Knabenshue Air-Ship"—the wonderful scientific evidence of the great advance of aeronautics, alone, will make the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition the MECCA of the busy West.

The display of horses will be beyond, peradventure, the finest probably ever made in any part of Western America.

Even rain will not affect the success of the Great Exhibition, for, what with cedar block and gravel pavements and roadways, comfort is assured to pedestrians and in the show-rings.

The coming exhition will be the event of the year in the Canadian West.

Delays are very serious. If your eyes need attention call at once and have them examined.

STANDARD OIL LOSING GRIP

CLEVELAND INDEPENDENT OPERATOR SEES CHANGE IN CONDITIONS.

Washington, July 14.—That the independent oil producers are making a successful contest against the Standard Oil company and that legislation by congress has contributed materially to break the power of the great oil monopoly was brought out here yesterday incidentally in connection with the investigation now in progress before the interstate commerce commission regarding the relation of the oil business to the railroads.

The fact was developed that one man in the country at least—Charles D. Chamberlain of Cleveland, who is the head of the National Petroleum association—believes that the power of the Standard is declining.

Mr. Chamberlain is here to attend the hearing before the commission, and in speaking of the effect of the legislation by congress with reference to railroad rates and the rigid enforcement by the administration of the anti-trust laws, he said:

"The absolute domination of Standard Oil over the business in petroleum products is broken. I do not mean that the time is at hand when the Standard will cease to have a great share in the business, but a fair field and equal opportunities are in sight for the independents."

HOLY JUMPERS SHOW FIGHT.

Engage in Lively Set-to With Crowd at Waukesha.

Waukesha, Wis., July 14.—An open air meeting held at Five Points by Holy Jumpers ended in a riot in which heads were broken and several persons received physical injuries. The religious workers took exception to jokes of the crowd and a fist fight ensued. This caused the onlookers to take a hand, and for half an hour a mob of 2,000 persons swayed back and forth over Main street, each apparently bent on seeing how much injury he could do to his neighbor. Finally the police succeeded in getting the religious workers into a hotel and the mob was dispersed.

The population of the city of Van is represented to have been nearly destroyed by the Turkish troops, who hauled down houses, assaulted the women and acted generally like wild measts

BLOODY DUEL OVER DREYFUS AFFAIR

UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED IN DUEL.

FIGHT ON FLOOR OF CHAMBER

DREYFUS AND PICQUART ARE REHABILITATED BY FRENCH SOLONS.

Paris, July 15.—The scene of tumultuous disorder which marked the enactment yesterday of the law restoring Alfred Dreyfus to the army was followed last night by a bloody duel with swords in which Under Secretary of State Sarraut was dangerously wounded by M. Pugliesi-Conti. The duel assumed the aspect of a combat between the government and the opposition. M. Sarraut's seconds were Ministers Clemenceau and Thomson, while M. Pugliesi-Conti's were M. Millevoye and Gen. Jacquet, adherents of the elements which bitterly resisted the government rehabilitation of Dreyfus.

Fight in Chamber.

The meeting followed a fight on the floor of the chamber of deputies, which started when M. Sarraut sprang from beside Minister of the Interior Clemenceau, sitting on the ministerial benches, on M. Pugliesi-Conti, who had been denouncing members of the government as scoundrels. Sarraut struck Pugliesi-Conti a stunning blow in the face.

Pandemonium immediately broke loose. Deputies fought in groups in the center of the house, their blows raining indiscriminately.

Suspends the Sitting.

President Brisson ineffectually endeavored to quell the tumult, but finding his effort vain left the chair and suspended the sitting for a quarter of an hour. The public galleries were cleared.

During the interval the excitement continued, but at the resumption of the sitting the members were calm.

The duel occurred immediately afterwards. Late reports show that M. Sarraut has a deep wound in the right breast, penetrating the lung. While the hurt is considered serious, it is not necessarily dangerous.

Reinstate Dreyfus.

Despite this conflict laws were enacted by the chamber of deputies reinstating Dreyfus to the rank of a chief of squadron of artillery, and Picquart is made a brigadier. Both houses were overwhelmingly favorable to Dreyfus and Picquart. Throughout the day feeling was stirred intensely between the Dreyfus and anti-Dreyfus elements. This was heightened by fierce attacks by Dreyfusists against Gen. Mercier and other prominent officers who were responsible for Dreyfus' condemnation.

Mercier Is Roasted.

The senate also had an exciting session in connection with the Dreyfus rehabilitation bill, which was passed by 183 to 30.

The result was greeted with enthusiastic applause. The Picquart bill was passed by the senate by 185 to 26.

WOVE CLOSE NET ABOUT N. M. RIGGS

POLICE HAD ENOUGH EVIDENCE TO PROVE GUILT OF THE MURDERER.

GHASTLY RELICS IN HOME

TRIED TO DESTROY WOMAN'S PROPERTY IN FURNACE—LOOT LOCATED.

Minneapolis, July 14.—By his cowardly suicide at Elroy, Wis., Nathan M. Riggs, evaded certain conviction of the murder of Millie Ellison. Some hours before the news of the suicide reached Minneapolis, and even before the fatal bullet had been fired, the Minneapolis police had found in the Pillsbury avenue home of Riggs relics of the National hotel tragedy sufficient to prove his guilt beyond question.

A detail of police officers, acting under instructions from Supt. Doyle, went to the Pillsbury house late Wednesday night, and as all of the members of the family were away a thorough search was possible.

The satchel carried to the National hotel by Miss Ellison was found in Riggs' own room, and a number of other articles that are known to have belonged to the woman were found in other parts of the house.

Tries to Destroy Articles.

An effort had been made to destroy some of the woman's property in the furnace, and this fact adds to the importance of the evidence, since it shows the desire of Riggs to put it out of the way.

In the room that was evidently occupied by Riggs the officers found a gray suit of clothes, exactly similar to the one that figured in the descriptions of the man "M. J. Wilson" that had been furnished by the employes of the National hotel. In this room also was found the small satchel that has since been positively identified as the one carried by Miss Ellison when she arrived at the hotel. No effort had been made to conceal the satchel.

Cipher Letter in Riggs' Locker.

Among the most interesting discoveries made in Nathan M. Riggs' railway locker is a "come-on" letter written by Riggs to Miss Millie Ellison, outlining their plans and completely corroborating the police theory of the relationship sustained between the two. The epistle is in cipher—that is, a combination of dots, letters, arbitrary signs and figures.

The writer proposes that Miss Ellison come to meet him in Minneapolis and that she register at the National hotel for Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Wilson. This the murdered woman evidently refused to do, and when she did come she registered only for herself, as "Mrs. H. Johnson."

In the letter Riggs tells of the place they own out West. The beautiful weather is commented upon, and the writer ends with sending his love. He signs himself "Nate."

Loot in Safety Deposit Box.

Through the efforts of the newspapers the money stolen from Miss Ellison by her murderer, Nathan M. Riggs, is thought to have been located and the police are now waiting for a key to a safety deposit vault to make certain whether or not the money is actually intact.

The manager of the Guaranty Safety Deposit vaults admitted that Riggs had been to the place on the day of the murder. The office records show that he was there shortly after the murder was committed. That he deposited the money is practically certain.

In the letter which the unhappy man wrote to his wife shortly before he committed suicide he intimates that she would know where to lay her hands on whatever cash he left. It is, therefore, to be presumed that his wife knew of his being a subscriber to the Guaranty Safe Deposit vaults, and would therefore claim whatever he left in that place.

Holds Inquest at Elroy.

Elroy, Wis., July 14.—"N. M. Riggs came to his death by a gun or revolver, shot wound in the right side of his head, administered by his own hand, with suicidal intent, on the 12th day of July at the hour of 12:10 a. m., in the north end of the second floor of the railroad eating house, in the city of Elroy, Juneau county, Wis."

Such was the verdict returned yesterday as the result of the inquest held on the body of the murderer of Millie Ellison.

WOMEN KILLS HER AVENGER

SHOOTS HER BROTHER, JUST ACQUITTED OF "HOLY ROLLER" MURDER.

Seattle, July 14.—Two days after being acquitted of the charge of murder growing out of his act in killing Franz Edmund Creffield, the leader of the "Holy Rollers," thus avenging his sister's wrongs at the hands of the fanatic, George Mitchell was murdered at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Esther Mitchell, the sister whose troubles had aroused his fateful anger.

The shot was fired in the waiting room of the union station, just as Mitchell rose to take the evening train for Oregon. The brother dropped in his tracks. Esther Mitchell was at once arrested.

The Mitchells—George, Perry and Fred—were sitting with Esther on a bench in the big waiting room, talking together and apparently on the best of terms. When the Oregon train was announced George Mitchell rose and started forward. His sister stepped to his side and pressing a revolver close to his head pulled the trigger before any one realized what was happening.

SLAYER'S BOOTY FOUND IN VAULT

ABSOLUTE PROOF OF RIGGS' DAMNABLE GUILT IS ESTABLISHED.

RING TORN FROM HER FINGER

POLICE BREAK OPEN SAFETY DEPOSIT BOX AND FIND GIRL'S VALUABLES.

Minneapolis, July 15.—Whatever doubt may have existed as to the guilt of Nathan Riggs of the foul murder of Millie Ellison was yesterday dissipated, and the absolute proof of his damnable guilt forever established.

Had he not sent a bullet crashing through his brain with his own hand his conviction in a court of justice would have been speedy.

Yesterday morning, while acting upon the advice of the county attorney of Hennepin county, the authorities broke open a safety deposit locker which Riggs had in the Guaranty Deposit vaults in the Metropolitan Life building.

Mrs. Riggs had refused to turn over the keys to the authorities, declaring that she would do nothing to further incriminate her husband.

Booty in the Vault.

The officers were certain that this locker contained evidences of Riggs' guilt, but even they were surpriced at the startling evidence is disclosed.

First of all, and most damning of all, were the two one-thousand-dollar bills given to Miss Ellison by Teller A. H. Riley of the National Bank of Commerce, three hours before her murder. These two bills had been punched by the teller in order that Miss Ellison might readily distinguish them.

When shown the bills the teller at once identified them as being the ones he had given Miss Ellison.

Thus the guilt of the suicide was established beyond all question.

But the vault contained more.

There was other cash, bringing the total up to $3,090.

Certificate of Deposit.

There was also a certificate of deposit for $550 on the Citizens' Bank Elroy, Wis.

It was dated Jan. 9, 1906, which was about the time that Miss Ellison had given Riggs $500, as she supposed, to invest in land in Washington.

Instead of investing the money he deposited it to his own personal use.

Then there was a statement signed by Millie Ellison in which she declared that she had never been engaged to Riggs, and that he had never made love to her. This statement was dated 1903, and was evidently written by Miss Ellison at Riggs' request, to show to his wife and screen himself, at the time Riggs and his wife had trouble.

Torn From Girl's Finger

The locker also contained a gold ring with Riggs' initials on the inside. The ring had been given to Miss Ellison by Riggs, and was evidently taken from her finger at the time he killed her.

The finger showed plainly that a ring had been forcibly removed.

A gold watch which he had given the dead woman was also found in the deposit vault.

Papers covering all his known holdings were found, and the search of the box proved conclusively that Millie Ellison had been a dupe for years and that Riggs never owned an acre of land in the West or negotiated for the purchase of any.

Thus a crime perpetrated with deliberation and with cunning by a man who believed that he had closed every avenue of suspicion is laid bare to the world in all its details within forty-eight hours after the crime was known.

Each additional bit of evidence secured but serves to deepen the infamy under which Nathan Riggs went to death.

Not an extenuating circumstance anywhere appears, but everything points to a crime conceived with hideous and diabolical shrewdness, perpetrated with hellish ferocity, and leaving the perpetrator of it forever engulfed in the depths of ignominy and hatred.

The Eagle flour mill of New Ulm has arranged to erect what will be an almost entirely new and separate mill in connection with the one now operated. It will contain special machinery for the manufacture of a superior grade of flour to supply a fancy trade, and will increase the output of the mill about 1,000 barrels daily. To erect the mill one of the elevators will be torn down and some of the other buildings moved so that the machinery in the new part may be connected with the present engine room. This will be the third addition to the mill in four years, and will bring the capacity of the plant up to about 5,000 barrels daily.

In the past month the Brown county commissioners have taken up all of the outstanding orders against the county, and it is now free from debt. The new jail, completed about two years ago, was paid for just before the commencement of the Koch trials, and the three trials placed the county in debt to the extent of about $25,000. To cover this indebtedness the tax levy for the past year was increased, and a strict economy practiced wherever practical by the commissioners, so that in the face of what appeared to be an indebtedness that it would take several years to wipe out, the county officials can now show a clean slate.

"23" FOR ICE CREAM FETES.

North Dakota Baptists Declare It's All Graft.

War on graft in the church has been started by the North Dakota Baptist association.

"Churches have no more right to graft than have other people," declared Rev. C. A. Cook of Bloomfield, N. J., who addressed the convention at Grand Forks, "and I want to go on record as urging the Baptist church to abandon all church fairs, socials and other forms of church graft."

The suggestion was enthusiastically received and a resolution was adopted frowning upon entertainments of the kind mentioned for the raising of funds for the church.

Lectures, concerts and amusements of that sort are not on the tabooed list, but the festive oyster supper, the ice cream carnival, the church fair, fancy work sale and all the other grafting games devised to separate susceptible mankind from the coin of the realm are to be told to "skiddoo."

CONTRACTS FOR SANATORIUM.

Consumptives' Hospital Will Overlook Cass Lake.

The state board of control has let the contract for the new state sanatorium for consumptives at Walker, on the site overlooking Cass lake.

The contract for the building was let to O'Neill & Son of Faribault for $32,765; the plumbing to the Allan Black company, St. Paul, $2,437; the heating to J. L. Judge, Minneapolis, $2,220.

The structure cannot be completed before next spring. By that time the legislature will have had an opportunity to make an appropriation for maintenance of the building, which it failed to do at its last session.

The board of control now has available for the sanatorium building $59,700. There is, however, considerable more expense connected with the completion of the building than the contracts let.

There is yet to be constructed a water and sewer system and a lighting plant. It is the plan of the board of control to have these so constructed that they will be adequate for a much larger institution than the one now to be constructed. The new building will be erected with this in view, so that the first structure may eventually be made a wing of a large institution.

The board of control favors securing the water supply for the building from a large spring three-quarters of a mile from the building site. This would give a fine, pure supply of water. The water mains, however, would have to be laid over a high hill, and there is some question whether the spring is large enough to supply the amount needed. This matter will be referred to an engineer for solution. If the spring is found inadequate, the water will be secured direct from Cass lake.

The sewer system will be on the septic tank plan, with the eventual discharge of the purified sewage into the lake.

It is probable that the needs of the hospital for consumptives will be brought to the special attention of the next legislature in the report of the board of control, with a recommendation that the institution be properly financed.

WINONA WILL HAVE BATHS.

Lease of Island From Railroad Insures Long-sought Luxury.

After working for over ten years for public baths, the city of Winona is to be supplied within the present season. They are to be located upon an island directly across from Riverside Park, and will include, in addition to the bath houses and appointments, the parking of a large portion of the island. The difficulty heretofore has been that the North-Western Railway company, which owns this island, refused to give up possession, but through the efforts of Mayor John A. Latsch, City Attorney D. E. Tawney and Congressman James A. Tawney, an agreement was reached whereby the railroad company agrees to give a perpetual lease and to assist in the project as much as possible. This sandy island offers an ideal place for bathing purposes.

USE TILE TO DRAIN ROADS.

Vernon Center Township Is Making Good Highways.

Vernon Center township, Blue Earth county, has taken an advanced step in road improvement by adopting a plan that is followed in Illinois. The water along the highways is being removed by means of drain tiling, the township paying part of the cost and the farmers who are benefited paying the balance. Split log drags are coming into use among the farmers of Blue Earth county, and have brought splendid results in work on roads. Not to exceed three horses are required to draw the implement. The Mankato Commercial club has presented drags to some of the pathmasters. When the drags are used soon after rains the ruts are filled up and the water runs off.

STATE DAIRY AWARDS.

High Marks Scored in Butter and Cheese Contests.

In the butter scoring contest conducted by the state fairy and food department, H. J. Roseneau of Meriden was awarded first place. His score was 97 1-2. Allie Olson of Hector was given second place, and P. Christianson of Olivia third. Their scores were 97 and 96 1-2, respectively.

In all 206 tubs of butter were passed upon, and over half the number scored 94 or better. The butter generally was of a high quality. In the cheese contest first honors were divided between W. L. Parkin of Mantorville and L. Strombeck of Stanton. They each scored 98. G. Andrist of West Concord was second, with a score of 97, and Fred Miller third, with a score of 96.

Smaller Attendance.

State Superintendent Olsen reports a falling off of more than 1,000 this year in the attendance at state summer schools. Last year the summer training schools enrolled 6,081 students. This year the number enrolled was 4,664. There is one school to be heard from, but it will not bring the number over 5,000.

The falling off in attendance was mostly confined to the county schools. The normals and university showed a decrease.

Red Lake Falls is to have a commercial club. Now let everybody get behind and push.

The total immigration to the United States during the fiscal year 1905 was 1,026,599, which was more than 200,000 greater than in the preceding year.

No, Mr. Eastman, we haven't begun that investigation. We are decent down here and there is a limit to the humiliation and agony we care to inflict upon you for the present.

It is a wonder how they ever found some men who are on the Republican state central committee.—Anoka Union. (Rep.)

The same applies with even greater force to the head of the ticket.

Did anybody notice the display heads the Red Lake Falls papers used in telling of the slump at their postoffice.—Press.

Did anybody notice the display heads the Thief River Falls papers used in telling of the probable loss of their saw mill in the near future?

What the Thief River papers said about Ford was cowardly according to the Courier. But of course Bro. Cox was actuated by the highest motives when he attacked County Commissioner Shaw.—Press.

We have no remembrance of having attacked Mr. Shaw, but, if we did, in the two cases there is a complete antithesis of analogy.

The senatorship is "up in the air." Simons, of Red Lake county, has filed, and is the only one so far. He has strong opposition at home. Editor Lightbourn does not take as well to the idea as his friends hoped he would, and a number of others are being considered, A. L. Hanson has been urged by many to be a candidate, but refused, so far. A. K, Strand, J. E. C. Volland and Jacob Nygaard are among the others frequently mentioned. Many men in both factions of the party in the county point to Judge Sharpe as the one who can come nearest to getting a unanimous vote in the county for senator.—Hendrum Review.

SHEVLIN WON AT DULUTH.

Swift County Monitor: Tom Shevlin, head of the lumber ring in Minnesota, went to the Duluth convention for the avowed purpose of encompassing the defeat of Jacobson. With the assistance of kindred spirits, Mr. Shevlin succeeded. Jacobson has never been a warm favorite with the timber ring and tax dodging elements, of which Mr. Shevlin is a conspicuous member. Shevlin felt so well pleased with the result of his efforts that he gave a big banquet, which is said to have cost him $2000 in celebration of Jacobson's defeat. Albert L. Cole is evidently very satisfactory to Mr. Shevlin and his friends.

A FOREGONE CONCLUSION.

Excelsior News, (Rep.): The chances are that Republican Minnesota will elect a Democratic governor this fall and that John A. Johnson will succeed himself. The Minneapolis Tribune may not know it, but it has handed out the cue that will do business.

COLE FRIENDLY TO LUMBER INTERESTS.

Litchfield Independent: A. L. Cole, Republican candidate for governor, is something of a pine land baron, and his nomination was energetically aided by such men as Tom Shevlin, the millionaire lumberman, who after the convention had swung to Cole, banqueted the Minneapolis delegation and some others, to the number of a hundred and over, at one of Duluth's swell restaurants. It is said that wine ran like water and the bill ran into four figures. When such interests nominate a man it is time for the common people to pause and reflect. These statements are true and can be verified by asking the Meeker county delegates who were at Duluth.

COUNTRY VOTER DOESN'T LIKE IT.

Fergus Falls Journal, (Rep.): Tom Shevlin's feast for the Hennepin county delegation promises to cut quite a figure in the campaign. The country voter does not relish having the defeat of Mr. Jacobson celebrated that way.

AN IMPORTANT OMISSION.

St. Peter Free Press, (Rep.): The absence of an insurance plank in the Republican platform adopted at Duluth doesn't sit well with the voters of the state and needs some hard explaining: We need reforming in that business with a big R and the convention should have gone on record concerning it in unmistakable terms.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutonal disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment, Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. Engineers From the West.

A majority of the Engineers engaged on the Panama canal were taken from the middle west. The president of an eastern technical school recently called the attention of his students to this choice of westerners. He told them that it was because the westeners are not so much concerned about their health and other matters of personal convenience. We of the west have something to keep up our health and strength—golden grain belt beer. We serve it daily with our meals and are always in good trim. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Our hospitals are full of men, women and children who are there for appendicitis operations. Perhaps it is true that this disease may reach a stage where an operation is the only recourse, but such cases are certainly much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many sufferers have been cured by Dr. Adlar's Treatment after the doctors had said that an operation must be performed. Let us prove it to you—ask for free book at W. A. Schreiter's. 38-39

RHEUMATISM
TROUBLESOME PAINS AND ACHES

While Rheumatism is usually worse in Winter because of the cold and dampness of a changing atmosphere, it is by no means a Winter disease entirely. Persons in whose blood the uric acid, which produces the disease, has collected, feel its troublesome pains and aches all the year round. The cause of Rheumatism is a sour, acid condition of the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter, which the natural avenues of bodily waste have failed to carry off. This refuse matter coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. Rheumatic persons are almost constant sufferers; the nagging pains in joints and muscles, are ever present under the most favorable climatic conditions, while exposure to dampness or an attack of indigestion will often bring on the severer symptoms even in warm, pleasant weather. Liniments, plasters, lotions, etc., relieve the pain and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative; because Rheumatism is not a disease that can be rubbed away or drawn out with a plaster. S. S. S. is the best treatment for Rheumatism; it goes down into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing the acid and driving it out, and building up the thin, sour blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, S. S. S. will not injure the system in the least. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice without charge.

THE Brangwyn Mystery

CHAPTER IV.

By one of those signals which women translate so readily, Miss Lee conveyed to Miss Molloy a wish to speak to her alone.

"Come upstairs, dear and take your hat off," said Belle, and the two disappeared together. Bob studied Miss Lee's portrait in the lady's absence, and arrived at the conclusion that the master passion of his life had fallen upon him. He was used to it. It was an experience which befell him at most ports of call, and it generally endured from port to port, or very nearly. But he felt that this was going to differ from the rest, and that the image on his heart was ineffaceable.

It had always been going to be ineffaceable, because he was young and ardent and Irish, and built that way, but there was one reason why he felt himself to be more permanently hit in the present case than he had ever been before. Hitherto it had been his habit to fall in love with ladies of comparatively mature age, and most of his inamorati had already bestowed their hearts and hands elsewhere. He had always despised mere girls, but as he grew older the object of his worship became younger. For the first time in his history he found himself in love with a lady who was not separated from him by a gulf of years, and was still free to bestow her affections where she pleased.

He spent an hour over the portrait—an hour of rapture—and at the end of that time he began to feel a little bored. He strolled on to the lawn and threw gravel from the footpath which divided it at his sister's window. Belle appeared and motioned him indignantly away.

"Are you girls going to leave me to my own devices all day long?" he asked.

He felt horribly impertinent in applying this form of inquiry to Miss Lee, but his sister afforded him a kind of shelter, and he had experience enough—gained from the converse of others—to know that the taking it for granted that a man had by nature the right to assume airs over the other sex carried an advantage with it.

"Go away," said Belle. "We are in the very middle of a highly interesting confab, and we sha'n't have done for hours."

"Millinery?" Bob suggested.

"Yes," said Belle. "We are designing a wedding outfit. Go away. And don't come back until it's time for luncheon."

"All right," said Bob, and, going back to the house for his cap, strolled away into the fields and lanes, not caring in which direction he went, so long as he was left free to indulge the reflections which floated about the image of Miss Lee. He sat upon a stile and smoked. He engaged himself in many desperate enterprises in many foreign waters. He volunteered for some scores of forlorn hopes, from some of which he emerged covered with glory. From others he came out so broken that he had but time to hand a sealed packet of protest and farewell to a sympathetic comrade ere his spirit fled.

He was buried with naval and military honors several times over, and lived to be the youngest admiral in the service and to sink the entire German navy in the North sea. Then he bethought him that the day was hot and that they kept good beer—uncommon good beer at the Stag hotel. That admirable little hostelry was at the water's edge, and the river looked inviting. He put himself into a skiff and took a racing pull two miles upstream, paddled back again, had more beer, and strolled homewards.

Suddenly a gay voice called him by name, and, pausing, he saw the figure of a man who, from a little elevation in the fields, was waving a stick at him in greeting.

"My rival," said Bob, waving his hand in return. "One of the crowd. I wonder how many of 'em I shall have to cut out before the game's over?" The figure came leaping down the green hillside, and vaulted the stile at the bottom. Another followed at a distance of a hundred yards. The earlier arrival of the two slapped the midshipman on the shoulder before he shook hands with him.

"Why, Bob," he said, "I declare I hardly knew you. You've grown almost beyond recognition. I've come down on purpose to have a look at you. You have shot up amazingly."

"Have I?" asked Bob, rather ungraciously. Had it been anybody else he would have found a sort of satisfaction in carrying on the idea of rivalry, which had a dignity of its own, but the eyes that laughed into his own were so cordial and jolly, and the handgrip was so sincere and hearty, that he had to abandon it at once. "I meant to look you up," he said; "but Belle's been rather greedy."

"Oh," said the other, "you can't neglect Belle."

"I've been sticking close," Bob answered. "But this morning she had a call from a friend of hers, I think," said Bob, stooping to pick a stalk of grass to clean his pipe and flushing a little, perhaps with the exertion. "I think you know her—a Miss Lilian Lee." He was dying to talk about her, even to a rival.

"Oh, yes," the other answered. "I have had the honor to know Miss Lee for more than half a lifetime. Come along, Billery. What an unconscionable old slow-coach you are!"

"You don't carry my flesh, Alexis," said Billery, stooping over the stile to set down a black bag he carried, "and you haven't arrived at my years." He climbed ponderously into the road and stood to mop his brow.

"Your years, Methuselah!" said the other. "He's fifteen months older than I am, and he's always asking consideration for his years."

"Ah!" replied Billery. "I drudge in an office when I am finding anything to drudge at. You boat, you ride, you golf, you play cricket and football—frivolous occupations for your time of life, but all tending to the conservation of the figure and the wind. Besides, I've had this confounded bag to carry."

"Shut up," said Bob. "You've run to seed through applying too much liquid to the soil." Billery took this bludgeon stroke unmoved.

"My chief wanted about half a ton of documents from the office. Of course, I'm the man for a job like that. I suppose he thinks that exercise does me good. So long, you fellows. Sha'n't see you again, I suppose?"

He made off with the bag, the others calling their farewells after him.

"I say, Brangwyn," said Bob Molloy, thrusting an arm through his companion's, "I'm jolly glad to see you. Belle and I were talking about ye only this morning. I suppose ye know your cousin's coming to live here?"

"Billery told me so. We met by accident at Waterloo and traveled down together."

"You don't see much of each other?" asked the boy.

"No. We have barely met for years. We don't get on very well together. It happens so sometimes in families."

"I say, Brangwyn," said Bob again, "how long did you say you's known Miss Lee?"

"I knew her," answered Brangwyn, "when she was a child."

"I never saw her until this morning," said Bab. "I've knocked about a lot. I've been on two commissions, and I've seen 'em all—French, Spanish, and Italian and Greek, and Cingalese and Japanese—by Jingo! but it's my machure opinion that a well-bred Englishwoman bangs the lot."

"That's your mature opinion, is it, Bob?" said Alexis. "Well, I'm not inclined to quarrel with it."

"And if I were Paris," Bob declared, "I know where I'd bestow the apple."

"Bob," said Alexis, smiling up at him, for the boy was slightly the taller of the two, "you're a man of taste, and the first chance we have we'll drink a toast together."

"Right you are," Bob answered. "I say, Brangwyn, I think there ought to be a recognized code of honor amongst gentlemen about a thing like this."

"A thing like what, Bob?" Brangwyn asked.

"Why, what I mean is this," said Bob. "If there's to be a rivalry between two fellows it ought to be an open one. Don't you think so? It's only fair to let you know that I mean to enter for the running. Miss Lee's not engaged, I know, for my sister Belle told me so this morning just before she called."

"Bob," returned Alexis, pausing and facing him with an enigmatic countenance, in which a mock seriousness tried in vain to hide the dancing laughter in his eyes, "I am sorry to dash your hopes so early. But the fates are against you. Miss Lee is engaged, and I can speak with authority, because she is engaged to me."

Bob's countenance fell ruefully, but he made a fight against his natural emotions.

"You're a lucky beggar," he said. "I might have known that something would happen. It always has in my experience. I won't say I wish ye joy, for that's superfluous. You've got the pick of the basket, and if ye're not a happy man, ye ought to be."

"Better luck next time, Bob. You can hardly hope to command the fleet before you're thirty, and it won't be worth while to think of marriage until then."

"Ah! go away with your chaff," Bob answered. "I'm in no mood for it. Belle oughtn't to have put me in a hole like this."

"It isn't your sister's fault, I assure you," said Brangwyn. "The news is barely twelve hours old, and I happen to know that Miss Molloy was intended to be the first to hear it."

"Then ye knew," said Bob, "that Miss Lee would be here this morning?" Alexis nodded solemnly. "And ye told me ye'd run over to see me! I would not have thought it of you, Brankwyn."

He withdrew his arm, apparently more in sorrow than in anger, and the two pursued their way in silence.

And now we must follow Billery, who was by this time seated in Truscott's study awaiting the advent of his chief. He opened the black bag and produced from it a considerable pile of papers, folded into separate packets, each bound round with twine. He unfastened them and ranged them in an orderly mound on a side table, and had just completed his task when Truscott entered the room with a cheery greeting.

"Well," he asked, "what's the nature of the clue you wrote about?"

"I can give you part of it," said Billery, "and a part only. I have begun an investigation at two separate ends, and I am sertain as that I am here alive that I can lay my hands upon the man who compassed old Brangwyn's death. I'll give you one fact to begin with. At the inquest held last week Aloysius Brangwyn swore that at the time of his uncle's disappearance he was in Paris. You remember that?"

"Certainly," said Truscott. "The old gentleman's man servant wired to him when the case began to look serious and he came over. You interviewed him at the time."

"Quite so," said Billery, gravely. "But at the time of the old man's disappearance Aloysius was in London. I am in a position to prove that fact. I went to Paris to make sure, and I have my witness ready and can produce him at any moment."

"'M—m," said Truscott. "If that is true, it will have to be explained; but it doesn't prove that he had a hand in spiriting the old man away."

"I have a second fact," said Billery. "The elder Brangwyn's lawyer has still in his possession the notes of the instructions he received from him on the last day on which he was seen alive. The old man's estate was sworn at something over half a million. When his death was legally presumed and the estate was administered, it was equally divided between the two surviving relatives. Now, the instructions given to the lawyer were that Aloysius was to receive £250 a year for life, that sum being chargeable to the estate, which, with that sole proviso, was made over to Alexis. Mr. Harrogate of Bond street, city, is prepared to say that Aloysius had been informed of the old man's intention to make this alteration in his will, as an expression of his disapproval of his nephew's conduct. My suggestion is that Aloysius came to London in the hope of persuading him to relent, and, finding him alone in the house and inexorable in his purpose, made away with him."

"That looks like the beginning of a case," Truscott admitted.

"Motive proved," said Billery; "motive as clear as day. Presence of the suspected man in London at the hour at which the crime was committed—if crime there were—proved also. Suspicion increased by the fact that Aloysius perjures himself with respect to his whereabouts at that time."

"Not enought to move on," Truscott said, rising and pacing thoughtfully about the room.

"Not enough to move on by themselves," Billery assented. "But there is more behind. You remember the condition of the body when it was discovered. The old man might well have been alive a week before, or even less. Decomposition afterwards set in so rapidly that the body had to be buried immediately after identification. What does that point to?"

"What does it point to?" Truscott asked, pausing in his thoughtful walk. "You have your theory, I can see."

(To Be Continued.)

A Materialist on Marriage.

Gen. Young, at a wedding in Washington, was condemning materialists and materialism.

"What, precisely, is a materialist?" a young girl asked.

"A materialist,' said Gen. Young, "is one who sees only the material side of things, one to whom the spiritual side is invisible."

He looked about him at the happy bridal party.

"Thus a materialist," he went on, "would call marriage merely a state wherein you give a woman half your victuals to get the other half cooked."

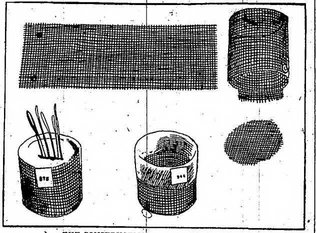
DETERMINING THE MANURIAL REQUIREMENTS OF SOILS

The Wire Basket Method Explained by Milton Whitney, Chief of the Bureau of Soils, United States Department of Agriculture.

The method of determining the manurial requirements of soils consists in growing plants in small wire baskets containing soil to which have been added fertilizers of different kinds and in different quantities. The baskets, or pots, are planned to make possible a comparison of the several fertilizing ingredients within a period of about three weeks by means of the appearance and growth of the plants, or the effect of the treatments may be actually measured by cutting and weighing the plants or by measuring the transpiration during the period of growth.

In addition to the wire baskets, the construction of which is presently to be described, the necessary apparatus includes some paraffin, an inexpensive substance that can be procured from any drug store, and for the weighing tests a pair of scales which will weigh accurately to one-fourth ounce. The baskets, or pots, are made from galvanized-wire net having a one-eighth inch mesh, and are of simple construction (see Fig. 1). The net is cut into strips 3½ inches wide by 10 inches long. The ends are brought together and fastened by short rivets. At intervals along one end of the cylinder thus formed vertical incisions one-half inch long are made, and the ends are turned in to hold the bottom, which consists of a disk of the same material. The top of the basket is then dipped into hot paraffin to the depth of about 1 inch, removed, and dipped again, until a rim of paraffin is formed. Numbers are then attached to the pots for the purpose of identifying them, and in order that a record of each may be kept in case it is so desired. For convenience in handling it is advisable to place the pots in shallow boxes or trays, 20, more or less, in each. This completes the construction of the wire pot up to the time of filling it with soil.



THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE WIRE BASKETS.

The soil to be tested should be representative of the field from which it is taken. A representative sample is usually secured by taking a number of small samples from different parts of the field and thoroughly mixing them together. From this mixture the portions that are to be treated with fertilizers are taken, the number of portions required being one greater than the number of kinds of treatment it is desired to test.

The quantity of fertilizer added should correspond closely to the quantity commonly used in field practice. To add these fertilizers in the proper proportions to the samples to be tested the following procedure is suggested: To 7¾ pounds of dry, well-pulverized soil add 1 ounce of the desired fertilizer. Mix very thoroughly and pass through a sieve at least twice. This mixture is still much too strong for use, and is further diluted by adding 1 ounce of it to 5 pounds more of soil, mixing thoroughly, as before. This new mixture contains fertilizer at the rate of 200 pounds per acre. When larger applications are desired, proportionately larger quantities of the first mixture should be taken. For the lime treatment use only 11½ ounces of soil to 1 of lime instead of 7¾ pounds, as in the case of fertilizers. Cowpea vines and manure, being used in even greater quantity than the lime, require a still further reduction of the amount of soil in the first mixture, i. e., 4 ounces of soil to 1 of cowpea vines and 1½ ounces of soil to 1 of manure. One ounce of each of these mixtures when added to 5 pounds of soil will supply lime at the rate of 1 ton, cowpea vines 5 tons, and manure 10 tons per acre.

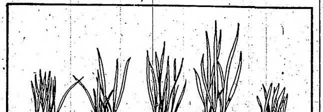
The following table shows the treatments commonly used in the work, but these are often varied to suit conditions, and any commercial fertilizer which it is desired to test may be added to the list:

1. Untreated.
2. Dry manure, 5 tons per acre.
3. Lime, 1 ton per acre.
4. Nitrate of soda, 200 pounds per acre.
5. Sulphate of potash, 200 pounds per acre.
6. Acid phosphate, 200 pounds per acre.
7. Nitrate of soda and sulphate of potash, 200 pounds each per acre.
8. Nitrate of soda and acid phosphate, 200 pounds each per acre.
9. Sulphate of potash and acid phosphate, 200 pounds each per acre.
10. Nitrate of soda, sulphate of potash, and acid phosphate, 200 pounds each per acre.
11. Nitrate of soda, sulphate of potash, and acid phosphate, 200 pounds each per acre, plus lime, 2,000 pounds per acre.
12. Cowpeas, 5,000 pounds per acre, plus lime, 2,000 pounds per acre.

After the fertilizers have been added to the soil it is allowed to remain in pans or other suitable receptacles for several days, being moistened occasionally with rain water or water from melted ice and frequently stirred, so that the fertilizers may become thoroughly distributed.

The soil contained in each pan is then divided into five nearly equal parts, and each part is placed in a wire basket, care being taken to press the soil well into the bottom and sides of the basket. The basket should be filled to within about one-half inch of the top. After filling, the soil which projects through the meshes of the wire is carefully brushed off, and the baskets are ready for planting.

One or two days before the time for planting a sufficient quantity of wheat is placed between moist cloths, covered with wet sand, and placed in a favorable place for germination. From these sprouted wheat grains those of uniform size and about the same stage of development are selected, six being planted in a row and to the same depth in each basket. The surface of the soil is then covered to a depth of about one-fourth inch with clean dry sand. The pots are then dipped bottom down into hot paraffin until an impervious layer is formed over the lower part of the basket, connecting with the rim around the top.



THE FINISHED BASKETS AND THE GROWING PLANTS.

The pots should be watered at frequent intervals during the growth of the plants, care being taken not to allow them to become too dry nor to make them too wet. As a guide to the amount of water required by the pots it is a wise precaution to weigh and record the weight of some of the pots when they are paraffined and planted, at which time the moisture content of the soil is favorable. By weighing these pots at intervals during the tests the amount of water necessary to bring the soil to a favorable condition can be ascertained and an equal amount added to all other baskets that show an equal growth.

At the end of 15 or 20 days a comparison of the growth of the plants will enable one to estimate the value of the different fertilizers.

UTTERLY WORN OUT.

Vitality Sapped by Years of Suffering With Kidney Trouble.

Capt. J. W. Hogun, former postmaster of Indianola, now living at Austin, Texas, writes: "I was afflicted for years with pains across the loins and in the hips and shoulders. I had headache also and neuralgia. My right eye, from pain, was of little use to me for years. The constant flow or urine kept my system depleted, causing nervous chills and night sweats. After trying seven different climates and using all kinds of medicines, I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy has cured me. I am as well today as I was twenty years ago, and my eyesight is perfect."

"Don't look so pompous," said the first sea bass, bitterly. "What if you did get away from that hook? Others have——"

"Oh, it's not that," the second sea bass interrupted. "It's what the man said about me. He said I weigh at least eleven pounds, and am the finest bass he ever saw."

Deadly Banana Bug.

A banana bug of the kind which sometimes poisons banana eaters with a venom more deadly than that of the rattlesnake was found in a bunch of bananas in a South Water street commission house the other day. The bug is about two and a half inches long, with a pair of stiff, overlapping wings, each about an inch wide. When it clings to an overripe banana one cannot tell where the banana skin ends and bug back begins, on account of the mottled brown color of these wings.

Thrown on his back, the bug reveals three pairs of legs and one pair of long feelers.

ASPARAGUS IS IN THE VAN.

Precedes the Other Fresh Vegetables That Spring Affords.

Asparagus is the precursor of the season of fresh vegetables, and there is probably no other vegetable the flavor of which is so highly esteemed as is that of tender asparagus. Chemical analysis offers no explanation of its pleasant flavor, but assigns to it a decidedly high nutritious value. Asparagus, however, furnishes one of those interesting examples of a food which, though containing more water in its composition than does milk, is nevertheless a solid substance. Thus the head of the asparagus contains slightly more than 93 per cent of water, which is only 1 per cent less than contained in the lettuce, but 5 per cent more than is present in milk. The solid constituents, however, are particularly rich in nitrogenous substances, which amount to 30 per cent of the dreid vegetable.

Among these may be reckoned a purin body, to which has been ascribed the harmful influence of asparagus on some persons with a gouty tendency. When asparagus is consumed in large quantities the output of uric acid is very distinctly increased. The same effect is obtained after drinking copiously of beer, which also contains purin bodies, although they are entirely absent in wines, and, of course, in spirits. Sweetbread may be objectionable on similar grounds. There is no reason for thinking, however, that when asparagus is eaten in reasonable quantities it causes an undesirable disturbance of the bodily functions. On the contrary, it is very digestible and is easily tolerated, even by invalids.

OUTDOOR LIFE

Will Not Offset the Ill Effects of Coffee When One Cannot Digest It.

A farmer says:

"It was not from liquor or tobacco that for ten years or more I suffered from dyspepsia and stomach trouble, they were caused by the use of coffee until I got so bad I had to give up coffee entirely and almost give up eating. There were times when I could eat only boiled milk and bread and when I went to the field to work I had to take some bread and butter along to give me strength.

"I doctored with doctors and took almost everything I could get for my stomach in the way of medicine but if I got any better it only lasted a little while until I was almost a walking skeleton.

"One day I read an ad for Postum and told my wife I would try it, and as to the following facts I will make affidavit before any judge:

"I quit coffee entirely and used Postum in its place. I have regained my health entirely and can eat anything that is cooked to eat. I have increased in weight until now I weigh more than I ever did. I have not taken any medicine for my stomach since I began using Postum. Why, I believe Postum will almost digest an iron wedge.

"My family would stick to coffee at first, but they saw the effects it had on me, and when they were feeling bad they began to use Postum, one at a time, until now we all use Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee proves the truth, an easy and pleasant way. "There's a reason."

BAD COMPLEXIONS

Depraved Blood Causes Pimples and Boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Make New Blood and Cure Follows.

"I abused my stomach, my blood got out of order and then my face broke out with pimples and boils," says T. E. Robertson, of 197 Addison street, Washington, Pa. "This was over two years ago. My stomach was in bad shape. After eating I would have to rest awhile or I would suffer the most severe pains in my stomach. On arising I would often be so dizzy that I could hardly stand up. The slightest exertion would start my back aching so that I often had to sit down and rest awhile. At times I experienced a pain around the heart which alarmed me but which I suppose came from my stomach trouble.

"I began to break out on the face with pimples and later with boils which confined me to the house a week or more at a time. One day I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People advertised in a pamphlet which was left at the door and I thought I would give them a trial. I took several boxes of the pills before all the pimples and boils left me, but I am now glad to say that my blood is good. I do not have any eruptions and I no longer have the head and stomach troubles I have described. I am very grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me and I have recommended them and always will advise those who are suffering from bad blood or stomach trouble to try them."

If you want good health you must have good blood. Bad blood is the root of most common diseases like anæmia, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, nervousness, indigestion, debility, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N.Y.

She Claimed the Dust.

"What was that the minister said in the cemetery?" asked the pretty young widow, after returning from the funeral of her elderly, rich husband.

"He repeated: 'Ashes to ashes and dust to dust,'" answered her friend.

"Well, I don't care about the ashes, but I'd like to have him understand that every cent of the dust comes to me." And she wept anew.

Needing and Wanting.

"See here," cried Goodley, as he caught the bum entering a saloon, "when I gave you that dime you said you needed something to eat."

Big Peanuts This Year.

Peanut lovers have noticed that the nuts are generally very much larger this year than usual, a fact which may be verified by the most casual glance at any stand where they are sold. They are also said to be much better in flavor, though there are some connoisseurs who declare that the small nut is the sweeter.

"The increased size of the peanut now in the market," says a wholesale dealer, "is due more to improved methods of cultivation, I think, than to the accident of favorable weather conditions, though the current crop is unusually large in quantity. As to the relative merits of the large and small nut, I cannot speak, being a seller and not an eater, of them. I do know, however, that with these big fat looking fellows on sale there is practically no market for the little ones."

THE PASSIONS OF POOR LO

By PHILLIP VERRILL MIGHELS.

"Wanted, a good Indian. Only those who are long defunct need apply."

This, after much mental lucubration and the conning of a long-famous statement, occurred to the mind of Winslow, as he gazed from his window across the street at a pair of warring squaws. They were taking each other's scalp-locks out by the doubtle fistful, using a pulling force that in a field of stumps had been well-nigh invaluable.

Winslow, watching the battling squaws, presently noted the approach of a warrior armed with a bottle. With this he thumped a light tattoo on the knuckles and hands of the combatants. Thereupon one female departed in haste, whilst the other, who was wife to the doughty chief with the bottle, remained to contemplate the possibility of extracting her husband's eyes with her claws.

Just about as the misunderstanding concluded, a man came around from the rear of Winslow's house and accosted him.

"You're back in time to miss a scrap," said the latter.

"Sorry."

"So am I. Do you see that buck with the bottle?"

Winslow pointed across the street.

"Yes."

"Well, he's the fellow who found my horse."

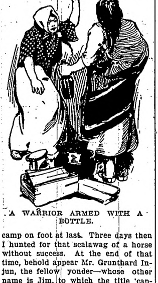
"What horse?"

"Why, didn't I tell you the story?" Winslow's voice expressed surprise.

"Never that I now recall."

"That's funny. You know I was out in the mountains, camping. I had a horse—a good-for-nothing old scoundrel—and of course a saddle, with bags for a few necessities, etc., etc. One evening I rode him up the ravine that leads to Three-lake creek, and left him a moment, tied to a brush. When I came back he was gone. I had fishing-tackle, a pair of shoes, a cartridge-belt, a hunting-knife, a thin vest, and a pair of field-glasses in the bags, or I shouldn't have cared.

"I searched high and low, chased hither and yon, but had to go back to camp on foot at last. Three days then I hunted for that scalawag of a horse without success. At the end of that time, behold appear Mr. Grunthard Injun, the fellow yonder—whose other name is Jim, to which the title 'captain' is often superadded by himself.



A WARRIOR ARMED WITH A BOTTLE.

"He was leading the nag, and was grinning with a self-satisfaction that was truly edifying. The saddle was there, but scratched, bruised, torn and worthless. In the bags was a tangled mass of stuff, mostly tackle, which Grunthard exhibited in glee to assure me of his honesty. The lenses of the glass were ruined, but everything, except the knife and a shoe, was there.

"'Me pind 'um,' said Jim. 'Heap hard ketch 'um hoss, you sabe.'

"'Where'd you find him?' I replied.

"'H-e-a-p far. Pind 'um pish-hook, pish-line—heap pind 'um. Pretty good Injun.'

"'Yes,' I said, 'pretty good Injun, but the fish-hooks, lines, horse and all ain't worth two bits.'

"He seemed dejected, so I gave him a dollar and the fish-line and sent him off. I thought it a wonder he brought me back a thing, and I guess a dollar was little enough."

Winslow's friend seemed to think the same.

The Indian in question now joined a number, who were come upon the square to sit down to the daily round of gambling. One by one newcomers straggled across the lot to squat upon the edge of the blanket and mingle in the mysteries of "pass the stick."

At length the game grew far too slow and the cards came forth, as befitting the increasing value of the bets.

Captain Jim lost all the change he had. As the last of his pieces of silver went he arose and looked about. Not a banker, not even a backer did he see in the assemblage. He presently noted that Winslow was out in his garden, at the rear of his house, and wandered over, with the easy, indifferent manner of the most friendly neighbor. Winslow's friend was sitting near as Jim approached.

"Hullo, Jim, how are you?" said the host, continuing to sprinkle with the hose.

"H-e-a-p sick," replied the buck. Then he shifted about, as no one manifested an interest in his being or condition, whistled under his breath, looked at the garden and grunted not a little.

"How's yoh hoss?" he asked at last.

"Pretty well."

More shifting and whistling.

"Jim heap pind 'um."

"Yes, I know you found him," Winslow answered.

"Heap pind 'um pish-hook."

"True for you. You're all right," said Winslow. Then to his friend: "Our aboriginal acquaintance here is endeavoring to intimate that a further remuneration for services rendered would not be refused with scorn and indignation."

"Yash—heap fine day," answered Jim, with perfect confidence in his own interpretations.

A silence followed, and the white men were smiling.

"Heap bring 'um glass, heap belt, heap all,' the Washoe resumed.

"Oh! I know," said Winslow; "pretty good Injun, but you know I gave you a dollar—that's enough."

The Indian pondered, and not in vain. A brilliant thought was born in his mind.

"My wife—she's heap wants a dollar," said he with the utmost gravity.

The two men burst out in uncontrollable laughter.

"Your wife—the devil she does—by jingo! that's worth a dollar!" and Winslow pitched the cash to the buck and stood there red with mirth as the fellow solemnly walked to the gay "rosette" of gamblers over the way.

At the coming of Jim a place was made in the circle, he was given dimes for his dollar, and the play was resumed. The two common players soon lost their coins to Jim, who then possessed an additional 60 cents. He squared himself to "bust the bank" of Mingo a wily chief sitting opposite.

Now was waged a mighty war with "pots" as great as 40 cents. Backward and forward went the money, and the circle closed about the antagonists. Steadily, inexorably, the skill of Mingo was draining the purse of Captain Jim. At the end of an hour 90 cents were gone; the eyes of the men were glinting with excitement and the bosoms of the squaws were heaving. About this time came Winslow across from his place, to see in what manner his coin was being employed.

On and on went the silent play. Jim was dropping piece after piece, as if in the maw of a hungry machine. At length his final dime was gone. He searched his pockets for the wherewithal to continue the play. Half a dozen fish-hooks, a six-inch piece of gas-pipe and a hunting-knife appeared.

The hooks and the pipe went speedily across the cloth to his foe. The knife he yearned to keep. Looking about, like a tiger at bay, he espied his wife.

"I'll stake my squaw against a dollar pour-bits," said the captain in Washoe and English.

And Winslow fancied he saw a gleam, half of appeal, half of reckless bravado, in the glance the Indian threw to the youthful squaw.

Mingo took an inventory of her charms and noted the look of surprise in her face.

"One dollar," said he.

And they played again.

The fate of the bronze-tinted daughter of the soil hung in the balance for half-an-hour. At the end of that time she joined the faithless dimes, hooks and piece of pipe. The excitement was now intense. Not a few of the onlookers, including Mrs. Captain Jim, were smiling, just a little, for the prowess of Mingo had made him a hero.

The bucks and squaws closed in, and the day was growing old. Finally, with an Indian oath, the captain hurled his cards to the blanket, and saw his last wee coin plump down by his knife.

He was "busted flat."

Looking about the circle, the loser found a pitiless array of eyes upon him. Oh! for just a dollar—a dime—anything! He knew that his luck must turn, and his silver and precious things come back if only he could get another chance. The passion was burning out his very heart!

He snarled out a fierce, defiant offer of a last desperate stake, which raised a murmur of approbation and enjoyment, and caused the eager crowd to close in even more. Only the women laughed, and theirs was a weak and silly simper.

The smooth, emotionless Mingo dealt the cards as if the stakes were as little in value as a couple of thimblefuls of water.

It was brief and sharp that final hand. Captain Jim held formidably. With the wild, unthinkable abandon of a player poker-mad, he tossed his whole gleaming pile, which summed up 50 cents, to the fore.

"What you got?" he yelled triumphantly. He threw his cards on the cloth, face up, exhibiting three jacks, a deuce and a four-spot.

Mingo said no word at all, but merely laid four kings in sight.

With a whoop of rage Captain Jim shot up. Two or three quick, nervous movements he made—and divested himself of every stitch of clothing upon his person.

He had lost everything he had on earth, down to the very buff!

A howling chorus of laughter and derision burst on the air. From the midst of his people, like a wild, scared thing, the utterly naked Indian bounded away for the sagebrush that lay towards the setting sun. Against the slanting light his figure cut a moving silhouette, until he seemed to merge in the distant and radiant west, flooded with beams that clothed anew his disappearing form.

THE SCIENCE OF LIVING.

Dr. George F. Butler Tells How to Eat and How to Assimilate.

Dr. George F. Butler, medical superintendent of the Alma Springs Sanitarium, Alma, Mich., in the October number of "How to Live," gives some interesting as well as sensible rules for acquiring and keeping health. He says: "Without we eat and drink, we die! The provocative to do both rests with the appetite, which, in process of time, becomes a very uncertain guide; for the palate will often induce a desire and relish for that which is most mischievous and indigestible. The old saying of 'eat what you like' is now shunned by everybody of 20 years' experience. Still without appetite, it is a very difficult affair to subsist—for the pleasure depends chiefly upon the relish. The relish may become, as has been stated, a vitiated one, but it is quite possible to make the stomach, by a little forbearance and practice, as enamored of what is wholesome and nutritious as of that which is hurtful and not concoctible."

Again he says: "The delicate should feed carefully, not abundantly, it is not quantity which nourishes, but only that which assimilates."

"Be careful of your digestion" is the keynote of the doctor's argument. He says: "Health in man, as in other animals depends upon the proper performance of all functions. These functions may be shortly said to be three: (1). tissue change; (2) removal of waste; (3) supply of new material. For the activity of man, like the heat of the fire by which he cooks his food, is maintained by combustion; and just as the fire may be prevented from burning brightly by improper disposition of the fuel, or imperfect supply of air, and as it will certainly go out if fresh fuel is not supplied, and may be chocked by its own ashes, so man's activity may be lessened by imperfect tissue change and may be put an end to by an insufficient supply of new material and imperfect removal of waste products.

"We should see to it that free elimination is maintained, for the ashes must be kept out of the system in order to have good health. The skin, kidneys and bowels must do their eliminative work properly. If the bowels occasionally become torpid, try to regulate them with exercise and proper food, such as fruits, green vegetables, salads, cereals, corn, whole wheat or graham bread, fish, poultry, light soups and etc. Plenty of water is also valuable, and a glass full of cold or hot water the first thing upon rising in the morning will aid much in overcoming constipation. Regular habit, cold baths, and massage are very efficacious. In case the constipation does not yield to these hygienic measures, some simple, harmless laxative may be required, such as California Syrup of Figs—a non-irritating preparation of senna in fig syrup. Laxative mineral waters are beneficial in some cases, but not to be employed continually.

"Above all be an optimist, keep the heart young. Cultivate kindness, cheerfulness and love, and do not forget that 'we shall pass through this world but once.' Any good thing, therefore, that we do, or any kindness that we show to any human being, let us do it now. Let us not defer it or neglect it, for we shall not pass this way again."

There are no gains without pains.

Keen Sight of Birds of Prey.

The sharp-eyed hawk can spy a lark upon a piece of earth almost exactly the same color at twenty times the distance it is perceptible to man or dog. A kite soaring out of human sight can still distinguish and pounce upon lizards and field mice upon the ground, and the distance at which vultures and eagles can sight their prey is almost incredible.

Recent discoveries have inclined naturalists to the belief that birds of prey have not the acute sense of smell or of hearing that has hitherto been accredited them. Their keen sight seems better to account for their action, and they appear to be guided by sight alone, as they never sniff at anything, but dart straight at the object of their desire.

Their counterparts in the ocean doubtless smell and see, but are more guided by smell than sight. In both sharks and rays the eyes are good and have a distinct expression, though since they scent their prey from a short distance and swim up to it with greatest rapidity, smell may be called their real eye.

A Viscount's Wager.

A marvelous story is being told in Paris of a peer painter's pilgrimage.

Ten years ago, according to the story, Viscount Jacques de Gruart laid a wager of £12,000 with some companions that he would make the tour of the world on one foot, accompanied by his fiancee, whom he was to marry on the day of his departure, husband and wife subsisting exclusively the whole time on the viscount's earnings as an amateur painter. There was no stipulation as to time.

The pair have just reached Paris on their return, after succesfully accomplishing their undertaking and winning their bet. They have traversed Europe, America, Africa and Australia, living on nothing but the meagre profits of the viscount's brush.

Behind the Times.

"You oughtn't to make love to me and try to kiss me before we have been acquainted five minutes," protested the unsophisticated maiden, readjusting her pompadour.

"That's where you push the wrong button," said the young man. "When this little affair of ours is worked up into a modern love story we shall have done over a thousand words of scintillating, rapturous courtship inside of three minutes. Quit turning your face away!"

What is a Backache?

IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO WOMEN.

Diseases of Woman's Organism Cured and Consequent Pain Stopped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It seems as though my back would break." Women utter these words over and over again, but continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, "bearing-down" pains, nervousness and no ambition for any task.

Miss Maude Morris

They do not realize that the back is the mainspring of woman's organism, and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the female organs or kidneys, and that the aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been for many years the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily cures female and kidney disorders and restores the female organs to a healthy condition.

"I have suffered with female troubles for over two years, suffering intense pain each month, my back ached until it seemed as though it would break, and I felt so weak all over that I did not find strength to attend to my work but had to stay in bed a large part of the first two or three days every month. I would have sleepless nights, bad dreams and severe headaches. All this undermined my health.

"We consulted an old family physician, who advised that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it regularly and soon found that I could sleep and eat better than I had done for months. Within two months I became regular and I no longer suffer from backache or pain."—Miss Maude Morris, Sec. Ladies' Aid and Mission Society, 35 E. Hunter St., Atlanta, Ga.

"Well," observed the husband, meekly, "I didn't suppose you'd want to wear the coat and waistcoat."

STATE OF MINNESOTA, }
County of Red Lake. } ss

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 19th day of April, A. D., 1906, signed by Lorenz Hansen, Henry Pope, Hogan Hanson, Math Barzen, Charles Gustafson, J. O. Thorstad and J. F. Campbell praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the county auditor as County Ditch No. 26, the route of which is more fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the county auditor of said county; and said county auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county commissioners of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit: J. Now, Therefore, We, the Board of County Commissioners of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint Joseph Belair, James Evenson and P. K. RED LAKE FALLS IS HANDED SET-BACK

Judge Watts Dissolves the Permanent Injunction Against County Auditor.

An Appeal Will Be Taken, Stay Having Been Granted for That Purpose.

Another hearing in the county seat fight was held at Crookston before Judge Watts last Thursday evening and a decision in favor of Thief River Falls was filed on Monday.

The hearing was upon a motion of A. A. Miller--now apparently the sole attorney for Thief River Falls—to dissolve the permanent injunction against County Auditor Ford which had been issued by Court Commissioner Toupin restraining Mr. Ford from calling an election of the voters upon the petition for removal of the county seat.

The decision of Judge Watts is brief: "Ordered, that the said injunction issued upon the 18th day of June, 1906 be and is hereby set aside." That was all—it was enough. A stay of proceedings for five days was granted and the attorneys for Red Lake Falls are busy preparing an appeal to the supreme court. An appeal was expected, and would have been taken, no matter how Judge Watts decided.

There is little chance of any further move any where along the line now until a decision is had from the supreme court, the next term of which begins in October.

Left Last Night to Fill Engagement at Exposition.

The Red Lake Falls band left over the Great Northern last evening en route for Winnipeg where it has a two days' engagement at the exposition.

As it will appear at Winnipeg the band will have 28 men including the drum major. It will also include three outside men who are taken on for the occasion: Joe Ford, Hillsboro, clarinet; Fred Terrio, Cass Lake, cornet; Harry Burkhart, Crookston, alto.

Last evening was spent at Crookston where the band gave a concert upon the street that was greatly appreciated by a large audience.

SCHOOL ELECTION HELD

With Only One Ticket in the Field, It Was Quiet.

The annual school election for Red Lake Falls was held last Saturday evening at the high school building and was a very quiet affair.

The officers re-elected for the coming year were H. Hennemuth, 3 years; T. A. Crompe, 3 years; S. M. Sivertson, 2 years; Dr. N. M. Watson, 1 year.

During the day there was some talk of an opposition ticket but it didn't materialize as the hour for voting drew near. Only 70 votes were cast.

A CLUB ORGANIZED

The Red Falls Commercial Club Is Started With a Large Membership Determined to Do Things.

With a determination for the material advantage and betterment of the city and an unusual interest in everything pertaining to its advancement, the citizens of Red Lake Falls met Monday night and organized what will be known as the Red Lake Falls Commercial Club.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Duffy and immediately there followed the reading of the report of the committee on permanent organization which was made up of Frank Jeffers, J. A. Duffy, M. O. Sortedahl, S. M. Sivertson and S. E. Hunt. It was as follows:

Your committee on permanent organization begs leave to report the following suggestions as the result of its deliberations:

The name of the organization to be ———

All citizens of Red Lake Falls shall be eligible to membership.

The membership fee shall be $2 and the annual dues, $2 payable on or before the second Monday in February of each year.

The annual meeting shall be held on the second Monday in January of each year. The regular monthly meeting shall be held on the second Monday of each month. Special meetings may be called at any time by the secretary.

Only members in good standing (those who have paid their dues) shall be entitled to vote on any question arising at any meeting.

The officers shall be a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and a board of directors consisting of seven members. They shall be elected at the annual meeting to be held as before referred to, on the second Monday in January.

The board of directors shall have authority to appoint special committees from time to time as occasion requires.

We recommend the following officers to serve until the first annual meeting:

President, L. P. Berthon.
Vice-President, E. L. Healy.
Secretary, W. S. Cox.
Treasurer, D. J. Doran.

Board of Directors, J. A. Duffy, Theo. Garceau, S. E. Hunt, A. P. Toupin, S. M. Sivertson, Samuel Gibeau, P. B. Gaass.

We recommend that the salary of the secretary be fixed at $15 per month.

The committee had devoted no little time and work to the performance of the duties assigned to it and there seemed to be a general feeling that the highest interests of the city would be best subserved by the officers selected and recommendations made, and upon the motion of the chairman of the committee, Mr. Jeffers, the report was unanimously adopted. Chairman Duffy resigned in favor of President Berthon, who accepted the popular choice with a graceful acknowledgement and the business of the permanent organization was proceeded with.

Taking up the several suggestions as to a name for the organization, it was upon a motion of Theo. Garceau that the name adopted was the Red Lake Falls Commercial Club.

Forty eight men present signed the membership roll and it was a notable sign of aroused interest that they represented every vocation. To further enlarge the list a committee consisting of S. E. Hunt, D. J. Doran and Arthur Lizee, to prosecute the work of securing the greatest number of members possible. It is confidently expected that a hundred members will be secured and possibly a hundred and fifty.

A committee was appointed to prepare a constitution and by-laws, consisting of Messrs. F. L. Farley, F. A. Grady, L. C. Simons, Thomas Germo and V. M. Higinbotham, and an adjournment was taken subject to the call of the secretary.

Notice to Contractors.

TO THIEF RIVER FALLS

The Red Lake Falls Band Will Be at the County Fair.

The Red Lake Falls band will go to Thief River Falls to spend one day during the county fair. The day set is Thursday August 9.

The trip was determined upon at a meeting of the band Tuesday evening when Frank Jeffers asked the members to go as his guests, he paying their railroad fair. It is understood that the Fair association will arrange for their accomodations while there. On the vote among the band members it was unanimously voted to accept the invitation. It is highly probable that a large number of citizens will accompany the band.

THE FIRST ONE TO FILE

Harry Ives Would Like to Be Clerk of Court.

Harry E. Ives, editor of the St. Hilaire Spectator, is the first one to file for a county office in Red Lake county for the present year.

Mr. Ives was in the city Tuesday and deposited with the county auditor a notice of his intentions to run for office. He seeks the Republican nomination for clerk of the district court.

Paul I. D. Ostby also has certain itchings for office and according to his announcement in a county paper, he will go after the Republican nomination for county auditor.

LOST AGAIN TO FERTILE

Local Team Puts Up an Interesting Fight.

Fertile again defeated the home team last Saturday in a game that gained in exciting features as it progressed. It had see-sawed back and forth until the sixth inning when Red Lake Falls tied the score with a bunch of four runs. The score was then 9 to 9. Nothing more was doing but a lot of fast playing until the ninth when Fertile scored the winning run, 10 to 9. Score by innings:

		R	H	E
R. L. F.	4 0 9 1 0 4 0 0 0—	9	11	7
Fertile	1 0 1 4 2 1 0 0 1—	10	6	5

Summary—3-base hits, Buse; 2-base hits, Garrity, Weller; struck out, by Healy 11, by Rand 10; base on balls, Healy 2, Rand 2; hit by pitcher, Healy 1; Umpire, S. L. Lewis.

A State Road.

Chairman Daniel Shaw informs us that the county board is considering the advisability of making the road between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls a state road. There is a little state money which would be available and the road needs improvement badly, especially between here and Red Lake Falls. It would certainly be a move in the right direction as a good road connecting the three largest towns in the county, would greatly aid in advertising the whole county. It would also be a first-class plan for the county and the three municipalities to raise sufficient money next year to maintain the road if built. Arrangements could be made with the different road districts to have the road dragged with a split log drag after every rain. It would not take a large amount of money and if the three towns and the county unite with farmers we could have a highway that would reflect credit to the county.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Red Lake Falls' First Market Day Was All that Could Be Well Expected.

Visitors and Merchants Pleased with Results—Several Prizes Uncalled for.

Red Lake Falls first market day for farmers was an unqualified success in every way and there is every way and there is every reason to believe had the time been more opportune the city would have found some difficulty in caring for the crowds that surely would have come. As it was, farmers were busy with their haying and Saturday was also the annual school meeting day but with it all there were far more people in town than have been seen here at one time in many months. The prizes offered were won as follows:

A number of foot races were pulled off and a lot of farmer boys and girls were made happy with cash prizes; the band gave a splendid concert and Red Lake Falls and Fertile played a very exciting ball game, the latter winning by a score of 10 to 9.

Other market days will be held in the future and the Red Lake Falls papers should be watched for announcements.

Hauled With Compressed Air.

A novel use of compressed air is made by some railway companies in southern states of America, says the Railway News. When the loads of cotton for export are being taken to the coast, there is always danger of such highly inflammable material becoming damaged through sparks from the locomotive. To prevent this the locomotives boilers are filled with compressed air. A train load of several thousand bales of cotton can be hauled by these locomotives at a rate of 12 miles an hour, although no fire whatever is used in working them. One of the great productions of this age is golden grain belt beer, it is always refreshing and wholesome. Its purity and healthful qualities make it the ideal home beverage. The reception was a formal welcome home to the bishop after his absence of four months in Europe with Archbishop Ireland, during which time they visited Pope Pius X. The reception was of additional interest in that there was a surprise in store for the bishop. It was that the mortgage of $20,000 on the property owned by the parish was paid during his absence, and that this property, worth $300,000, is free from debt.

WILL DISSOLVE RUSSIAN DOUMA

GOVERNMENT CLAIMS THAT PARLIAMENT IS EXCEEDING PREROGATIVES.

MAY PROCLAIM DICTATORSHIP

THE DEVASTATION WROUGHT BY PEASANTS IN PROVINCES IS APPALLING.

Cologne, July 21.—The Gazette's correspondent at St. Petersburg asserts as on reliable authority that the Russian government has agreed in principle to dissolve parliament and order new elections on the basis of universal and direct suffrage.

The reason given is that parliament is exceeding its prerogatives.

The correspondent adds that if there should be an outbreak of a revolutionary movement the government has decided to establish a dictatorship.

Dictatorship Discussed.

London, July 21.—The Times St. Petersburg correspondent says that the temper of the court and government is markedly reactionary and that the dismissal of parliament and the declaration of a dictatorship are being seriously discussed.

Address Is Adopted.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—An address to the country, setting forth the attitude of parliament on the agrarian question and the reasons for the delay in the adoption of a solution, was adopted by the lower house, but in an emasculated form.

Changes designed to minimize the revolutionary features of the document as an appeal to the people against the government and to shift the emphasis to a note of pacification, in which the peasantry are exhorted to refrain from excesses and violence and to await parliament's decision in the matter, were incorporated.

Losses Are Colossal.

A landlord fleeing from Bobrov, in the province of Voronezh, has arrived at Moscow and gives a frightful picture of the devastation wrought by mad bands of peasants. He describes the losses in the provinces as colossal. The troops are powerless to cope with the peasants, who are marching in large bands, destroying practically everything. Not more than one-tenth of the estates are spared.

Trust Cossacks Only.

Gov. Gen. Kaulbars of Odessa has been overwhelmed recently with appeals for military assistance from land owners in the districts of Kherson, Yekaterinoslav and Poltava against the peasantry, who are organized and led by revolutionists.

Cossacks only are furnished for such duties, as the loyalty of the regular cavalry and infantry is not to be depended upon.

The peasant war, which began in the province of Voronezh, is spreading over the central provinces. Fifty houses in the province of Voronezh have been burned by peasants since Sunday. A mob of striking laborers a week ago was brutally attacked by the government forces. Enormous masses of peasantry then congregated and marched in a great column several miles in length to sack all the estates in the neighborhood.

Hundreds Are Killed.

The troops arrived and tried to disperse the mob with volleys of musketry. Many hundreds of the peasants were killed and wounded, but the horde stubbornly refused to retreat.

The approach of masses of peasants by other roads made the position of the troops untenable and they retreated, leaving the estates defenseless. The government has sent artillery to the scene.

The railway stations are packed with refugees and landlords and their families are camping by the roadsides.

Dragoons Kill Eighty Peasants.

Companies of the Ismalovsky regiment of the Imperial guards have been placed at the railway stations between St. Petersburg and Moscow to protect them.

Private telegrams say dragoons killed eighty peasants in the village of Tamboff, while 3,000 people were holding a peaceful meeting and discussing the land question.

Mounted police and dragoons, after firing several volleys into the crowd, charged it with drawn swords. An official dispatch says one person has been killed and one wounded in rioting at Tiver.

NOW AT PEACE WITH LAWYERS

THAW HAS DEFENSE IN HIS OWN HANDS—OLCOTT GIVES UP PAPERS.

New York, July 21.—Peace apparently has been declared by the lawyers who at various times have represented Harry K. Thaw since he shot Stanford White. Yesterday Former Judge Olcott of the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge turned over to Clifford W. Hartridge, Thaw's personal attorney, all the papers he had in the case, with the exception of the reports of private detectives. Judge Olcott said that there is a question in his mind as to wether they belong to Thaw or to the person who paid for them. He did not indicate who this person is.

The turning over of the papers by Judge Olcott undoubtedly will result in a dismissal of the writ issued against his firm at the instance of Mr Hartridge.

Mr. Hartridge called on Thaw late yesterday afternoon. When he came out of the Tombs he said:

"There isn't much that I can say at this time. We have all the necessary papers and certain letters that were in the office of Judge Olcott, and I believe that now everything will move smoothly. Harry is in a good frame of mind and apparently glad that his legal affairs have been straightened out.

OFFER JOB TO STICKNEY.

Washington Gossips Give Him Place on Commerce Commission.

Washington, July 21.—Minnesota may be given a place on the reorganized interstate commerce commission. It is known that before leaving Washington President Roosevelt made inquiries about A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western.

It is the intention of the president to appoint a practical railroad man to the remaining vacancy on the commission. Mr. Stickney has for some years been rather an aggressive advocate of rate reform, and he has frequently caused the interstate commerce to start investigations.

His address before the Washington Economic association on railway problems was printed as a congressional document. Mr. Stickney arrived in Washington last night and called on the interstate commerce commission.

AID LAW BY BREAKING IT.

Minot Burglars Steal Beer Illegally Stored.

Minot, N. D., July 21.—Burglars Wednesday night entered a Minot warehouse and carried away ten barrels and eight cases of beer stored in the warehouse. The police authorities, it is claimed, are powerless to prosecute the burglars for taking the beer should they catch them, for the sale, distribution and storage of beer in North Dakota is illegal. The burglars pounded the door of the warehouse in with a sledge hammer and took the beer away in a dray. The temperance societies of the church are much agitated over the affair.

Says Railway Conductor's Act Made Killing Necessary.

Fayetteville, N. C., July 21.—Alexander Blendsoe, who killed John Alexson on an excursion train, has sued the Atlantic Coast Line railway for damages, alleging that the company is responsible for the crime because it placed him in a position where he was forced to kill Alexson. WHISTLE SAVES POWDER WORKMEN

SECOND EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE CAUSES EMPLOYES TO QUIT JOB.

DYNAMITE BURNED AS REFUSE

RUMOR ASSIGNS CAUSE FOR THE BLAST—WESTERN QUARRY IS WRECKED.

Ashland, Wis., July 21.—Another but less damaging explosion than that which occurred Tuesday morning was experienced at 11:15 o'clock at the Atlantic Dynamite company's plant, seven miles from Ashland. No one was killed or injured.

The dynamite and powder which was scattered by last Tuesday's explosion had been gathered into a considerable pile near the site of the destroyed neutralizing building. A bonfire was lighted some distance away from the explosive, and this fire spread through the dry grass. Seeing that the fire was certain to reach the dynamite and powder pile, a warning whistle called every workman to a distant part of the plant. There they stood and waited for the explosive to "go up." This the explosive did, sending timbers and parts of machinery 2,000 feet into the air.

Workmen Quit Job.

Windows were broken at Barksdale, Wis., and the first message from that place was a telegram of resignation by the operator.

The greatest secrecy obtains. Ninety per cent of the employes have quit. Officials refuse to give out any information. The explosion was an accident. Their is a rumor that the dynamite was being burned as refuse.

The first explosion which was in the Atlantic dynamite plant at Barksdale, took place at 8 o'clock last Monday morning. The superintendent and two more laborers were killed and twenty more men were injured.

Plant Is Dynamited.

San Francisco, July 21.—A terrific explosion of dynamite which was placed just where it would create the greatest havoc, completely wrecked the engine room and hoisting plant at the quarry of the Berkeley Rock company at Broadway and Second avenue, in Oakland, just after the employes returned to work after lunch yesterday. Frederick Hoffman, the superintendent of the quarry, was so seriously injured internally that it is feared he cannot live. Hoffman was hurled out of the engine room by the concussion, and the building which housed the machinery of the quarry was demolished.

An examination of the wrecked engine proved that the dynamite had been placed in a part of the machinery where it would be exploded at the first turn of the wheels. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage.

This disclosed a needle embedded in the flesh. The doctor removed the needle and the boy is now doing nicely.

The senator has not left his home in Dubuque since his return from Washington and has been compelled to decline invitations to speak in public.

BIG STEAMERS CRASH TOGETHER

LIVES OF 1,500 PASSENGERS IMPERILED IN NEW YORK HARBOR.

COLLIDE IN A DENSE FOG

PASSENGERS ARE FRANTIC WITH FEAR—NO ONE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

New York, July 21.—Two crowded excursion steamers were in collision last night in New York harbor, off Staten Island, imperiling the lives of 1,500 persons, but neither in the crash itself nor in the wild panic which followed was any one seriously injured. The vessels were the Perseus of the Iron Steamboat company, bound for Coney Island, with 500 passengers on board, and the Thomas Patten of the Patten line, bound from Long Branch to New York, carrying 1,000 passengers.

Stuck Fast Together.

The whistles of the colliding steamers soon brought assistance from boats in the bay, and the frightened passengers were transferred as quickly as possible and brought to this city. The Perseus and the Patten interlocked and neither sank.

The lower harbor was covered with a dense fog at the time of the collision, and the two vessels were running at reduced speed. When directly off St. George, Staten Island, the Thomas Patten crashed with terrific force into the port side of the Perseus, smashing the paddle wheel and box and tearing away much of the joiner work. The Patten's bow and upper fore decks were badly damaged. The impact was so great that the vessels remained fast together.

Frantic With Fear.

When the Patten loomed suddenly out of the fog bank and it was seen that a collision was unavoidable, the passengers on the two vessels became frantic with fear. Just before the crash one man on the Perseus jumped overboard. He was quickly rescued, however. The captains and officers went among the passengers in an effort to restore quiet. A hasty examination indicated that neither boat was in immediate danger of going down, and the excursionists were assured of this fact. Meantime the whistles were calling assistance, and while the passengers were rushing about the decks, seeking relatives and friends, the excursion boat Commodore and a Staten Island municipal ferryboat ranged alongside. The transfer of passengers was quickly made, and all were brought to the city.

Many Women Fainted.

During the panic many women fainted and some were bruised, but not seriously.

One of the passengers who landed from the Perseus declared that he had seen two men jump overboard, and he thought both were drowned. There was no confirmation of this, however.

TWO SWEPT TO DEATH.

Ranchman and Wife Lose Their Lives by Sudden Flood.

Meeteese, Wyo., July 21.—While driving from Bridger, Mont., to their sheep ranch near this place, T. A. Renner and wife were drowned by a sudden rush of water which filled a dry canyon through which they were traveling. Renner and his wife were proceeding up the canyon, which was absolutely dry, except for a small stream that trickled through the center. A short distance behind them Mrs. Renner's brother was following in a single rig.

Suddenly there was a roaring sound and looking up the canyon they saw a wall of water twelve feet high rushing upon them. They turned their horses and attempted to get out of the danger, but before they could do so the water was upon them and they were submerged. The man following them saw the danger in time to reach a place o fsafety.

DEATH FOR GEN. STOESSEL.

Military Commission Recommends Port Arthur Commander Be Shot.

London, July 21.—A dispatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg says the report of the commission appointed to inquire into the circumstances attending the surrender of Port Arthur recommends that Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, the former commander of the fortress, be sentenced to death, and that Lieut. Gen. Fock, who commanded the Fourth East Siberian division at Port Arthur, be condemned to twenty years in the galleys.

It is added that the commission considers that Gen. Reuss should be expelled from the army, and that Admiral Alexieff, former viceroy in the Far East, should be reprimanded.

PUT BAN ON YANKEE MEAT

GERMANY PLANS TO ENFORCE MORE RIGID REGULATIONS IN FUTURE.

Berlin, July 22.—Notwithstanding President Roosevelt's official assurance that the new inspection laws will guaranty the purity of American meat exports, Germany will enforce new and more stringent regulations after Sept. 1 against imports from American packing houses.

Meat inspectors at various German towns have been instructed that, beginning on the date named, they are to scrutinize glands of all imported meat cuts for tuberculosis, and if symptoms are discovered the meat is not to be permitted to enter.

This constitutes a direct blow at what remains of the American meat import trade in Germany, as the meat comes with the glands removed before shipment, packers being unable to leave in the glands without spoiling other cuts not destined for export. So the pieces in question will be practically excluded from Germany after the new regulations go into force.

The government has stopped the shipment of American canned goods to troops in Southwest Africa, although a supply till October was contracted for, via the free port of Hamburg.

SKIN BURNS FROM ARM.

Accident With Gasoline Hurts Two Women.

Stillwater, Minn., July 22.—Mrs. James Gillis, wife of the policeman of that name, and Miss Carrie Henson were severely burned and damage to the extent of several hundred dollars was done to the Domestic laundry by fire. The injuries and blaze were caused by explosion of a can of gasoline.

Miss Hanson fell when carrying the gasoline and spilled a portion, which ignited from a fire. The clothing of both women blazed up. The flames were put out by the women, who burned their hands and arms in doing so.

The left arm of Mrs. Gillis lost all the skin from the tips of the fingers to the shoulder, and the flesh below the elbow was literally roasted. Miss Hanson's burns were not as bad, but are serious.

DOUMA'S ADDRESS A GREAT FIASCO

CONSTITUTIONAL DEMOCRATS ARE SICK OF EPISODE AND ANXIOUS TO DROP IT.

WILL NOT DISSOLVE DOUMA

GOVERNMENT WILL RATHER SEEK TO PROFIT BY ITS DISSENSIONS.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—No further action regarding the proposed address to the people was taken by the lower house of parliament yesterday. The Constitutional Democrats appeared to be heartily sick of the whole episode and anxious to drop the subject if the government is so minded, and there is a disposition to shelve the address by indefinite postponement of the question as to the manner of its publication. Prof. Milukoff and other leaders of the Constitutional Democratic party pointed out that the document is not technically an appeal to the people, but might be considered as an "explation," addressed to nobody in particular, and, from this standpoint, harmless.

Leaders Are Crestfallen.

There is no question but that the fiasco has enormously shaken the prestige of the Constitutional Democrats, and the leaders of that party are crestfallen over having been induced to play with such edged tools.

Prof. Milukoff, M. Streve and others admitted frankly yesterday that one effect will be to postpone to the dim future the advent of a Constitutional Democratic ministry, as the vote on the adoption of the address showed that the party is actually in the minority in the house, and too weak to control the situation when faced by the combined opposition of the Right and Left to any measure.

Will Not Dissolve Douma.

Prof. Milukoff told the Associated Press that he believed there was no longer any reason to apprehend the dissolution of parliament, as the government would rather seek to profit by its dissensions. The Peterhof circles are reported jubilant over the discomfiture of the Constitutional Democrats.

Disorders in Capital.

The resentment occasioned by the wholesale suppression of newspapers and the closing of the printing establishments led to disorders last evening. A large crowd stoned the mounted police, and some stones also were thrown at a large detachment of cavalry. The commander gave the order and the soldiers fired three volleys of blank cartridges before the mob dispersed.

"Expect complete peace now throughout Luzon, except as to Filipe Salvador and his fanatical followers. Prospects of getting him encouraging."

WIFE TO STAND BY THAW.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Will Work for Her Husband.

New York, July 22.—Mrs Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is so firm in the belief that her husband Harry will be acquitted for killing Stanford White that she has determined to take a hand personally in the preparation of Harry's defense. For hours yesterday she studied the documents which have been turned over to Clifford W. Hartridge, Harry Thaw's personal counsel, by Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge.

Mrs. Thaw knows that her husband's relatives are eager to save Harry by sending him to a madhouse. She is just as determined that such a step shall not be taken, and she has promised her husband that she will stand by him in his demand for a trial before a jury.

Mrs. William Thaw remained in Roselyn yesterday with her daughter, Mrs. Carnegie. She is not equal to the task of visiting the Tombs every day, and Harry does not want her to. There is no break, however, between Harry Thaw and his mother.

The State Day by Day

NEWS OF INTEREST.

START WORK ON SANATORIUM.

Site for Institution at Walker Has Been Cleared.

Ground will be broken in a short time for the state sanatorium for consumptives at Walker. Members of the board of control and the advisory commission created by the legislature of 1901 were at Walker recently and selected the site for the new building on the land owned by the state. The state purchased 700 acres near Walker some years ago out of an appropriation of $25,000 for that purpose. Twenty-five acres have already been cleared and a very artistic little lodge for the caretaker of the grounds, Ole Larson, has been constructed.

The contract for a portion of the sanatorium has been awarded, and it is expected that the wing of the building to be erected at this time will take all the available money.

The members of the board of control and the physicians constituting the advisory board, which is intrusted with the general direction of the new institution, spent most of the day on the state lands. Ground which stands high and commands an excellent view has been cleared and the building will be constructed on this portion of the land. Hundreds of acres of the best pine forests in the state stretch out for miles on all sides of the spot, which will afford an excellent place for the patients to take their exercise and recreation.

It is expected that within a few months the institution will be open, and at this time great interest is taken in the way the institution is to be run. Only persons who have resided in the state throughout the year preceding application for admittance and who are afflicted with incipient pulmonary tuberculosis will be received.

The advisory commission in a few months will appoint physicians, not exceeding three for each county. The examiner will determine whether the applicant is afflicted and report the result of the examination to the superintendent of the institution, who is to be appointed by the board of control upon the recommendation of the advisory commission. The board of control will fix the amounts to be charged for maintenance and treatment. A person unable to pay and without friends or kindred able to meet the charges may be admitted on request of the county board and the charges must be met by the county.

PLANS ARE HAPHAZARD.

Road Work in All Counties Should Dovetail Together for Best Results.

Fifty counties have complied with the new law in regard to the selection of a road in each county to be known as a state road, upon which work can be done under the provisions calling for state aid. In the selections made up to date it is evident that none of the counties has consulted with the others in order that the state roads selected may unite to make a system of good roads leading to the chiof cities of the state.

The idea of having three roads running out of the Twin Cities to Duluth, Crookston and International Falls, as shown on a map recently published by the commission, is not followed by the selections already made. The state highway commissioners are of the opinion that as soon as the idea prevails of having the road work of one county dovetail into that of another the greatest benefit to the state by the expenditure of the money in aiding the construction of good roads will result.

G. W. Cooley, state engineer, has begun an active campaign of education to secure co-operation among the various counties. The highway commission will hold its next meeting Aug. 7, when the matter of establishing state roads will be discussed thoroughly.

TEST ANTI-TRUST LAW.

State Brings Action on Complaint of Farmers' Exchange.

Attorney General Young and Assistant Royal A. Stone have gone to Duluth to argue the case of the state against the Duluth board of trade on a charge of violation of the anti-trust law of the state. This is the first time the state anti-trust law has been put to any test, although it has been on the statute books since 1899.

The case is brought on complaint ot the Minnesota Farmers' exchange, an independent organization of grain and produce buyers, which claims that the Duluth board of trade will not grant it membership in the board nor allow any board members to handle the Farmers' exchange grain. The suit is drawn against the board of trade, its officers and directors, and will be argued before Judge Dibell of the district court.

The Winona County Fishermen's association has received assurance from the state and federal fish hatcheries that it will receive all the trout fry wanted for the purpose of stocking Winona county streams, and the association has arranged to receive over 300 cans. These will be placed in all the good streams of the county. The only condition attached to their being sent is that the association will see to it that they are properly planted and will be active in seeing that the law is enforced with regard to trout fishing.

CONTRACTS FOR SANATORIUM.

Consumptives' Hospital Will Overlook Cass Lake.

The state board of control has let the contract for the new state sanatorium for consumptives at Walker, on the site overlooking Cass lake.

The contract for the building was let to O'Neill & Son of Faribault for $32,765; the plumbing to the Allan Black company, St. Paul, $2,437; the heating to J. L. Judge, Minneapolis, $2,220.

The structure cannot be completed before next spring. By that time the legislature will have had an opportunity to make an appropriation for maintenance of the building, which it failed to do at its last session.

The board of control now has available for the sanatorium building $59,700. There is, however, considerable more expense connected with the completion of the building than the contracts let.

There is yet to be constructed a water and sewer system and a lighting plant. It is the plan of the board of control to have these so constructed that they will be adequate for a much larger institution than the one now to be constructed. The new building will be erected with this in view, so that the first structure may eventually be made a wing of a large institution.

The board of control favors securing the water supply for the building from a large spring three-quarters of a mile from the building site. This would give a fine, pure supply of water. The water mains, however, would have to be laid over a high hill, and there is some question whether the spring is large enough to supply the amount needed. This matter will be referred to an engineer for solution. If the spring is found inadequate, the water will be secured direct from Cass lake.

The sewer system will be on the septic tank plan, with the eventual discharge of the purified sewage into the lake.

It is probable that the needs of the hospital for consumptives will be brought to the special attention of the next legislature in the report of the board of control, with a recommendation that the institution be properly financed.

WINONA WILL HAVE BATHS.

Lease of Island From Railroad Insures Long-sought Luxury.

After working for over ten years for public baths, the city of Winona is to be supplied within the present season. They are to be located upon an island directly across from Riverside Park, and will include, in addition to the bath houses and appointments, the parking of a large portion of the island. The difficulty heretofore has been that the North-Western Railway company, which owns this island, refused to give up possession, but through the efforts of Mayor John A. Latsch, City Attorney D. E. Tawney, and Congressman James A. Tawney, an agreement was reached whereby the railroad company agrees to give a perpetual lease and to assist in the project as much as possible. This sandy island offers an ideal place for bathing purposes.

USE TILE TO DRAIN ROADS.

Vernon Center Township Is Making Good Highways.

Vernon Center township, Blue Earth county, has taken an advanced step in road improvement by adopting a plan that is followed in Illinois. The water along the highways is being removed by means of drain tiling, the township paying part of the cost and the farmers who are benefited paying the balance. Split log drags are coming into use among the farmers of Blue Earth county, and have brought splendid results in work on roads. Not to exceed three horses are required to draw the implement. The Mankato Commercial club has presented drags to some of the pathmasters. When the drags are used soon after rains the ruts are filled up and the water runs off.

STATE DAIRY AWARDS.

High Marks Scored in Butter and Cheese Contests.

In the butter scoring contest conducted by the state fairy and food department, H. J. Roseneau of Meriden was awarded first place. His score was 97 1-2. Allie Olson of Hector was given second place, and P. Christianson of Olivia third. Their scores were 97 and 96 1-2, respectively.

In all 206 tubs of butter were passed upon, and over half the number scored 94 or better. The butter generally was of a high quality. In the cheese contest first honors were divided between W. L. Parkin of Mantorville and L. Strombeck of Stanton. They each scored 98. G. Andrist of West Concord was second, with a score of 97, and Fred Miller third, with a score of 96.

Smaller Attendance.

State Superintendent Olsen reports a falling off of more than 1,000 this year in the attendance at state summer schools. Last year the summer training schools enrolled 6,081 students. This year the number enrolled was 4,664. There is one school to be heard from, but it will not bring the number over 5,000.

The falling off in attendance was mostly confined to the county schools. The normals and university showed a decrease.

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

Citizens of Red Lake Falls moved wisely in the formation of a commercial club for the club as organized can and will accomplish things for the advancement of the city that could never be done in any other way.

Situated almost at the confluence of the Clearwater and Red Lake rivers, Red Lake Falls is ideally located for the city beautiful. Surrounding the city is as splendid a soil as may be found anywhere, rich in possibilities for agriculture and stock raising. Flowing thru the city is the Clearwater river with developed and undeveloped energy of a hundred thousand horse power. Two large flour mills and an electric plant, about to be built, furnishing Grand Forks and East Grand Forks with light and power, use but little of this magnificent force. Could Red Lake Falls ask for more? Few towns are blessed with these natural advantages and the wonder is so little account has been taken of them.

But citizens have awakened to their opportunities and they may be sure that, with concerted action, it is not yet too late to make a large, thriving, industrial city of Red Lake Falls. It will require the united efforts of all citizens. The moment any feeling of jealousy or fear that one man may reap a greater benefit than another, crops out, from that moment may be dated the failure of any hope to make it a greater Red Lake Falls. It is a duty every citizen owes to the city and to himself to join hands with his neighbor, and, no matter what his personal feeling toward that neighbor may be, say "I will do all in my power to assist the commercial club in its every effort, believing it is doing its utmost for the general good." Will you do it?

MR. COLE, PLEASE ANSWER.

St. Cloud Times: It is given out at Duluth, and since printed in some newspapers that Candidate A. L. Cole is a veteran of the civil war. E. R. Tuttle, of Co. A, 23d Wisconsin, who lived in Motley 25 years, covering Mr. Cole's residence there of twenty years, writes to the Little Falls Herald that he never heard that Mr. Cole was in the army, neither as any G. A. R. man, and he does and he does not believe it, etc.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Cole owes it to himself as an honorable man, and to the veterans of the G. A. R., to give information that will settle this controversy. Silence under present conditions would not be upright.

A MERE SUBTEFUGE.

Fergus Falls Journal, (Rep.): There has been a good deal of curiosity on the part of Republicans as to how the Democrats would meet the issue of "state development" which Mr. Cole, the nominee, has forced to the front in this campaign. Some thought that with the usual Democratic stupidity they would oppose state development, as they usually oppose everything else which is proposed. Others thought that they would try to catch onto the tail end of the kite and ride along with it. They appear to have done neither. They say that state devolopment is a pure fake—a mere subterfuge to hide and obscure the question of transportation, which is uppermost in the minds of everyone; to distract attention from the lumber trust which has stolen the pine of the state until it has got it cornered and is now forcing the prices up to a point where building is almost impossible; to turn the eyes of the people from the great ore deposits on the state's lands until the steel trust and its allies have made away with it. They say that for fifty years Republican and Democrat, Prohibitionist and Populist, have worked side by side for state development, and that there no political issue in it. This is rather contemptuos treatment of the issue which the Republican party has presented, but it gives an idea of the lines on which the campaign is to be fought when Governor Johnson has received his renomination.

A NATIONAL UPRISING.

In an eloquent address before the Chautauqua at Springfield, Ill., July 8, Governor J. Frank Hanley, the Republican reform governor of Indiana, uttered these words:

"This nation cannot long keep to to the lines of the last few years and continue. A change in the attitude of the people toward corruption and disregard for law must be brought about. If gradual evolution will not do this a revolution will come to break down the barriers and the sound of the bugle may again be heard calling the people to the rescue and perservation of the free institutions and liberty of the nation.

"I am not a pessmist; I am an an optimist. Yesterday this nation was corrupt and satisfied, It is still corrupt, but the people are profoundly dissatisfied. Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia won in his battle for the people against corruption. The late Governor Pattison of Ohio stood for the state. Governor Folk has awakened the people of that commonwealth to a proper regard for law. New Jersey is awakening.

"GOVERNOR JOHNSON IS KEEPING CLOSE TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA. Governor Cummins is fighting the battle of the people in the state of Iowa, and he has my sincere wishes for success. Senator LaFollette has awakened the people of the state of Wisconsin as the people of no commonwealth in this land has been stirred against the corrupting influences of the larger intersts. We are doing something in the business ourselves.

Emperor Nicholas has been condemned to death, and they will get him sooner or later.

Harry Ives for clerk of court! Well, what would you think of that? Joe Perrault looks mighty good, to us.

Russel Sage is dead and his millions are of no more value to him than they were to mankind during his life.

Frank Eddy was importuned to take charge of the Republican bureau, but he refused. Frank is too young to be Jimmartinized.

It is largely a matter of guesswork as to which party Robert C. Dunn's Princeton Union intends to affiliate with in the pending campaign.

When the Republican press bureau gets busy it might enlighten the people of the state as to what company and regiment Mr. Cole belonged in the civil war.

Candidate Cole in a recent newspaper exploitation calls northern Minnesota "a country of magnificent distances." At any rate northern Minnesota bids fair to magnificently distance Mr. Cole.

The COURIER stands ready to do as much gratuitious advertising for the county fair as any paper in the county. No feeling of enmity between the two towns on the county seat removal should have any weight in the matter of this kind which is for the benefit of all the people in the county.

Mr. Cole is still resting. He was tired after the Duluth convention and required three weeks to recuperate. He was much more tired after the appointment of the state committee, and is taking a few more weeks to get in good physical condition. After November he can take a good long rest.

For the benefit of the Thief River Falls papers, the Courier would suggest that headlines in a newspaper are governed by the value of the news item. When we lose a point in the county seat fight the Courier uses small headlines for the very palpable reason that the item is not so interesting to our readers.

If Brother Whiskers of the St. Peter Free Press will kindly indicate just what "part of the ticket was clearly the result of manipulation" there would be some point to his editorial. Speak up brother, and let us know what is wrong, and if it will make you feel better, the voters, all of whom sympathize with you in your secret pain, will be glad to vote so as to make you feel better in the fall.—Hallock News.

And, yet, it was Brother Nelson of the Hallock News, who, in explaining his own defeat at Duluth, remarked that "a logical candidate hasn't much show unless he has a logical convention."

Jos. Ducharme and wife were Terrebonne callers Monday.

Jim Poirier of Poplar River is at present employed as hired man at the home of Joseph Ducharme and expects to remain there till the haying season is past.

Sam Luxemberg made a brief call at M. Quesnell's Sunday evening.

PRINCE AND THE PEACHES.

Stories Told of Bignon of a Famous Old Parisian Cafe.

Bignon is dead. The Bignon who just died is M. L. Bignon, proprietor of the Cafe Riche, at the corner of Rue le Pelletier with the boulevard. He was ninety years of age, and made a considerable fortune. The riche was much frequented by the brilliant wits of the day, such as Aurelien Scholl, Henri Rochefort and Albert Wolff, says the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette. One day Scholl, who was lunching at the Riche, thought he had got the better of the "patron." His bill came to 28 francs. It so happened that the celebrated journalist had been charged only a couple of days before 23 francs for a lunch of precisely the same menu; that is to say, two eggs, a cutlet, a vegetable, dessert and coffee and half a bottle of burgundy.

Fortunately he had kept the bill. He called Bignon to him, and in a tone of easy triumph confronted the restaurateur with the two varying accounts. "Ah," said Bignon, "I must consult the bookkeeper," and hurried away to the desk. Presently he returned. "The cashier has made a mistake," he said. "She charged 5 francs too little the other day. But, my dear sir, we will not claim it." Scholl had no reply for it.

On another occasion Prince Demidoff, a member of the wealthy Russian family, was charged 5 shillings for a peach. "How rare peaches are this year!" he observed. "Oh, not at all," said Bingon, "but Prince Demidoffs are."

BURROS AND TREASURE LOST.

Pack Animals Carrying $100,000 in Bullion Drown in Mexican River.

The American owners of mines situated in the State of Sinaloa, Mex., re still mourning the loss of $100,000 of gold and silver bullion which was lost several months ago in a remarkable manner. The train of donkeys, loaded with bullion, was on its way to Mazatlan, at which point the precious cargoes were to be shipped to San Francisco.

The animals were going along a narrow trail bordering high above the Piaxtla river, when the roadway, softened by the rains, suddenly caved into the river, the animals and bullion and a number of Mexican drivers disappearing in the current.

As soon as the news of the heavy loss reached the owners of the mines a large force of men was sent out to search for the treasure, a search that has been in progress for some time, but not a single bar of the bullion has been recovered. It is supposed that the animals with their freight were swept down the river into the Pacific ocean. The hunt for the bullion is still on and a group of employes are patroling the river day and night for a distance of more than 100 miles to keep outsiders from searching and getting away with the treasure.

It has caused more laughs and dried more tears, wiped away diseases and driven away more fears than any other medicine in the world. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. A. L. Reichert.

Nicholas Was Wary.

Perhaps the funniest feature of all in the house treatment of the president's plan of a whipping post for wife-beaters in the District of Columbia was Nicholas Longworth's vote to table the bill. He explained that he was altogether too near matrimony himself to help establish such a punishment for such an offense.

Newly Mined Opals Are Soft.

When first taken from the mine opals are so soft that pieces can be picked off with the fingers.

N. B. Truth, St. Paul, June 31, '05—I've lived so long, I remember well when the Mississipui was a brook. My good health and long life came by taking Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. A. L. Reichert.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR (CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

SORES AND ULCERS
TROUBLESOME-OFFENSIVE-DANGEROUS

Nothing is more discouraging than to have an unhealthy sore or ulcer resist one treatment after another, sometimes scabbing over and apparently getting well, then returning with renewed energy and becoming worse than before. Sores and ulcers are not due to outside causes; if they were, salves, plasters, lotions, etc., would cure them. They are kept up by a diseased and polluted condition of the blood brought on by the absorption of refuse and waste matters of the body into this vital fluid. These accumulations find their way into the blood, usually because of an inactive and sluggish condition of the system. Nature intends that they shall be carried off through the usual channels of waste, but the different members failing to perform their duties properly leave the matter to sour and ferment. The blood then, in its effort to keep the system healthy, absorbs these poisons and at the first bruise, cut or wound the sore is formed, and the constant drainage of foul matter through it keeps the place open and irritated so it cannot heal. Another cause for old sores and ulcers is the polluting or weakening of the blood from the remains of some constitutional trouble or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. begins at the fountain-head and drives out all poisonous matter and germs, and makes a lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the inflammation gradually leaves, the flesh takes on a healthy color, and soon the place is permanently healed. Book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice without charge.

WHY MARYLAND WEARS BLACK.

Represented in Mourning Because She Wasn't Confederacy.

At the recent Confederacy reunion in New Orleans. says the Times-Democrat of that city, "Maryland, My woman dressed in deep black.

A woman in the audience, evidently a stranger, turned to her neighbor and said:

"How very sad it is that this young lady is in heavy mourning and yet appears in public. I should think the effect would be too much for her."

The second woman. being a Southerner, was well enough informed on Confederate matters to be able to reassure the visitor. She explained that the young woman's mourning was not personal. Maryland in Confederate matters is always so represented.

During the war, when entertainments were given in the South for the benefit of the soldiers and hospitals and the Southern states were represented by women, Maryland was always in mourning because that state did not succeed in getting into the Confederacy, though, of course, it furnished many soldiers to the cause.

AN AWFUL ITCHING ON SCALP.

Hair Finally Had to Be Cut to Save Any—Scalp Now in Good Condition —Cured by Cuticura.

"I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for a diseased scalp, dandruff, and constantly falling of hair. Finally I had to cut my hair to save any at all. Just at that time I read about the Cuticura remedies. Once every week I shampooed my hair with the Cuticura Soap, and I used the Ointment twice a week. In two months' time my hair was long enough to do up in French twist. That is now five years ago, and I have a lovely head of hair. The length is six inches below my waist line, my scalp is in very good condition, and no more dandruff or itching of the scalp. I used other remedies that were recommended to me as good, but with no results. Mrs. W. F. Griess, Clay Center, Neb., Oct. 23, 1905."

He Had Hopes.

"Where are you going this summer?"

"Atlantic City."

"Know anybody there?"

"My fiancee is spending the summer there."

"What's her name?"

"Gee, I don't know. I haven't met any of the girls yet."

CASE OF RULING PASSION.

Why a Pretty Girl in the Hospital Wanted Some Blue Ribbon.

She was the prettiest patient that they had had at the Polyclinic in a long time. And she knew it, too. Her kimono was an exquisite creation of its kind. Aestheticism seemed to rise up in revolt against a cruel operation upon such a darling daughter of Eve. But so fate had decreed.

"Get me a yard of ribbon—blue ribbon—an inch wide the next time you go to the department store," she said to the day nurse. The day nurse forgot it.

"Please get me a yard of Alice-blue ribbon an inch wide," she pleaded, with the nurse, and the night nurse forgot it. Then her temperature rose till the ribbon arrived.

When, on the dreaded day, she was lifted to the operating table it was discovered that she wore white silk stockings with dainty blue bow-knots tied to the garters. The secret of the Alice-blue ribbon was revealed. "The ruling passion strong in death," grented the surgeon—but the sweet thing, she didn't die after all—she was saved to fashion and to finery. The stockings came off and the ribbon went into the carnage trough before the operation, however.—Philadelphia Record.

BACK TO PULPIT.

What Food Did for Clergyman.

A minister of Elizabethtown tells how Grape-Nuts food brought him back to his pulpit: "Some 5 years ago I had an attack of what seemed to be La Grippe which left me in a complete state of collapse and I suffered for some time with nervous prostration. My appetite failed, I lost flesh till I was a mere skeleton, life was a burden to me, I lost interest in everything and almost in everybody save my precious wife.

"Then on the recommendation of some friends I began to use Grape-Nuts food. At that time I was a miserable skeleton, without appetite and hardly able to walk across the room; had ugly dreams at night, no disposition to entertain or be entertained and began to shun society.

"I finally gave up the regular ministry, indeed I could not collect my thoughts on any subject, and became almost a hermit. After I had been using the Grape-Nuts food for a short time I discovered that I was taking on new life and my appetite began to improve; I began to sleep better and my weight increased steadily; I had lost some 50 pounds, but under the new food regime I have regained almost my former weight and have greatly improved in every way.

"I feel that I owe much to Grape-Nuts and can truly recommend the food to all who require a powerful rebuilding agent delicious to taste and always welcome." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. A true natural road to regain health, or hold it, is by use of a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream morning and night. Or have the food made into some of the many delicious dishes given in the little recipe book found in pkgs.

Ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts helps many. "There's a reason."

THE Brangwyn Mystery

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

"I have my theory," said Billery. "But I don't want to pass for a fool or a madman, and I shall keep it to myself until I have proved it to be the very hilt. I have a great deal more than a theory. When I left you to go to Paris I made a visit to the house in which we found the body. I found there, and I brought away with me, a part of the substance in which it had been embalmed."

"Embalmed!" cred Truscott.

"The word is of no moment," Billery, answered. "Preserved from decay. I trace that substance to the possession of Aloysius Brangwyn," he added, rising and shaking in his suppressed excitement. "I can prove that he had access to a far greater quantity of it than was necessary for his purpose. By heavens, Reggy," he broke out suddenly, "I know that I am on the track of the most daring and cunning murder of modern times. I know that I can bring it home to its author. Give me bare bread to live on and a roof to cover me, and I'll find you an explanation of the Brangwyn mystery."

"You can rely on more than that," said Truscott. "You can devote your whole time to this inquiry, and the 'Daily Record' will provide the sinews of war."

CHAPTER V.

Thus armed, Billery set out upon his task, and threw himself into it with a zeal and resolution of which those who knew him best would have least deemed him capable. But almost at the first step of his inquiries he found himself fortified. Among other facts elicited at the inquest, it transpired that the owner of the house in which Aloysius Brangwyn's body had been discovered had sold his property some three years after the old man's disappearance, and had gone abroad.

A singular feature in the case was that the purchaser had made no use of his purchase except to store in its lower rooms a quantity of ramshackle old second-hand furniture, where obtained or by whom conveyed to its destination there was no evidence to show. Now, Billery's theory of the crime pointed inexorably in one direction. If he could find the man who had sold the house, he would have at least a chance of identifying the purchaser. He had an intuition so strong that, in his own mind, it amounted to a certainty that his self-imposed inquiry would be virtually ended if once this discovery were made. To find the man to whom the house had last belonged it was obviously necessary to find the man from whom he had bought it.

But this idea had already recommended itself to the intelligence of Scotland Yard, and when Billery began his house-to-house visitation among the inhabitants of the neighborhood he made acquaintance of an official person who was already in pursuit of the information of which he was himself in search. The coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "Found dead," and had appended to it a rider to the effect that there was strong presumptions of foul play. The Home Office had offered a reward, and the dead man's sole survivors had supplemented this offer by one much larger. Perhaps these facts may have had something to do with the resentment displayed by the official person at Billery's inquiries.

"This affair," he told Billery. "is being looked into by the properly-constituded authorities. When we happen to find ourselves in need of amateur assistance we'll ask for it."

"That's all right," said Billery, affably. "Perhaps you may find that I can be of use to you. Perhaps I may be able to make it worth your while to be of use to me. That is my card. I represent the 'Daily Record.' You may remember that I was the first person to identify the body. I am acting on exclusive information of my own, but I haven't the slightest objection to sharing it in confidence. All I want to be assured of is that if my information is exact I shall have the proper credit for it."

"There's a good deal hanging on to this," said the officer.

"Exactly," Billery assented. "I see your point. I'm not going for the reward. I'm doing my duty as a journalist."

"Very good," said the officer. "And now, may I ask, what's the nature of your special information?"

"To be sure," Billery answered; "there's no tax on human curiosity."

"Come," said the officer, "you said you hadn't the slightest objection to sharing it in confidence."

"Not the slightest objection to sharing it—in confidence. But I'm not sure that I'm sharing it in confidence if I share it with you. I don't know you from Adam, any more than you know me from Cain or Able."

"That's my name," said the officer, searching for a loose card in his watch pocket. "Detective-Sergeant Holt."

"Thank you, Mr. Holt," said Billery. "We'll just conclude our inquiries here and then we'll go together to the chief of your department and I'll lay my facts before him. Have you called at this house? It's the only one I haven't visited."

"Yes," said Detective-Sargeant Holt; "I drew a blank there. There's an old foreign woman there. Speaks no English. I couldn't make head or tail of her."

"Perhaps I can," suggested Billery. The house door was open and an old crone sat knitting in the sunshine at the doorway. He stepped forward, raised his hat, and accosted her in Italian. Her dress and complexion seemed to lead that way. She looked up with bleared eyes and answered his salutation civilly enough. "Have you lived long in the neighborhood," he asked.

Long enough, she told him, to have lost everybody belong to her, except one. Her son was out with his music. He would be back at 9 o'clock if the senor wished to speak with him.

She knew the house where the body of the old Englishman had been found? asked Billery.

Oh, yes; she knew the house.

Had she known the man who sold the house four or five years ago?

Yes, she had known him; he was a bad man. He had robbed her poor old husband.

She told a long-winded tale of this, and Billery listened with great patience; but the story bidding fair to go on for an hour or two, he cut it short by the production of a half-crown.

"I want to know that man's name," said Billery. "I will give you this for it."

His name was Eduardo—Eduardo—she was growing old, and did not remember things—Eduardo—ah, yes, that was it—Eduardo Missalli. He was of France. Of the Indies. Where? Oh, she knew not where. He had said that he was going home. Did he speak English? He talked with his English neighbors. What manner of man? An ugly man. A little man. He had been in an accident. He went lame and had a scar upon his cheek. He was about fifty years of age.

Billery surrendered the half-crown and she bit it with the two teeth left to her.

"We haven't wasted our day, sergeant," said Billery. "The man who sold the house was a Frenchman, by name Eduardo Missalli; more probably Edouard Missall. His home was in the South of France, neighborhood unknown. He had been injured in an accident, went lame, and had a scar upon his cheek." The sergeant booked all this.

"Great advantage that," he said; "a knowledge of foreign languages. I know enough to get along with a Frenchman or a Deutscher, but there I stop."

"If it's of any use to you to have this little bit of information as your own," said Billery, "you're welcome to it. I hadn't thought at first of asking for your help at all, but you can be of enormous use. I suppose the French police will assist you in looking this man up?"

"If he's alive, and anywhere in France, they'll have him in a week, sir."

"Good!" said Billery. "And now, if you'll come with me to the Yard I'll tell you something that will interest you. I'm about at the end of my tether. I can't go traveling all over France looking for a man with a game leg and a scar. And it's of no use for one man to scour over London to find when, on an uncertain date, some person unknown carted a lot of second-hand furniture to a house in Agar row."

"I can see," said the sergeant, "that you've been measuring ways, and means, sir. But a one-man hunt is very little good when you've got a wide ground to cover. That's where the organization comes in. A word to the police sets a hundred thousand pairs of eyes on the watch. It's a most uncommon thing nowadays for a man to hide himself for any length of time. If that chap Missall or Missalli is alive and in France we shall have him in a week, as I've said already. I don't say the system's reached perfection, because it's a human institution, and a human institution is pretty sure to break down in places, but it's a beautiful piece of machinery, sir, is the police force—a beautiful piece of machinery."

"The French or the English?" asked Billery.

"Both of 'em," said the sergeant. "I speak as I find. I don't know about them Russians, but as far as I can see they're rather a measly lot, or else they've got too much on their hands; perhaps that's it. But the English, American, French and German police is each of 'em a bit of all right, and so I tell you. I've worked with all of 'em. They're organized. That's where it is. They spread a regular network, and it's a smart fish that gets through the meshes. Crime's a poor game at this time o' day. Of course, a criminal gets a run for his money now and again, but the odds are against him from the start, and in the end, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he's nobbled."

"You're a bit of an enthusiast, aren't you?" asked Billery.

"What I feel is," the sergeant answered, "that if a man don't believe in his profession he'd better get out of it and find a new 'un. You newspaper gents, now. You ain't half fair to us, if you'll allow me to say so. If there's any little bit of a bobbery about the police and the public, it's the organization that gets blamed. It ain't the organization that's in fault; it's the individual. There's fools in the force, but, bless your soul, there's fools everywhere. There's wrong 'uns in the force, but there's wrong 'us everywhere. What I says is the force is a human institution, and for a human institution it's pretty bad to beat."

"Have you been a unit in the human institution long?" Billery asked.

"Eighteen years," responded the sergeant. "Started in a beastly little mining village in the Black country, just north of Birmingham. Saved up for a 'Popular Educator.' Taught myself shorthand, French and German. Got transferred to the town. Had one or two smart chances and got to London. One or two more chances and then to the Yard. It's hard work sometimes, and it's responsible work always, but it's work I like, and I shall stick to it till I'm superanuated."

"Well," said Billery, "it's a fine thing to be satisfied with your own career."

"When I was at Chelsea years ago," said the sergeant, "there was an old party of the name of Carlyle, who was a good deal looked up to in the neighborhood. He wrote books. I've dipped into one or two of 'em, but they was mostly too deep for me. One thing I noticed perhaps because, in a manner of speaking, it was professional. The police force, he says, is the apron of society. Now, that's a wise word. It ain't an exalted garment, an apron isn't, but it's useful. It saves a lot of dirt and damage. Carlyle, the old gentleman's name was."

"I've heard of him," said Billery.

"Very highly thought of, he was," said the sergeant. "Why, I should think if one man has asked me for his address there's been a hundred. Mostly Germans and Americans. I've seen some of 'em standing in front of the house he lived in with their hats off. I should think he was as well thought of as Mr. Gladstone, though, perhaps, not quite so public a character. And that was his opinion about the force. The police, he says, is the apron of society."

The sergeant appeared to derive great satisfaction from this testimonial, and he repeated it more than once under his breath. Then he and Billery walked along in silence in the direction of the local tramway line, and, turning abruptly round a corner, the sergeant cannoned against a pedestrian who was walking smartly in the opposite direction. There was a mutual recoil and apology, and the pedestrian was about to resume his way when he looked up and caught sight of Billery. He was a burly man, dressed with a cheap and vulgar smartness, with a big butterfly tie of terra-cotta color and a heavy chain of undeceptive yellow metal across his waistcoat. He wore his hat cocked over one eye. In one hand he carried an unlit cigar stump, and in the other a single glove which had seen long service.

"Helloa, Grimaud!" cried Billery. "What brings you to this part of the world?"

"I?" said the other, in fairly fluent English, but with a marked French accent. "I will be hanged if I can tell you. I am taking a constitutional. I am always so fascinate by this great city of London. I walk in it for hours. The exercise does me good. It keeps my fat down."

Russell Sage's Philosophy.

Some sayings of Russell Sage: "Friendship remembers; society forgets." "In the home only is there true happiness. It is there a man's best ideas get their birth and grow." "When you have made your fortune it is time enough to think of spending it." "The tender care of a good wife is the finest thing in the world." "Silk underwear is not for hired men." "Clubs are for idle old men and wasteful young men."

In Ireland, of Course.

On the edge of a small river in County Cavan, Ireland, is a stone with the inscription: "When this stone is out of sight it is not safe to ford the river." But this is even surpassed by the famous post erected some years ago by the surveyors of the Kent (England) roads: "This is the bridle path to Faversham; if you can't read this, you had better keep to the main road."

Proof Positive.

Proprietor of Resort Hotel to His Wife—"Germaine, you've forgotten to give No. 2 his bill."

Wife—"You're much mistaken. I took it to his room ten minutes ago."

Proprietor—"Then I guess you've made a mistake in your addition. No. 12 was singing before you saw him and he has not left off since he's had his bill."

Cause and Effect.

"A few months ago," said the sufferer, "I had indigestion and rheumatism, but it is otherwise now."

"How's that?" queried the stranger.

"Since a rich uncle shuffled off and left me a half a million," explained the other, "the doctors call it appendicitis and locomotor ataxia."

A Lovely Crystal Wedding the Fortunate Guests Would Long Remember—A Most Attractive Summer Luncheon.

A Crystal Wedding.

The "crystal" wedding day comes 15 years after the date of the original ceremony, and is one of the very prettiest of all the anniversaries. The invitations may be written or painted upon sheets of thin, transparent celluloid, which is a very good substitute for glass, inclosing these cards in the regulation cream-colored envelope. It it is best to have a reception with nours in the afternoon and evening, if there are to be many guests. The dining room may be made most attractive by keeping everything in white, spreading a canvas on the floor, using glass candlesticks and white candles, with the daintiest of white shades. A pretty decoration is to have a large, handsomely ornamented cake in the center of the table, surrounded by 15 candles. Scatter bride roses over the cloth, or white sweet peas.

The tiny glass icicles for Christmas tree decorations are just the thing for an affair of this kind. Suspended from the chandeliers and gas jets, they catch and reflect the light in a most fascinating manner. In serving, glass must be used wherever possible. In Austria coffee is served in glass cups, and so the fashion could be introduced here in an occasion like this. Of course the bon-bons, salted nuts and olives will be in glass receptacles. In place of loaf sugar, substitute rock candy crystals in a cut glass bowl. If the hostess is the owner of any lamps or candlesticks with glass pendants, this is the time to bring them out.

If expense does not have to be considered, the tiny mirrors in metal settings would be charming souvenirs or place cards, the name written on the glass in red ink. A programme of wedding music would be an addition to this reception. As for the gifts to be given, there is an endless variety from which to select. Articles for the desk, toilet and table come in exquisite forms and colorings.

An Informal Luncheon.

"Come to luncheon at one, wear a tub suit and bring your thimble." So the little notes read that were received by eight young matrons one day last week. On an awning shaded porch the hostess welcomed her guests, and the maid passed tall tumblers of lemonade, in which three large, luscious cherries floated.

In the dining room, which was all in Delft blue, with blue and white draperies, the table was set with Japanese paper doilies, which come in all sizes and in a bewildering variety of colors. The hostess explained that those doilies were really the cause of the luncheon at this particular time, for everyone knew that she was preparing for an extended trip to the seashore. "I have a scheme to get you girls to help me out of a dilemma, which I'll make known after you have satisfied the inner 'man' and are in a humor to be worked." And what an appetizing spread it was! A mass of scarlet geraniums filled a large copper bowl in the center of the table. Four copper candlesticks, shaded with scarlet, made a soft, beautiful light; the dishes were blue and the service plates of copper. They really belonged to a nut set, but were most effectively used in this way.

The first course was red California cherries dipped in water, then in powdered sugar, and chilled; they were on nasturtium leaves in tall glasses. Creamed chicken and mushrooms in pastry shells, green peas, and Saratoga potatoes came next, with the tiniest of baking powder biscuit. The salad was a fruit mixture, with cheese straws. Delicious cherry ice was the dessert, with lady fingers and maccaroons. Iced tea with lemon juice passed in a small glass pitcher was served throughout the meal. A housekeeper will see what an easily prepared repast this was, yet how delicious.

"Now, prepare to work and be worked," said the hostess, and she produced a number of lingerie waists, which were all finished except sewing the lace on collars and sleeves. By five o'clock the last stitch had been taken and a delightful time credited to an already much beloved hostess, who said, in parting: "Many hands make light work."

Form of Introduction.

A young man on being presented to a young woman lifts his hat and bows. The young woman may extend her hand if she feels like doing so, but a smile and a friendly recognition are all that is necessary. You never introduce a girl to a young man, but you do introduce the young man to the girl. Thus: Miss B., may I present Mr. X.? Or: Mr. X., I want to introduce you to Miss B. Yes, you can always say that you are pleased to meet the young lady.

Lavender Lotion.

Borax must be used sparingly as a water-softening agent. It is extremely drying. Quite the most delightful beautifier for the purpose of softening the bathing water is our celebrated lavender lotion. If you use it once you will feel that you must always have it. The formula is most simple: Four ounces of alcohol, one-half ounce of ammonia, one dram of oil of lavender. The alcohol dilutes the ammonia and makes it safe to use, while the lavender gives a most delicious fragrance to the bath.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN, Rocklyn, Wash., writes:

"I feel better than I have for over four years. I have taken several bottles of Peruna and one bottle of Manalin.

"I can now do all of my work in the house, milk the cows, take care of the milk, and so forth. I think Peruna is a most wonderful medicine.

"I believe I would be in bed to-day if I had not written to you for advice. I had taken all kinds of medicine, but none did me any good.

"Peruna has made me a well and happy girl. I can never say too much for Peruna."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the wholesome, useful women engaged in honest toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world renowned remedy.

The Doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

LOST TOOTH, BUT SAVES JOB.

Wichita Man Swears Off for Good After His Experience.

One Wichita man has sworn off and sworn off with a vengeance. And no one will be surprised on hearing his story. "Tanking up" one day last week he "butted into" his employer on East Douglas avenue. "Well, now, what's the matter with you?" asked the employer as the "half shot" workman brought his hand to his right cheek with a ludicrously agonizing expression on his face.

"Got an awful toothache," answered the laborer who, like most intoxicated ones, had but one idea, that of disguising his condition. The employer looked at him critically for a moment. What he mentally decided the employe doesn't know till this day, but he will never forget the terribleness of his next words: "Well, come with me and we will have it pulled out." John Barleycorn had left enough pride in him to despise the entrapped liar, and he immediately decided to be "game" and "stay" until the distracting finish.

Without question the dentist took his forceps, and, being directed to one of the molars as the one that ached, he swung on, then around, then up and down, and finally with a swing of his body, which all but landed him on the floor extracted the fine, large, sound tooth. When the employe quit bleeding, about three hours after, he took the pledge.—Wichita Eagle.

There Are Two.

"Are you fond of the national game?"

"I certainly am."

"So am I. I think the sight of nine strong, stalwart men engaged in a game which taxes all their skill and resources is simply inspiring."

"So do I, except that nine is too many. Six men make the best kind of a poker party; with nine men playing you have to draw from the discard, and no poker player likes to do that."

"But I am talking about the national game."

"So am I."

Sporting Event.

"So the village paper has engaged the services of a sporting editor?" interrogated the new arrival at Bacon Ridge. "Any late event of importance in the sporting world?"

"Wall, I should say so," replied the village postmaster in rather resentful tones. "Why, by gum, all the star sports that hang around Josh Oldham's general store have stopped playing checkers behind the store and started playing croquet out on the village green."

A Sailor's Address.

"And you say you have been dealing with sea captains while you have been on shore. Name just one?" asked Lawyer John T. Harrington of a sailor witness in the police court.

"I will name Horton Osgood."

"Give me his address."

"Well, if the wind has been good and sou'-sou'west he is now half way between here and Demerara," replied the sailor.

The Fair Critic—"Those ostriches in the distance are lovely, Mr. Dauber. You ought to paint nothing but birds in the future."

Dauber—"Ostriches? Why, those are angels."

The Things We Eat.

Too much meat is absolutely hurtful to the body. Sailors on board of ships get scurvy when their supply of vegetable food is exhausted. The digestive organs of the human body demand vegetable food, and if we don't eat enough vegetables we pay for it dearly.

Nature gave us wheat, and in every kernel of wheat nature has distributed iron, starch, phosphorus, lime, sugar, salt and other elements necessary to make bone, blood and muscle.

EGG-O-SEE is wheat scientifically prepared. Cooked, and made into crisp flakes, EGG-O-SEE goes into the stomach ready for the digestive organs to convert it into life-giving substances with but little effort.

EGG-O-SEE eaters are a clean-eyed, strong and happy lot. The proof of a pudding and the proof of EGG-O-SEE is in the eating. EGG-O-SEE besides being solid nourishment is most palatable. Every mouthful is a joy to the taste and direct benefit to your health. A 10-cent package of EGG-O-SEE contains ten liberal breakfasts. Our friends advertise us. They eat EGG-O-SEE for a while. They grow strong. They are well and happy and they pass the good word along.

Next time you send to the grocer's tell your boy or girl to bring home a package of EGG-O-SEE. Have your children eat EGG-O-SEE. It is their friend. They'll eat EGG-O-SEE when nothing else will taste good.

You try EGG-O-SEE and you can deduct the cost from your doctor's bills.

We send our book, "Back to Nature," free. It's a good bookful of plain, good, common sense. If you want a copy, address EGG-O-SEE Company, 10 First St., Quincy, Ill.

Dentist (to patient who is opening his purse)—"Don't bother about that yet, Mr. Isaacs. You needn't pay in advance."

Mr. Isaacs—"Excuse me. You say you gif me gas, and I count my money first."

Young Mother.

"Have you any fireworks suitable for small children?" asks the young mother.

"Yes, ma'am," answers the dealer. "We have some splendid firecrackers, roman candles and all such things."

"But I fear my little boy is not old enough for them."

"Then here are some pinwheels, and—"

"O, the very thing. Have you some safety pinwheels? My little boy is not yet a year old."

A Ten Strike.

"What sensation have we for this month?" asked the eminent magazine publisher.

"An article on Panama," was his manager's reply.

"Pooh, pooh—"

"By a man who has been to Panama!"

Then the publisher fell on the manager's neck and shed silent tears.

A LESSON IN TACTICS.

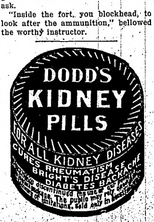
The Sergeant Wanted to Be Sure the Powder Was Dry.

A volunteer sergeant, in charge of a squad of recruits, was waiting in front of the Dog and Gun tavern, expecting the arrival of his commanding officer. Getting rather impatient, the worthy "non-com." resolved to make himself more comfortable. Calling his men together, he told them that he intended to occupy the time in teaching them "outpost duty."

"You three men," he said, pointing to a sturdy trio, "will go to one end of the street. Three more of you will guard the side streets and turnings. The captain is supposed to be the enemy. The Dog and Gun will represent the camp or fort. When you sight the enemy raise an alarm, fall back towards the main body, that's myself, and whatever you do, guard against a possible surprise."

"Where be ye a-going, then, sergeant?" one of the men ventured to ask.

"Inside the fort, you blockhead, to look after the ammunition," bellowed the worthy instructor.



A SAN FRANCISCO HATCHET MAN

BY PHILIP VERRILL MIGHELS.

A singular nose Ned Hummel's seemed to me, for he held it elevated oddly and the nostrils moved with a delicate mobility.

"Old man," said he, still scenting in the air, "I smell opium."

"Oh," said I, quite relieved, "very likely."

"That smell, you know," said he, "reminds me a trifle strongly of a deal I had in California."

"Does it?"

"Yes. Three years ago I had been a reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle a little more than half a year. There I met a splendid lot of fellows, but the jolliest and liveliest crowd was composed of the boys of the internal revenue department, who did nothing at all but watch the Chinese opium thieves, smugglers, and 'factories.' Their duty was to spy on these crafty devils and to raid their dens as often as suspicions required.

"All factories, you must understand, were illicit, for no one could afford to pay the exorbitant and purposely prohibitory tax or license which the government levied on all such concerns.

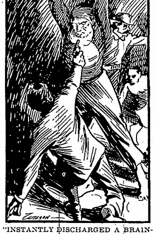
"Many a night we forced the door of some foul abode that reeked with the overpowering fumes of the cooking 'dope,'—aglow with the light from the ruddy fires.

"Generally the coolies escaped, into mazes of tortuous corridors, for Chinatown is incomplete without a score of crooked passages, leading from every room of the slightest importance.

"In the midst of this career I met a Chinese interpreter, who told me an inside story which he had overheard, and parts of which had escaped even the vigilant officers of the government.

"A Chinese ring, represented by a smuggler and a single Chinese merchant, also in shady business, were concerned.

"A certain steamer from the orient contained a consignment of stuff, waybilled to the ring, and when it was nearly due at the port, the ring played a winning stroke and a 'double cross,' in which, by seeming to play in the hands of the government, they really betrayed their partner, the merchant, Ah Fong, and brought their opium safely through. Ah Fong was powerless to complain to the government, being himself concerned, and besides, he found it out too late. But he nursed his grievance.



"INSTANTLY DISCHARGED A BRAIN-SPATTERING CHUNK OF METAL."

"The interpreter told me the name of the chief conspirator, or representative of the ring, and asked me to keep it a secret. Later, when this same interpreter succumbed to an overdose of opium—for he was sadly addicted to nights in the 'joint'—I alone possessed a knowledge that extended behind the scenes.

"On a Sunday morning, months after my last official visit to Chinatown, I strayed along Dupont street, North, till I found myself in the quaint and many-colored quarter of the yellow men.

"Rounding a corner, I looked below to Waverly place, where I saw a crowd of whites and Chinese running into a pinched and filthy alley. Using all my well-learned 'push' I got to the front and saw what occasioned the gathering.

"Jammed in a corner at the bottom of a damp, squalid flight of steps, that led to a fishy and horrible basement, was the corpse of a Chinese man, doubled up, contorted, covered with blood. Not a sign of a struggle was there. The man had evidently been butchered by a 'hatchet-man.'

"Behind me, suddenly, I heard the voice of Bert Thomas. 'Here, Tommy,' I said, and pulled him bodily through the crowd.

"For a moment he looked in horror. 'My God!' he cried, 'Ah Fong! No wonder he didn't come. Highbinders win!'

"'Who is he?' I said.

"'Why,' said Tommy, 'that man was in the office yesterday and agreed to lead us to the biggest factory,' he said, 'on the coast. He didn't dare to give us the names for fear the men might escape and later take their revenge on himself, and he couldn't describe the way to get there precisely.

"He said if they found him out informing, the highbinders would kill him sure—and we knew they would. Well, he never came; we thought him a regular liar, but this—this explains it all—the highbinders win the trick. Poor old Fong!'

"'Ah Fong?' I said. 'Ah Fong—seems to me I have heard that name before. Why, Tommy, wasn't he mixed up in a smuggling racket once, when the stuff turned out to belong to a ring, and all you fellows got taken in on a big consignment of tea?'

"'He's the man—the very same,' he said.

"I told him at once the story I had heard from the dead interpreter. I was able to recall the dates and the name of the steamer, but the name of the chief conspirator—that pseudo partner of Fong's—had escaped me completely.

"My brain refused to conjure up that name, and soon, in my daily routine, I forgot the whole transaction.

"It was fully six months after the highbinder murder of Fong, that both Thomas and I found ourselves at a mining camp called Carbuoy. During our leisure hours, left after duly inspecting the famous mine, we wandered about the camp.

"We walked after dinner and smoked up all the cigars old Tommy had. Then we went for more to the post office. In a glass sort of case affair, used for displaying letters uncalled for, where their owners could point them out and claim them whenever they happened to come along, were several envelopes. I leaned above them listlessly, gazing, through the smoke of my tobacco.

"One of the letters was covered with Chinese characters, and had the owner's name in English, done in a weird and wonderful chirography. I spelled it out.

"'Wan Hop Lee.'

"Suddenly a light broke in upon me.

"'Tommy, Tommy,' I cried, 'look here. Do you see that letter—that name—Wan Hop Lee? That's the name of the fellow who was partner once with old Ah Fong—the name I've been trying to think of ever since that morning of the murder. And I've always thought he was at the bottom of that bloody deed!'

"'Whew!' said Tommy. 'If Wan Hop Lee is here, there is something rotten afoot, I'll bet a mint.'

"We got out at once to talk and think it over. The town offered no retreat we cared to occupy; and we therefore took to the hills beyond.

"Stopping abruptly, Tommy whirled half around, and drew a long, deep breath through his nostrils.

"'I—(sniff)—smell—(sniff)—a factory,' said he.

"I asked him what he intended to do.

"'Track it!' he answered.

"Rounding a hillside we found ourselves almost falling against a rocky dump, where the diggings from a mining tunnel, a trifle above, had been heaped by the miners.

"Whispering, Tommy turned to me:

"'Wait,' he said, and disappeared.

"In half an hour Thomas came back with the square-jawed sheriff and six of the toughest-looking hair-trigger experts I have ever had the honor to meet.

"Moving cautiously ahead we glided noiselessly into the mouth of the tunnel. The vapors that were vomited by the whole belching corridor were nearly stifling.

"At a turn the whole lurid picture burst upon our view. Half a dozen coolies, naked to the waist and glistening with perspiration, hurried about with fuel or to stir the seething black messes that boiled and bubbled over four roasting fires.

"One huge Chinaman stood a little apart, watching his companions, with leering and direful eyes. Ferocity was fairly embossed on his brutally horrible visage. Mentally I marked him for a dangerous beast, adept in murder. With a sullen roar the mountain men dashed precipitately forward.

"Alarmed at the wholly unexpected suddenness of this attack, the coolies jumped to the rear, grasping iron pokers and tools, and shading their blinded eyes to peer in the gloom that engulfed us.

"Backward most of them fell, yelling in wild dismay, and most would have fled at once, but the giant Chinaman hurled them forward with a monstrous swing of his powerful arm. Reaching forward to one of the rashest of the posse, he wrenched the man's revolver from his hand and nearly batted his head from his shoulders with his terrible fist. Over went the man and on came the fiend, with murder and malice twitching and lining every inch of his hideous countenance.

"Once he fired the weapon he held. The bullet plowed along the under side of the arm of one of us, making a deep and burning flesh-wound, enraging to feel. The one who got it instantly discharged a brain-spattering chunk of metal, squarely at the demon, striking him straight between the eyes and laying him low for ever."

The ex-reporter suddenly ceased, as if his tale were done.

"Well, but—the other Chinese," I said. "What became of them?"

"They ran too far and blindly into the tunnel when their chief went down," said he. 'An abandoned shaft, dark and deep was at the end. They were never buried elsewhere."

He reached a little forward for a match, and I, sitting on a step of the porch below, could hardly help observing a long, purple scar, that began near his wrist and ran up toward his elbow, covered, for the most part, by his shirt.

A WORLD BEATER.

Martin J. Sheridan in First Place as an Allround Athlete.

The most brilliant success among the victories won by American athletes at the Olympic games at Athens was achieved by Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American Athletic club, New York. His record, including firsts in free-style discuss throwing and shot putting, seconds in the standing high jump, and putting the stone, leads good judges to pronounce him the best allround athlete in the world. His triumph at this great international contest wa sall the more to his credit because he was hampered by an injury to his leg which compelled which he might have won more points. The whole meeting was a triumph for the representatives of America, who took eleven firsts, six seconds and five thirds out of twenty-nine events, in many of which, however, Americans did not compete. The Marathon foot race, the classic event of the meeting, was won by a Canadian.—Leslie's Weekly.

TERRIBLE TO RECALL.

Five Weeks in Bed With Intensely Painful Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Mary Wagner, of 1367 Kossuth Ave., Bridgeport, Conn., says: "I was so weakened and generally run down with kidney disease that for a long time I could not do my work and was five weeks in bed. There was continual bearing down pain, terrible backaches, headaches and at times dizzy spells when everything was a blur before me. The passages of the kidney secretions were irregular and painful, and there was considerable sediment and odor. I don't know what I would have done but for Doan's Kidney Pills. I could see an improvement from the first box, and five boxes brought a final cure."

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. Regular price, 50c per bottle.

IT IS A $40,000,000 TRUST

Does Anyone Think It Is In Business For Its Health?

People generally have a rich piece of news in the incorporation of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in New York for $40,000,000. Of this sum $10,000,000 is preferred and the rest is common stock.

Wall Street and men who train in the high circles of that wonderful street that begins at a church and ends in the river, have long made a plaything of the fruits of the sweat and toil of the farmer, and wheat, corn, oats and other grains go up or down as the clique that happens to be in power pleases to have it. Gates tried it. Leiter booted the ball. Armour has given it many a biff and bang, and the Wall Street clique do this and that—while at the same time they own and control lines of elevators and pay their own prices for grain, and also control railroads and make the rates on the products of the farm to the market and on the food, machinery and clothing that are sent out to the farm.

This latest Sears, Roebuck & Co. scheme means that Wall Street is to have another finger in the pie. Wall Street money will run Sears, Roebuck & Co. and when the farmer sends his money—always in advance—to the big Chicago mail order retailers he will simply be adding to the dividends of the Wall Street promoters who have underwritten the stock—that is the frenzied financiers who have agreed to swell the capital of the concern because they have been tempted with reported earnings of $3,000,000 a year.

The credit for founding the firm of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and the success that has followed has been given to a former Minnesota railroad man, Richard Sears. There is but little doubt but what Mr. Sears conceived the idea of incorporating as a $40,000,000 trust.

The usual method on Wall Street is to incorporate for a large amount, divided so that the new cash put in will be represented by preferred stock while the common stock is simply an added bonus to the buyers of the preferred—the men who put up the cash. If this procedure has been followed then the $10,000,000 preferred represents nearly a like amount of cash while the $30,000,000 is wind and water. If, following the usual practice this stock is listed on the New York stock exchange, it will be the plaything of the gamblers.—Hardware Trade.

ADVENTURES IN BRIDGEBUILDING

Incidents of the Hazardous Work of Spanning the Gorge of the Zambesi.

The riveting up of the Zambesi bridge proved to be a more formidable undertaking than had been anticipated. Several of the riveters we brought from England were unable to stand the climate, and we had to depend largely on the men in the country. We found that an average day's work in England and in Africa were two very different things. Although we had good hydraulinc and pneumatic equipment, the rate of progress was rather slow.

An interesting incident occurred during the riveting. A leopard, which had previously devastated the hen-roosts of every one in the the locality, besides taking sundry dogs and cats, was run over by an engine one night. He had apparently been dazzled by the headlight and had lain on the track. He was seen by the driver, who pulled up. The skin was found to be scarcely damaged.

The deep pools among the islands in the river were the haunt of numerous hippopotami, which, although peaceable most of the year, if left alone, at certain times became dangerous. We were chased on one or two occasions when in Canadian canoes, but never came to grief. Others were not so fortunate. Three canoes were overturned in one week. In one case one of the civil commissioners' native paddlers was drowned. In another, the man overturned lost his rifle and other gear and had to swim to one of the islands, where he remained all night.

Another adventure that befell two of our riveters, is, perhaps, worth recording. They went a little way along the gorge and there found the remains of a red buck. They started to cut out the horns. Suddenly they heard a growd behind them. Turning, they saw a lioness with two cubs, who was evidently annoyed at this interference with her dinner. The two men did not stop to argue, but made a bee line for the gorge, down which they jumped—about as dangerous a proceeding, one would think, as facing the lion. Luckily they stopped sliding a good way down, and returned very much bruised and excited. The lioness was followed next day for some distance, but the party was unable to come up with her.—World's Work.

AS IN THE MELODRAMA.

Police Chief's Story of Two Disguises and an Arrest.

"A man and a woman," said the police chief, "occupied a compartment of a Pullman. In a desolate place, the train speeding like lightning, the man said to the woman:

"'Madam, I will ask you to look out of the window a few minutes. I am going to make some changes in my apparel.'

"'Certainly, sir,' said the woman politely.

"Two or three minutes, filled with odd, rustling noises, passed. The man said:

"'Now, madam, I am finished.'

"She looked at him and, behold, he had transformed himself into a dashing girl, heavily veiled, fashionably dressed and with rich and beautiful blond hair.

"Some moments later, in her turn, the lady said:

"'Now, sir, or madam, whichever you are, I'll ask you also to look out of the window. I have some changes to make in my own dress.'

"The other complied and, when he was permitted to withdraw his gaze from the passing landscape, what was his surprise to find the lady changed into a man. He gave a loud laugh.

"'It seems,' he said, 'that we are both fugitives. Hence we should be pals. I am a bank robber. What are you?'

"'I,' said the other, 'am Detective Hawke of San Francisco, and for three days, in female attire, I have been shadowing you. Wrists together, please, so that I may now slip the nippers on.'

"Thus," concluded the police chief, "did my friend Hawke arrest the notorious Jack Graeme in '79. It was the neatest arrest, from the melodramatic standpoint, of the year."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Old Bullion's Arrogance.

"Benton was a most remarkable man," said the late Col. Switzler. "In some respects the most remarkable I have ever known, but he could not begin a career at this time. The people would not tolerate him. He would impress even a stranger by his appearance. He walked as if he owned the earth. With head raised at an angle of 45 degrees and hands behind his back he would stalk with measured tread down the street, looking neither to the right nor to the left, recognizing no one.

"If he had an appointment to speak at 2 o'clock, promptly at 2 o'clock he would arrive. He would come in his carriage unattended. He would permit no one to introduce him. But, passing through the crowd, he would make his way to the rostrum and begin, 'Citizens.' Never did he say 'Fellow citizens.' Those before him were no fellows of his. And when he had concluded he would make his way back to the hotel, without personally addressing a soul in his audience. No one dared interrupt him in his speech. He refused to recognize the right of any constituent to ask him how he stood on any subject."—Columbia Herald.

RETURN FROM WINNIPEG

Red Lake Falls Band Does Well in Canadian City.

The members of the band returned Saturday from Winnipeg immensely pleased with their trip. They had reason to be pleased as they were splendidly treated and of ten bands at the exposition there was but one, the Minnesota State band made up entirely of professional musicians, that received more favorable commendation on appearance and high grade music.

Friday morning the band paraded the streets of Winnipeg and gave a short concert in front of the city hall playing to an immense audience that fairly blocked the streets.

On the way to Winnipeg a concert was given at Crookston in which a very elaborate program was given. If the applause and favorable comment of the thousands who listened count for anything, the Crookston people were most agreeably surprised. A surprising affair occurred there; two citizens of Crookston, siezing upon the opportunity of a large crowd gathered to hear the band, interrupted the concert by climbing upon the platform and haranguing the gathering on the subject of charter revision for nearly an hour. It may have been interesting to some but it drove many away and was uncomplimentary in the extreme.

The New Commandments.

1. You shall sell your farm products for cash wherever you can, but not to us; we do not buy from you.

2. You shall believe our statements, and buy all you need from us, because we want to be good to you, although we are not personally acquainted with you.

3. You shall send the money in advance to give us the chance to get the goods from the factory with your money; meanwhile you will have to wait patiently a few weeks that is our business method.

4. You shall apply to the nearest city to aid you in building good roads, so you may conveniently get the goods from the depot that you buy from us for we do not build country roads.

5. You shall buy church bells and interior church fixtures from us and forward the money in advance, for that is our business method and you shall collect from the business men in your vicinity as much as you can for the benefit of your churches. Although we get more money from you than they do, still it is against our rules to donate money for building country churches.

6. You shall buy your tools from us and be your own mechanic, in order to drive the mechanics from your vicinity, for we wish it so.

7. You shall induce your neighbor to buy everything from us, as we have room for more money—the less money there is left in your community, the sooner we can put your local merchants out of business and charge you any prices we please.

8. You shall look often at the beautiful pictures in our catalogues so your wishes all increase and you will send in a big order, although you are not in an immediate need of the goods otherwise you might have some money left to buy necessary goods of your local merchants.

9. You shall have the mechanics that repair the goods you buy from us book the bill, so you can send the money for his labor to us for new goods, otherwise he will not notice our influence.

10. You shall, in case of accident sickness or need, apply to your local dealers for aid and credit, as we do not know you.—Ex.

BALL GAME NEXT MONDAY

The Sioux Indians Will Play Red Lake Falls Team.

The Sioux base ball team, a travelling organization, will be in the city for a game with the local team next Monday afternoon.

The Indians have seventeen players in their aggregation and travel in their own special car. They carry with them a conopy top grand stand with a seating capacity of 1500 people and a canvas fence 12-feet high long enough to surround two blocks of land.

The Red Lake Falls team will probably strengthen for the occasion and will do its best to make the Indians go some.

TRY TO LOWER RECORDS

Dan Patch and Cresceus to Go Against Time at State Fair.

More fast horses will be seen at the Minnesota State Fair this year than ever before. A great entry list closed on July 2 and horses famed the country over are to contest for purses aggregating $33,000. But the greatest of all the track events will be the appearance of Dan Patch, the fastest pacing stallion in the world, and Cresceus, the fastest trotting stallion, in an attempt to lower their world's records. These horses will go on Monday, Sept. 3, the opening day of the fair. They will be driven by Hersey, driver and trainer of their owner, M. W. Savage. Both horses are owned in Minnesota—a fact that should be remembered.

There will be sensational racing each day of the fair—racing under the best conditions and surroundings The horses go on their merits; the management is equitable and just.

Half fare rates have been made on all roads running into Minneapolis and St. Paul and are good beginning with Saturday, Sept. 1st—so that all may reach the cities in time for the big events of the opening day.

CANDIDATES HAVE COMMENCED FILING

County Politics Being Talked of and Candidates Trotting Themselves Out.

Gossip of the Political World—Some Candidates and Others Who Want to Be.

There has been comparatively little talk so far along political lines in county matters and a whole lot less in state politics but with the primary election little more than six weeks distant, the aspirant who must make his debut at that time is beginning to sit up and cause his friends to take notice of his being. In writing up the situation at this time much of the gossip is of a purely hearsay variety and must be taken for what it is worth.

Beginning with those who have filed, first there is Harry Ives of the St. Hilaire Spectator, who seeks the Republican nomination for clerk of court. He will not have a clear field for the nomination for, if reports be true, C. W. Johnson, a school teacher in Black River, will try to land the prize. Both men are off color politically so the Courier is not interesting itself in the outcome.

The second man to give notice to the world by filing notice of his intentions, is Ernest E. L. Quist, well known from having been defeated at the primaries for superintendent of schools two years ago. He now seeks the Republican nomination for register of deeds.

The Thief River Falls papers have been industriously putting forward J. B. O'Brien as Republican candidate for county auditor. He also had the honor of being defeated at the primaries two years ago in the three cornered contest for the superintendency of schools. Again was he defeated for the same office six years ago by Frank Jeffers. As near as can be ascertained it is the Thief River papers that are running Mr. O'Brien so far and he may conclude, that it is a poor kind of indorsement.

For county superintendent of schools Fred Richards is a pronounced candidate and Oscar Knappen has been mentioned.

For the office of sheriff, J. W. McGinty of Thief River Fall, formerly a Democrat, is reported to have said he would file for the Republican nomination.

Ole Tanberg, formerly county treasurer of Red Lake county, is said to be seeking the Republican nomination this year, for that office.

Wilhelm Michelet of Theif River Falls seems to be a receptive candidate for the republican nomination for county attorney against Thomas Germo, the present incumbent but gossip says he is dubious himself about tackling so formidable an opponent. The only Democratic talked of for this office, and in fact the only Democratic lawyer in the county, is E. M. Stanton of Thief River Falls.

Then there is Paul I. D. Ostby. Is he or isn't he? The Thief River papers say he isn't but his announcement in the Plummer Pioneer says he is. You can pay your money and take your choice here.

On the Democratic side the line up will probably be as the offices are now occupied. For Auditor—Thief River Falls papers take notice—James E. Ford; treasurer, K. M. Hansen; judge of probate, N. W. Tarrant; register of deeds, Frank Jeffers; clerk of court, Joseph Perrault; sheriff, Dan Linnihan. And they all look good to the voters.

The primaries will be held September 18, and the time for filing expires August 29.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASED

Commercial Club Committee Reports 47 New Members.

The membership of the Commercial club has been increased from the original number, forty-eight, to ninety-five and the returns are not all in yet.

The committee appointed at the meeting last week, consisting of S. E. Hunt, D. J. Doran and Arthur Lizee, has been actively engaged during the week and the progress reported gives every indication of an unusual interest everyone is taking in the plans for the betterment of the city. The committee expects to still further increase the number. Only three citizens have declined to join the club, and, while even that number is surprising, it is believed they must see the error of their ways and the club will be a unanimous expression of all citizens to accomplish many things making toward a larger and busier Red Lake Falls.

EVERY SATURDAY FOR MARKET DAY

Business Men Are Planning to Give Farmers the Advantage of Special Sales.

Each Merchant to Have Special Sale on One Thing One Day of Each Week.

The success of Red Lake Falls' first market day has led to further planning among the merchants of the city for the mutual benefit of themselves and those who do their trading here. Such planning is taking shape to the end that every Saturday be made a market day.

Saturday is a natural marketing day for farmers and to make the day especially attractive and advantageous to all who come to town, it is thought to be an excellent thing that each merchant have a special sale on some one thing in their stores. In the aggregate it means ten or a dozen special sales every Saturday. It is understood that these special sales shall be a generous reduction in price and on some seasonable article. It should be borne in mind that it is not an effort to get rid of unseasonable or shopworn goods but means a real and valuable saving to purchasers on goods of daily use and necessity.

If any one is inclined to doubt the sincerity of these sales and would know why merchants should do these things, it is easily explained; it will undoubtedly be the means of bringing to town people who have never traded here and from great distances. It will increase the amount of business done in Red Lake Falls. The skeptical man may say, the merchant will make up for the special sale by adding to the price of other goods. It is not so, for he reaps his advantage in the business of an increased number of patrons and the merchants are using the most liberal means of reaching out for trade.

The business men of Red Lake Falls have fully awakened to an advanced position in modern methods of bringing business to the city and one of those methods is making it worth while for farmers to do their trading in Red Lake Falls.

Beside the special sales every Saturday, a big market day, in which prizes will be offered and entertainment furnished to visitors, will probably be held once a month.

The Courier should be carefully watched for further announcements and advertisements.

Rabbit Pests.

In Australia no man can go hunting without getting a few rabbits at least. They have become so numerous that people fear that the western country cannot be settled on account of them. Apparently all efforts to stop their increase are fruitless. Recently a large landowning company put great nets around two and one-half million acres of pastoral land, and treated half of of it for ten months with every known means for destroying rabbits. After the operation had ceased it was found that the rabbits were more numerous than before. If you drink golden grain belt beer with your meals you will be strong, healthy and happy. It is a pure tonic and a healthful food. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

LEPER IS GUEST OF ROAD

BALTIMORE & OHIO HAS MAN ON ITS HANDS—GIVEN PRIVATE BOX CAR.

Baltimore, July 26.—The Baltimore & Ohio railroad is now acting as host for George Rossett, the Syrian leper. This is not from choice, but because he is an elephant on the company's hands. President Murray had a conference yesterday with Dr. Fulton, secretary of the state board of health.

The latter recalled that several years ago the state took Mary Murphy, a leper off the hands of the Johns Hopkins hospital and put her in a place prepared for her. The people of the neighborhood got a mandamus requiring the state officials to take her away and the health authorities made the hospital people take her again. She remained there until she died.

Dr. Fulton explained that he could not place the leper anywhere, as the court of appeals had sustained that mandamus. So the company could not land Rossett.

Accordingly, the Syrian is now enjoying the privileges of a special guest and has a private box car for his own use.

PANAMA WANTS MILK.

Canal Zone Thirsts for the Cool Sweet Drink.

Washington, July 26.—American dairy and stock farms are needed in the Panama canal zone, according to a report from Consul J. C. Kellogg to the bureau of manufactures.

Milk is sold from 20 to 30 cents gold per quart, and is usually watered before it reaches the consumer, and, poor as it is, does not supply the demand.

The average price of beef is from 20 to 25 cents per pound gold, and the quality very poor. Cattle are protected by a tariff of $100 a head on steers and $8 on cows, the United States government, however, being exempt in importing for canal purposes.

The para grass, which grows like wild in Panama, covers the ground thickly and grows very fast after being eaten off by the stock.

KILLED BY BAND SAW.

Young Man Meets Horrible Death in Sawmill.

Little Falls, Minn., July 26.—Ray the twenty-two year-old son of E. T. Fuller of this city was instantly killed in a horrible manner at Pine Tree mill. He was taking his brother Albert's place, whose leg was broken two hours before. In cleaning around the band saw he fell and his left arm was cut off. The force turned him and the cut extended up back to the head. The mill closed down for the balance of the night.

REAPERS WILL RUN NEXT WEEK.

Wheat Heads Out Nicely and Stands Well.

St. Paul, July 26.—Wheat is heading out nicely and is standing well, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Northern Pacific. It is expected that harvesting will begin Aug. 1 on its St. Paul division, east of Staples. A considerable amount of red rust is reported, but so far only one report of black rust has been received.

RESUME OF THE NEWS

Fresh—Reliable—Brief

Washington Notes.

The headwaters of the Mississippi river is to be remembered by having its name attached to one of the cutters of the United States revenue cutter service. The famous old vessel Bancroft, recently turned over to the cutter service by the navy, was accepted and renamed the Itasca.

Milk is sold from 20 to 30 cents gold per quart and is usually watered before it reaches the consumer, and, poor as it is, it does not supply the demand.

LOVESICK PAIR DIE TOGETHER

YOUNG PEOPLE LEAP INTO THE RIVER CLASPED IN EACH OTHER'S ARMS.

LOCKED IN DEATH EMBRACE

PARENTS' REFUSAL TO LET THEM MARRY CAUSE OF DOUBLE SUICIDE.

Philadelphia, July 28.—Grievously disappointed because their parents would not permit them to marry, Gustave Kathke, aged nineteen years, and Ella Miller, a beautiful girl of eighteen, committed suicide together some time Tuesday night by jumping into the Delaware river. Last night the bodies of the young couple, clasped in each other's arms, came to the surface near the Chestnut street wharf, this city, and were taken from the river by the police.

Kathke and the girl had been missing since Tuesday, when they left their homes to visit friends in another part of the city. He had been paying attention to the young woman for about four years and was anxious to make her his wife.

Parents Object.

The parents of both, however, objected because of their youthfulness, and these objections caused the young couple much sorrow. The young woman had often spoken of ending her life if not permitted to marry, but little attention was paid to her remarks. Before leaving home on Tuesday Kathke told a cousin he was going out for a launch ride on the Delaware river with Miss Miller. He was in good spirits apparently and told the relatives that if anything should happen to him not to let the coroner bury him. He told the cousin, jokingly, to hang crepe on the front door and lay a bunch of eighteen roses on his coffin.

Were Reported Missing.

The young man and woman failed to return to their homes that night, and the next day they were reported to the police as missing. The morning mail of Wednesday brought a letter to the girl's mother, in which the girl said the mother would never see her again. Nothing more was heard of the couple till last night, when the churning of the propeller of a tugboat which was tying up at Chestnut street wharf caused the bodies to come to the surface. From the way their arms were clasped about each other it is supposed that Kathke and Miss Miller embraced and jumped into the river.

SHERIFF FOILS MOB.

Spirits Away Condemned Negro on Boat and Executes Sentence.

Baltimore, July 28.—William Lee, the negro who ravished two white women in Princess Anne, and who has been confined in the city jail since his capture in Cape Charles City because of a fear that he would be lynched if taken back to the scene of his crime, was quietly spirited away on board a state fishery boat and placed in charge of the sheriff of Somerset county Wednesday night.

On the boat was a gallows. The sheriff quietly anchored within a short distance of Princess Anne, and at an early hour yesterday morning took the negro ashore at Smith's island, put the gallows up and hanged him.

The people, who are still infuriated, would have liked to tear the negro to pieces.

BOY IS CRUSHED BY WAGON.

Wheels Pass Over Abdomen and He Probably Will Die.

Bismarck, N. D., July 28.—Ora Klipstein, son of Herman Klipstein, the Menoken merchant, was probably fatally injured by being run over by a wagon. He is but nine years old, and with some older companions attempted to get into a moving wagon at Menoken. He lost his grip on the side of the wagon and the rear wheels passed over his abdomen. His recovery is doubtful.

Boys Are Under Arrest on a Serious Charge.

Fergus Falls, Minn., July 29.—The two Irien boys and a boy named Wolf were brought into the justice court here yesterday on the charge of having attempted to lynch one of their companions, a boy named La Plante. The boys, who range in age from eleven to fourteen, are charged with having dragged their prospective victim into a piece of woods with a halter around his neck, and but for the fact that they were seen by a woman who happened along his career would have probably been cut short. The case has been continued for a few days until some additional evidence is secured.

Helena, Mont., July 29.—The trial of M. J. Walsh and M. Donahue in the federal court, on a charge of illegally fencing 11,000 acres of public land, has been on all week and may be concluded to-day. The defense has fought the case at every step. Both men are interested in the Donohue Live Stock company. Mr. Walsh lives in Butte and Mr. Donohue in California. The latter was once general manager of the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific railroad. Both plead absolute ignorance of any wrongdoing, and indications are that in the event of a conviction they will carry the case higher.

ZION CITY IS A TRUST ESTATE

NEITHER DOWIE NOR VOLIVA IS GIVEN CONTROL OF THE PROPERTY.

COURT NAMES A RECEIVER

JUDGE RULES THAT CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOWIE WERE MADE IN TRUST.

Chicago, July 29.—Neither John Alexander Dowie, founder, nor Wilbur Glenn Voliva, present general overseer, is given the Zion City property estimated to be worth $12,000,000, in the decision handed down yesterday by Judge K. M. Landis of the United States circuit court. Instead, Judge Landis declared Zion City a trust estate and named John G. Hately, a member of the Chicago board of trade, receiver, and ordered an election Sept. 18, when the members of the Catholic Apostolic church in Zion City shall choose an overseer. Judge Landis will decide later what compensation Dowie shall be allowed for his services.

Were Made in Trust.

The nub of the court's decision is in the ruling that contributions of property and money to Dowie were made in trust. Judge Landis declared void the conveyance of the Zion City property by Voliva, under power of attorney, to John Alexander Granger. Judge Landis quoted from writings of Dowie to show that the latter had always regarded the property of his church as a trust. The adjudication in the bankruptcy proceedings against Dowie was also set aside, so that pending litigation against Dowie may be automatically restrained until the litigation is ended.

Receiver Hately's bond of $25,000 was approved by the court and Mr. Hately went immediately to Zion City and assumed charge.

Majority Is Satisfied.

The effect of the decision is to place the industrial affairs of Zion City in the hands of the court, through the agency of Mr. Hately, while the church's spiritual matters will come under the supervision of the overseer to be elected in September.

Dowie was not in court, illness confining him to his hotel. A number of members of the church, however, who still cling to him, were present. Wilbur Glenn Voliva and his faction were numerously represented. Mr. Voliva refused to discuss the decision, but the comment on both sides unofficially indicated satisfaction at the outcome. With hardly any dissent the opinion was expressed by those present in court that Judge Landis had found a "horse-sense" solution of the problem which would work for the interests of the great majority of members of the Dowie church.

CZAR'S BOLD ACTION PRECIPITATES WAR

Dissolves Parliament and Raises Curtain on Last Act in Drama of the Russian Revolution.

Government and People Now Face to Face, Both Sides Determined to Fight to Bitter End.

St. Petersburg, July 24.—An imperial ukase has been promulgated dissolving parliament and fixing the time for the convocation of the newly elected assembly as March 5, 1907.

Under Martial Law.

A second ukase places St. Petersburg in a state of extraordinary security by the declaration of a minor form of martial law.

A large part of the province of Kiev, where armed uprisings are anticipated in consequence of the dissolution of parliament, is placed under martial law.

It is now but a step to dictatorship.

Premier Goremykin Fired.

Another imperial ukase relieved M. Goremykin of the premiership and appointed M. Stolypin premier. He also retains his present post of minister of the interior.

While M. Stolypin is undoubtedly a much stronger man than his predecessor, he probably will be unequal to the task of piloting the country through the revolutionary upheaval which is just ahead, and the general belief is that a dictatorship must come soon.

Issue Depends on Army.

With the imperial ukase dissolving parliament the curtain rose upon possibly the last act in the great drama of the Russian revolution. The people and the government now stand face to face, and upon the army depends the issue.

Even should the government, however, succeed in restraining an outbreak of the people, the victory probably will only be temporary and simply confine the steam for the final explosion.

No one doubts the severity of the storm which will rise in the country in response to the emperor's dispersal of the men whom he welcomed two months ago in the winter palace as the ablest men in Russia; but the die is cast. The government has elected to fight, and the capital yesterday bore eloquent testimony of the preparations made to repress the masses by force. The city was packed with soldiers and resembled an armed camp.

The work of gathering in revolutionary agitators began immediately after the ukase placing St. Petersburg in a "state of extraordinary security" was promulgated, and hundreds of arrests were made before daylight.

Petty Dictators.

The powers conferred upon M. Von der Launitz, prefect of police, and M. Zinovieff, governor of the province, are little short of those of petty dictators. Searches and arrests can be made without process of law, newspapers forced to suspend publication and persons deported by administrative order without trial. Public and private meetings are forbidden. Those arrested may, if it is desired, be tried by military court and summarily executed. The only real difference between "extraordinary security" and full martial law is that power is exercised by the so-called civil instead of military authority.

People Will Rise En Masse.

The news traveled fast in the country, and the general expectation is that the peasantry, accepting the dispersal of parliament as the final blow to their hopes, will arise en masse.

The proletariat organizations have been preparing for months for just such a provocation to declare war. It is impossible to describe the consternation with which the Constitutional Democrats learned the news. Although it had been bruited about for the past three days, the ukase was received by them in blank amazement.

Members Not Daunted.

The government undoubtedly calculated on catching the opposition off its guard, but if it expected to strike terror to the hearts of the members of parliament it has failed signally. Some time ago, when dissolution seemed imminent, the various groups of the opposition virtually agreed to follow the example of their French compatriots of the states general and meet, if driven out of the Tauride palace, wherever and whenever circumstances dictated until a constitution was firmly established.

Will Meet in Finland.

After a hurried secret conference it was decided, on account of the possibility of the meeting being broken up and the members arrested, that they go immediately to Finland and decide upon the future course to be pursued, and small groups left yesterday by train.

The Constitutional Democrats and Intellectuals generally recognize that they have no weapon with which to fight the government bayonets. The initiative, therefore, naturally will fall to the proletariat.

Will Paralyze Country.

This the Social Democrats and the Group of Toil in parliament all along have recognized, and the most elaborate preparations have been made to repeat the tactics of last fall and paralyze the country with a general strike. But the plans at this time have been perfected with much more deliberation and involve not only the paralysis of cities, telegraphs, railroads and all means of communication throughout the empire, but a complete strike of peasants in the country as well. They confidently believe the loyalty of the troops has been so shaken that the military supports of the government will give way, and that when put to the test the army will be divided against itself.

PROF. MOURMONTSEFF, President of Douma.

DOUMA ISSUES APPEAL.

Citizens Urged to Defy Government—Spirit of Revolt Spreads.

St. Petersburg, July 25.—The great news of yesterday was the adoption of an address to the people by the members of parliament, who assembled at Viborg, the language of which, with its revolutionary demands that the people cease to furnish money and troops to the government and repudiate further loans, affords pretext enough for the government to lodge its authors in the fortress, if it feels strong enough. A rumor was spread last night that this course had been decided upon.

A large crowd gathered at the Finland station last night where the deputies were expected to arrive, but only a few appeared and these were not molested, and neither was there a popular demonstration.

Police Watch Newspapers.

Copies of the appeal to the people are in the hands of all St. Petersburg newspapers, but it will scercely be printed to-day for the reason that a detachment of police is posted at the door of every newspaper printing office in the city, with orders not to permit any papers to leave the building until authorized by the censor. The authorities hope by equally vigorous measures to prevent the publication of the appeal in other cities, and in the meantime to nullify the fears of the people as to the possible effect of the appeal.

The theaters and other places of amusement were almost empty last night, the public fearing a conflict between the crowds and the military and police. Several encounters took place in various parts of the city, but they were all of a petty character.

A Provisional Government.

A few days may witness the constitution of a "provisional government," composed of an enlarged council of ministers, with the inclusion of conservative members of the dispersed lower house of parliament, councilors of the empire and men influential in the life of the empire, who can be induced to accept ministries without portfolios and contribute their authority and advice, to which Premier Stolypin and the members of his cabinet, who realize the enormous nature of the task of tiding over the the country during the

Tempestuous Era

that is now dawning, are turning, and it was the subject of deliberation at a meeting of the cabinet last evening. The Associated Press is informed that a majority of the ministers have become converts to the idea and that its adoption depends upon the success of M. Stolypin in inducing men like Former Minister Shipoff, Count Heyden, Former Commerce Minister Timiriaseff and M. Guchkoff to compromise their future by allying themselves with such a "king's council."

Popular Representation.

The Associated Press is also informed that a ukase will soon be issued fixing the date of elections for parliament for the first week in December, Russian style, and that as an additional guarantee that the principle of popular representation will not be abandoned, another edict will be issued, proroguing the council of the empire until the convocation of the new parliament without calling new elections for elective members.

Gigantic Upheaval Coming.

Meanwhile the masses of the Russian people, slow of thought and action, have not yet roused themselves to the gigantic upheaval which is sure to follow the dissolution of their parliament. Minor disorders are reported from half a dozen cities An incipient anti-Jewish outbreak at Odessa has been checked by the police. A sympathetic strike has been begun at the Kharkov railroad shops, which may inaugurate a general tie-up of communications, but St. Petersburg, Moscow and most of the great centers are still calm on the surface, though boiling and seething beneath.

Final Act of Drama.

Viborg, Finland, July 25.—The curtain dropped yesterday afternoon on the final act of the drama of Russia's first parliament, when under the spur of the threat of Gov. Rechamberg to use military force to end the session, and with troops already converging on the Hotel Belvidere, where the meeting was held, 186 members of the lower house hurriedly adopted and signed an address to the people which is thoroughly revolutionary in its nature; elected a perpetual executive committee, headed by Prince Paul Dolgouroukoff, vice president of the house, to carry on the work of liberation, and adjourned amidst characteristic Russian embracing and kissing.

Members Fear Arrest.

A few members, including President Mouromtseff, Ivan Petrunkevitch and Count Heyden returned to St. Petersburg by evening trains. The Constitutional Democratic cohorts intend to go to St. Petersburg in a body in the morning, but many of the radicals, fearing arrest at the capital, will remain in Finland or return by roundabout routes.

The address, which bears a remarkable similarity to the manifesto framed by the council of workmen last November that landed its authors and the editors of eight St. Petersburg newspapers in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, strikes the government in its most vulnerable point by declaring that the administration is responsible for the delay in the settlement of the agrarian question and by proclaiming a cessation of payment of taxes and of military servitude and a repudiation of future loans.

Hits the Government.

The address concludes as follows:

"Citizens: Stand up for you trampled-on rights, for popular representation and for a complete parliament. Russia must not remain a day without popular representation. You possess the means of acquiring it. The government has, without the assent of the popular representatives, no right to collect taxes from the people, nor to summon the people to military service. Therefore, you are now the government. The dissolved parliament was justified in giving neither money nor soldiers.

"Should the government, however, contract loans in order to procure funds, such loans will be invalid without the consent of the popular representatives. The Russian people will never acknowledged them and will not be called upon to pay them. Accordingly, until a popular representative parliament is summoned, do not give a kopec to the throne or a soldier to the army. Be steadfast in your refusal. Nc power can resist the united, inflexible will of the people.

"Citizens, in this obligatory and unavoidable struggle your representatives will be with you."

SUES SEVEN RANCHMEN.

They Are Charged With Illegally Fencing Nebraska Land.

Omaha, July 25.—Seven suits were filed in the federal court yesterday by District Attorney Gans against ranchmen in the western part of the state to compel them to remove unlawful fences from the public domain. They are alleged to have a total of 293,000 acres illegally inclosed. Several of the defendants are already under indictment in connection with alleged land frauds.

The State DAY BY DAY

CAN'T BUY LAND FOR PARK.

Mankato Will Ask Attorney General to Get Tract Condemned.

Efforts to purchase the land needed for the state park at Minneopa have been abandoned, owing to the high price placed upon it by the owner, and the Mankato Commercial club committee will ask Attorney General Young to commence condemnation proceedings.

Mr. Young has informed the committee that he does not think that the state should acquire the land, as it would be more of a Mankato park than a state park, and he suggests that the city ought to buy it. However, he has consented to hold the matter open for a time in the hope that negotiations can be brought to a successful close and the land purchased. It is considered doubtful whether he will undertake condemnation proceedings, in view of the stand which he has taken. Fears are expressed that unless the purchase is closed before the next legislature meets it will repeal the act providing for the establishment of the park.

The citizens are a unit in wanting the state to acquire the land and establish the park, as provided for by the legislative act, by condemnation if it cannot be done by purchase. They feel that the law should be carried out, and one of the most beautiful spots in the state acquired for preservation.

EVERYBODY IS INVITED TO FAIR.

Minnesota's Big Exhibition Is Being Well Advertised.

The co-operation of the business men of St. Paul and Minneapolis in advertising the coming state fair is adding widely to the publicity given the event. Private firms are helping to swell the crowds in town during fair week by using the dates of the fair—Sept. 3 to 8—printed on the lower corner of the envelopes used. The management does the printing without expense to the users, calling for the envelopes and returning them, printed with the dates in red. Several hundred thousand envelopes already have been printed in this way in each city.

Many firms get out something in the way of an invitation to their customers and correspondents, and thus assist in getting a large number of people into the city for fair week. As many such invitations are now being prepared, it is suggested by the fair management that it is desirable to call attention to the fact that the half-fare rates go into effect on the Saturday before the fair, Sept. 1, thus making it possible for people to reach the cities Saturday night or Sunday and avoid the crowds later. It also makes it very convenient for those who wish to be present on the opening day, when Dan Patch and Cresceus go against their world's records.

The scene of the murder is three-quarters of a mile south of Prescott, Wis. The dark spot at the foot of the stake in the picture is an indentation made by Constable Isaac's head when it was pounded into the sand by his assailants. PUSH WORK ON SANATORIUM.

State Board of Control Inspects Progress of Job.

The state board of control, composed of L. A. Rosing, Dr. J. L. Camp, S. W. Leavitt, Dr. Weiser and Dr. Taylor, accompanied by M. C. Johnson, architect, and O'Neil & Son, contractors, are at the state sanatorium grounds at Walker, pushing the work of the state institution.

Work will begin at once. Teams are being hired, workmen engaged to clear up the grounds and immediate action will be taken toward the erection and construction of the numerous buildings.

The erection of the caretaker's cottage and the clearing of a large part of the grounds took place some time ago, and it is a great deal of satisfaction to those who are interested in the work in connection with the state sanatorium to know that the work of construction of the state institution will commence immediately. There will be in the neighborhood of $100,000 expended in the construction of buildings on the grounds this year.

THOMPSON TALKS RIVER WORK.

$50,000 to Be Spent in Improvements When the Water Falls.

Capt. W. A. Thompson, in charge of improvement work on the upper Mississippi, was in Winona recently, and when asked as to when improvement work in his district would begin, said it would be just as soon as the water was down to a six-foot stage, and that when above that level the work could not be carried on to advantage. With the water steadily falling, he was of the opinion improvement work would begin very soon.

Capt. Thompson said he expected to expend between $40,000 and $50,000 in his district this summer, but could not say just where the work would be done. Most of it would be between Winona and La Crosse.

Anoka County First.

Anoka county has made its report to the state board of equalization, the first county to report. The real estate in the county this year is returned by the county board of equalization at $2,501,579. Two years ago it was left at $2,870,729 by the state board. Consequently the state board will have to boost it considerably to bring it up to the figures of two years ago. The personal property was left by the state board at $562,256 last year and the return this year is $564,666, an increase of a little over $2,000.

PRAISES MINNESOTA.

Visitor From Canada Thinks North Star State Is Best in the Section.

"Undoubtedly the greatest state in the Northwest," were the words in which Mr. E. Olson of Estervan, Canada, described Minnesota when seen in St. Paul.

"Booming? I wish you could have seen the crowds bidding at the opening of those new railroad towns the other day. At the time of the sale there was nothing in sight but prairie where the future towns were to rise, but even at that land which is to become corner lots sold for $50 and was considered a bargain at that price.

"In the town of Kermit, Minn., within forty-eight hours after the lot had been sold a bank was open and doing business on the spot. A rough building had been already erected, and just as soon as a lot had been purchased skids were put under the structure and it was moved onto the site of its future prosperity. It certainly is a great country for wheat and flax, which are the two principal products raised.

"This is the first trip I have made to St. Paul, but you seem to have a splendid town here, and it fully comes up to my expectations."

George Allen is in jail in Stewartville, charged with assault upon a sixteen-year-old girl. She was standing last evening near the hotel where she is employed, when Allen approached, thrust a handkerchief into her mouth and dragged her back of some outbuildings. Her muffled cries brought help and Allen was captured. He is a married man. It is hoped that a conviction will be secured, as Allen has been a persistent lawbreaker, this being his third attempt in this direction.

Who wants the nomination for lieutenant governor on the Democratic ticket?

Rockefeller has returned from Europe and the pedal extremities of divers warrant-servers have already had a chill.

If the Thief River Falls News stopped its press for all time, scarcely anyone would note the difference.

So A. L. Cole wasn't a soldier after all. But then it doesn't make any particular difference, he isn't much more of a candidate.

Ruesell Sage's will is likely to be contested. The way the lawyers will break into those millions must surely make the old miser turn over in his grave.

We hope the curiosity of H. Joshmark Sanders of the Greenbushky Journaloff is satisfied as to what the Courier would say about Judge Watts' latest decision.

The Cass Lake Voice says that Cole is the unanimous choice of his party. The Voice will have to get a mighty big megraphone to get anybody to listen to that statement—and believe it.

McCleary, the most stubborn and narrow-minded of stand-patters, is already seeking a soft spot to land when he gets dropped with the d, s. t. The superintendency of schools at Washington is being upholstered against his drop.

William McCuaig, a prominent merchant of Bemidji, is announced as a candidate for representative on the Republican ticket for the 61st district which includes Red Lake county. He has many strong friends here who will be glad to see him nominated.

The Thief River papers say Paul I. D. Ostby will not be a candidate for county auditor and yet Mr. Ostby's notice that he will be a candidate is still running in the Plummer Pioneer. Which is right? In other words do the initials I. D. stand for "I do" or "I don't."

The old court house at Jackson, Minn., was sold last week. It now looks as though Red Lake Falls would have an old shack that has been put to like use on her hands. They might, however, following the removal of the county seat to Thief River Falls next spring utilize the building for a poor house. The only trouble will be lack of size to accomedate the needy.—Thief River Press.

Without pausing to attend the obsequies of the English so foully murdered in the above, we beg leave to agree with the conclusion—especially if it were necessary to accomodate the needy from Thief River Falls.

INDICATIONS FAVOR JOHNSON.

Irish Standard: The Republican convention has been held and has placed in nomination for chief executive of the state A. L. Cole of Walker, of whom but little is known by the average voter. His nomination seems to have awakened little or no enthusiasm in the Republican ranks. Many of the Republican editors have openly expressed their dissatisfaction over the result of the convention, while others have yet to learn the correct name of their candidate for governor. The Democrats will meet in state convention in Minneapolis during the month of September and there is not a shadow of a doubt that the present chief executive of the state, John A. Johnson, will receive the unanimous nomination from his party, and the wise and fearless performance of public duty exercised by heads of departments, particularly that of insurance has given the governor a stronger hold than ever with the people and the indications point to his re-election in November by a satisfied constituency irrespective of party.

PRAISED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Fairmont Sentinel: A governor who receives the commendation of the president of the United States through a special message to congress is entitled to the commenda tion of the people for a second term. That's what Governor Johnson's friends think, regardless of politics.

INTERESTS NOMINATE, BUT CAN'T ELECT

Wadena Pioneer-Journal, (Rep.): The voters of Minnesota are an independent lot, and they have the refreshing habit of voting as they please, without regard to the wishes or commands of party or newspapers. Minnesota is a Republican state, yet a nomination is not equivalent to an election.

PUNCTURE PROOF SELF HEALING
TIRE CO CHICAGO U.S.A.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Cataarh. Hall's Cataarh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Cataarh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Cataarh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

DO YOU KNOW

That to a lawyer all courses are fee-sible.

That tears are never far from a woman's eyes.

That even a cheap man may be dear to some woman.

That the story of the rattlesnake is a rattling good tale.

That charity begins at home, but too often it stays there.

That most people dispise a flatterer, but they enjoy the flattery.

That you can't mend your ways by learning how to sow the wind.

That the hum of the binder is about to be heard in the land. Let her hum.

That lots of people think love is exquisite torture, and the worst of it is, they look it.

That if the average man had what he wanted there wouldn't be much left for the rest of us.

That some people pray as tho they thought the Lord needed their advice, says an exchange.

That a pessimist says all women promise to obey at the altar but they forget to deliver the goods.

That there is always room at the top but some people stay at the bottom to help pull the others down.

That it isn't all poetry because each line begins with a capital letter. Would-be poets are requested to take notice.

That some one says you can generally tell by the color of a girls hair what kind of ribbons she runs thru her clothes that you don't see.

That the man who won't attend church on the plea there are usually too many hypocrites to be found there, should remember there is always room for one more.

That the expression, "champagne taste and a beer income," is an old one but with the present price of ice, it should now read, "ice-water taste and a champagne income.

That Prof. W. D. Miller in a lecture recently said the bite of a pretty girl will "often bring a quicker and more horrible death than the bite of a serpent." Why a pretty girl?

That a news item in an exchange says: "A few days ago while Mrs. Wilson was feeding a cow a coon came along and growled at her." Such a near-tragedy really makes one shudder.

That there have been some men—not-many—who have refused to join the commercial club. It is impossible to understand such an attitude, unless it is that they would rather not see the city progress.

That a southern paper says: It is to be hoped that the newspapers which are printing the pictures of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will stop with the series for which she posed in her beautiful night gowns.

That the Crookston papers had mighty little to say about the concert the Red Lake Falls band gave there last week, the same being in marked contrast with the appreciation shown by an immense audience.

That "Ma wants a package of dye and she wants a fashionable color," said a liltle girl to a druggist. "A fashionable color?" echoed the pharmacist. "What does she want it for; eggs or clothes?" "Well," replied the girl, "the doctor says ma has stomach trouble and ought to diet. Ma says if she has to dye it she might as well dye it a fashionable color."

That a Red Lake Falls man was complaining of rheumatism. "There is no excuse for you being afflicted," said a friend. "I used to have rheumatism. When it would strike me I would go home and have my wife throw her arms around my neck and give me a massage treatment. It helped me every time. You ought to try it." "I will," said the man. "When will I find your wife at home?"

That an exchange tells of the wives of two musicians who met on the street. One was pushing a baby carriage containing three girls—triplets. The other, just over her honeymoon, congratulated her upon such bliss, upon which the proud mother said that she attributed it to the fact that after returning from their wedding tour the town band serenaded them with "Three Little Maids From School." The young bride threw up both hands and then exclaimed: "Good Heavens! That same band serenaded us and played 'The Sextette From Floradora.'"

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

THE WORST DISEASE IN THE WORLD

Contagious Blood Poison is the worst disease in the world; not only those who contract it suffer, but the awful taint is often transmitted to innocent offspring whose lives are blighted and bodies diseased because the virus of Contagious Blood Poison has been allowed to remain in the family blood. The first sign of this disease is usually a little pimple or blister, then a red rash breaks out, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair comes out, copper colored spots appear on the limbs, back and breast; and as the disease more thoroughly pollutes the blood, sores and ulcers form and if the trouble is not checked the finger nails drop off, and the soft bones of the nose and head are destroyed. S. S. S. goes down into the blood and forces out every particle of the poison and makes a complete and lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of the remedy the symptoms begin to pass away, and when the cure is complete the patient is left in perfect health. So thoroughly does S. S. S. rid the system of the virus that no signs of the disease are ever seen in after years, and posterity is born with a rich, pure blood supply. Book with complete instructions for home treatment and any medical advice desired will be given without charge.

I contracted Contagious Blood Poison by using a towel used by some infected person and had every symptom of the vile disorder. I tried everything I heard of but the disease got worse until I heard of S. S. S. which I commenced, and continued the treatment until I was entirely well. This was some time ago and I have never seen the slightest sign of the disease since. JOS. SCHLOEMER.

CHAPTER V.—(Continued).

"Ah!" said Billery; "I suppose so." There was not much in the words, but the tone was so uncommonly dry, and Billery's glance at the man was so keen, that the sergeant, who had paused mechanically at the first word of recognition, looked curiously from one to the other.

"Yes," said the cheap dandy, who appeared to the sergeant's eye as if he were for some reason rather disconcerted by the encounter, "exercise is for me a thing essential. I cannot without it maintain my health."

"Dear me!" said Billery. "Good day."

The Frenchman flourished off his hat and brought his heels together. Billery, with a sidelong nod, went on his way. He walked in silence for a minute or two, but suddenly he turned and touched his companion on the arm.

"Sergeant," he said, "I don't mind betting you twopence that that chap is on the same business as ourselves."

"What!" said the sergeant, "that foreign cove? What has he got to do with it?"

"Now, that," Billery answered, "is exactly what I should like to know. Old Brangwyn was a great friend of my father's, and I have known the family intimately all my life. The two cousins, the old man's sole survivors, lived for a long time in Paris. They had a studio together there, and that fellow was their servant. It was there I knew him. He's one of the laziest rascals in the world, and his talk about his constitutional exercise was an invention. He wasn't walking at that pace for the sake of exercise. He had some definite business in mind, and he wasn't comfortable at being recognized."

"No," the sergeant assented; "he wasn't comfortable, and he certainly did come round that corner pretty sharp for a man who was in no particular hurry."

"I have a theory of my own," said Billery, "and it's so simple and easy that I have wondered why nobody else has hit upon it. Now, Master Grimaud there is as likely to have hit upon the same idea as any man alive. If he has he'll go playing for blackmail, I know."

"Blackmail?" said the sergeant. "You've got your suspicions as to the party concerned?"

"Yes," replied Billery, "I have my suspicions, and it is quite possible that Grimaud has his, and that they point in the same direction as my own."

CHAPTER VI.

It was a week later that Billery's visit to Agar row when it occurred to him to call upon Alexis Brangwyn, who occupied a large and luxurious flat in one of those residential mansions which have of late years sprung up in such numbers in the Western district of London. There was as yet no news of the man who was being sought by the French police. With his advent—if ever he should be discovered—Billery hoped to strengthen his case so far as to justify the arrest of the man to whom his suspicions so strongly pointed.

There was only one compunction in his mind, and that related to his old friend Alexis, whom he had always regarded with a sincere affection. Alexis would feel this exposure keenly. Should his cousin's guilt be brought home, as Billery was sure it would be, the disgrace and shame which would result from it could not be less tragic. It looked like a cruel thing to darken that sunny heart, and many and many a time in the silent watches of the night, when Billery lay awake in the strange excitement of his man-hunt, piecing all his bits of evidence and conjecture together until they seemed to make an actual picture of the crime, he had felt a chill to think that he was preparing to inflict so indelible a stigma on the name of one of the dearest of his friends. He liked Alexis. Everybody liked Alexis, the bright, gay, irresponsible, butterfly Alexis, who was the friend of all men, whose purse was always open at the call of distress, and whose hospitable mahogany had so often sheltered Billery's own legs in the days when he had first fallen from fortune.

It was impossible to arrest the wheels he had set in motion, and it was not to be thought of that the criminal should be suffered to escape, but Billery had many and bitter heart-searchings on the question. Why he was going to see Alexis was by no no means clear to him. He had some half-formed hazy notion of preparing him for the blow which before long would fall upon him, but he asked himself what was the good of anticipating the inevitable time of misery.

But the fact is that Billery was not quite master of himself and his emotions on this particular evening. He had loyally kept his pledge to Truscott until the month for which he had promised abstinence had expired. He had really been horribly afraid that Truscott would exact a renewal of his promise, and to avoid the chance of that he had kept out of his chief's way, and now on his return to freedom he had been lounging round from one old haunt to another, and exchanging drinks with the boon companions of his fallen days, until he had arrived at the stage he had craved to reach for one-and-thirty weary and thirsty days; the stage when conscience retired to its kennel and ceased to bark at him; the stage where the contemplation of his bankrupt resources ceased to worry him; the stage where roses bloomed everywhere, until sleep gripped him and the day called him to headache and new remorses.

It is not to be supposed that Billery as yet was drunk. He had reached the expansive and affectionate period when misfortune had no power to wound and he was ready to love his greatest enemy as a brother. He walked steadily, with perhaps a rather more stately bearing than common, and his eye was bright. Now and again he smiled, and people who passed him thought him a very happy and good-humored gentleman, but if you had asked him what he smiled at he could not have told you to save his life. The sick spirit of the man was out of pain, as it never was when he was altogether sober.

The gas lights were twinkling in the delightful summer dusk, and the hall of the building in which Alexis Brangwyn had his London pied-a-terre was not yet illuminated. He knew his way fairly well, but he was stepping with caution in the dark when the door of the chambers of which he was in search suddenly opened, and in the gush of clear electric light which came from within he saw the figures of Alexis Brangwyn and his old servant Grimaud. It was not at all a surprising or unnatural thing that the Frenchman should call upon his ancient employer, from whom, so far as Billery knew, he had parted on friendly terms. Yet it struck him oddly, and he thought of his chance encounter with the foreigner as he met him hastening apparently in the direction of Agar row.

"There, now," Alexis was saying, "for heaven's sake, go. If you have anything more to say, put it in writing. Don't come here again." He spoke in French, and Grimaud answered in the same language.

"I do not like writing, Monsieur Alexis. It is not safe."

There Billery thought it well to reveal his presence by a cough. The two men started violently and turned toward him.

"Helloa, Billery," said Alexis, in an unsteady voice. "That you, old fellow? Come inside. Good night, Adolphe. You remember Adolphe, Billery, don't you, in the old barrack in the Cite d'Antin?"

"Oh, yes," said Billery, "I remember Adolphe. I met him only the other day. How do you do, Adolphe?"

Billery thought he guessed something of what had happened. The face of Alexis was in the shade, and it was not possible to see it clearly, but his eyes looked wild and staring, and the hand which he had stretched out in greeting had shaken in his own like the hand of a man with a palsy.

"Go in, Billery," said Alexis. "Good night, Adolphe."

Billery passed in and Alexis closed the door behind him. From the entrance hall they passed into an apartment of fine proportions, exquisitely furnished, with almost a feminine character in its luxuriance, except that it was rich with statuary and heavily-framed paintings. There were flowers in profusion, and the lustrous grand piano was fairly banked about with them, as if the room had been prepared for some sort of festival. Billery knew the fashion. It was one of his old friend's harmless eccentricities to live in a conservatory. But there was one thing that struck his eye and held it. On a dainty table of marqueterie, in the middle of the room, stood a dainty little gallipot, and the gallipot was half-filled with a dirty grey paste. Billery looked from this object to his friend, and Alexis' face was frightful. A very pang of pity shook the visitor.

"My poor, poor, dear old pal!" said Billery, with sudden tears stinging in his eyes. "What is the matter?"

"Matter?" said Alexis. "What should be the matter?"

"Alex," said Billery, with his hand on his friend's shoulder, petting and soothing him, "I more than guess the purpose of that fellow's visit. I had half a mind to tell you myself tonight."

"You?" answered Alexis. "You? Good heavens!" His legs failed beneath him, and he dropped as if he had been poleaxed. By pure hazard there was a great padded arm-chair behind him, otherwise he would have measured his length upon the floor.

"I can understand how horribly shocked you must be," said Billery, with deep sympathy in his face and voice. Alexis looked at him with a sort of helpless wonder seeming to replace the horror in his eyes. "But pull yourself together, poor, dear old chap! Let me give you a glass of brandy."

"Yes," answered Alexis, with a croaking voice, as if his throat were suddenly restricted. "Brandy!"

Billery gave him a liberal dose, and watched him as he drank it.

"I have certainly had a great shock," said Alexis. His lips could barely frame the words, and the voice in which he spoke was utterly unlike his own. "But I think that you are talking at cross-purposes."

"I'm afraid I'm not," answered Billery. "Hasn't that fellow Grimaud been here to denounce Aloysius?"

Alexis was leaning forward as these words were spoken. When they were uttered he sank suddenly back in his chair, his eyes closed, his hands dropped laxly beside his knees, and a deep groan escaped him. After a minute he struggled back into a sitting posture and spoke again.

"Why should Grimaud denounce Aloysius?"

"It's perfectly natural that you should wish to shield him," said Billery. "You're bound to him by the tie of kinship, and at one time of your lives you were friends. But you're wasting pitty, Alex. The man is a callous villain and deserves his doom."

"What is your charge against Aloysius?" Alexis asked, rallying himself with a great effort. "Speak out!"

"I charge Aloysius with his uncle's murder."

"Aloysius?" said the other, drawing his hand across his eyes. "Aloysius?" He reached out his hand toward the carafe which Billery had set beside him, but he was unequal to the effort. "Give me some more brandy, old fellow. I'm all aboard. Thanks. Now go on, and let me understand this amazing business." The spirit seemed to revive him, and he sat up more like his ordinary self than he had been since his visitor's arrival. He signed, "Go on," and arranged himself in his chair to listen.

"Aloysius was the one person who most conspicuously profited by your uncle's death?" said Billery.

"Yes; I suppose so. Well?"

"He swore all along that he was in Paris at the date of your uncle's disappearance?"

"Yes; what of that?"

"He was not in Paris. He was in London."

"Who says so?"

"I say so, on the authority of an eye-witness. And, what is more, I am in a position to prove that he was in your uncle's house on the evening of the day on which he was last seen alive."

"No, no, no!" cried Alexis. "It is impossible."

"All the same, he was there and he was seen to leave the house. Leave this to me. I have been on his track now for a month past, and I have got my facts all right. Now, look here, Alex, as you are an honest man and a Christian, did Grimaud bring the stuff in that filthy pot there from the cellar of the house in Agar row?"

Alexis opened his lips as if to speak, but no sound came from them, and he signed assent by motion of the hand.

"Very well," said Billery, opening his coat and groping in his breast-pocket. "Here is some more of it. An idea came to me a month ago last night and I went down there and secured this sample. I met Grimaud a week back going in that direction, and somehow it occurred to me that he had stumbled on the same idea. Now I know how right I was. Your cousin Aloysius murdered the old man for good and sufficient reasons. You know what they were?"

Alexis signed assent again. He seemed to have resigned himself to face the horror of the accusation and he was more composed.

BURNING FOR FIVE YEARS.

Largest Candle in the World Said to Be in a Massachusetts Church.

The biggest candle in the world, nearly a foot in circumference; has a wick like that of the Oriental torch, has been burning off and on at St. George's church at masses for a period of five years and is still more than five feet tall, says the Worcester Telegram.

According to Eli Koury of 96 Wall street, the mammoth candle was presented to the parish more than five years ago by Mrs. Simon George. He says that Mrs. George presented the bundle of expensive tallow to the church after she had recovered from a severe sickness. She felt grateful for her convalescence and decided to show her appreciation to her Maker by donating the finest tallow torch in the world. Mrs. George is a tall woman, and Koury says that she decided to make the candle as tall as she was, which is close to six feet. The cost of manufacturing the candle was $25, and it is still a thing of art and beauty.

Koury went in back of the altar of St. George's church and proudly exhibited it to a reporter. The candle is so big that it looks like a portion of a trunk of a good-sized tree. Its rounded surface is covered with designs in gold leaf and silver work.

It is the pride of St. George's church and the parish estimate that it will last for at least twenty years at special masses and religious ceremonies.

In Use.

"Where's the boa constrictor forty feet long that you've got painted on the sign out in front?" demanded the visitor at the dime museum.

"This is wash day, and we're using him fo ra clothes line," explained the Circassian beauty.

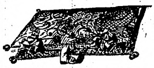
PRETTY NEW DESIGN

IT CAN BE USED ON A HANDKERCHIEF SACHET.

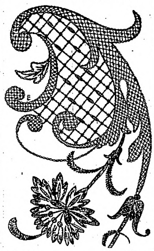
THE RULES FOR MAKING IT.

May Be Worked on Either Linen, Silk, Satin or Mercerized Cotton with Embroidery Materials Selected to Match.

Linen, silk or satin may be used for the foundation, the materials for the embroidery being selected to accord with the foundation, silk and gold tinsel thread to be used for working on silk or satin, and flax thread or mercerized thread being used on a linen foundation. The design may be traced on material by the aid of blue tracing cloth. The flower is worked in satin-stitch, the entire outline of the scroll being in chain-stitch; the space between the scroll is filled in with a lattice of silk crossed by gold tinsel, thread the ovals being cut from small Honiton braid. The filling in of the scroll is a small lattice of silk with gold beads and crosses of gold tinsel thread. If mercerized cotton is being used then French knots can take the place of the beads, and the crosses can be worked with fine gold-colored thread.



HANDKERCHIEF SACHET.



EMBROIDERY DESIGN FOR SACHET.

The material on which the embroidery is worked should be 13 inches wide and 18 inches deep, the embroidery worked on one side; it is then lined with softly wadded sateen or satin with satchet powder sprinkled in the wadding. One end is covered with the same material as is used for the wadded lining, this forms a pocket in which to put the handkerchiefs; the edges all round are finished with silk cord that is arranged in loops at the corners. Ends of ribbon are sewn to the front edge of both sides, the upper side being further ornamented with rosettes of ribbon.

The Woman in Pink Is Now the Favorite.

But Her Face and Hands Must Match Her Gowns and All Be Deep in Color.

The woman who is pink this year is the woman who will be admired

Your cheeks must be a bright pink; your flesh must be a faint pink; the palms of your hands must be a ripe pink and your lips must be cherry pink They must be so deep a pink that if they were any pinker they would be red

That is the beginning of the list of necessary pinks of the year, but there are many others.

When the up-to-date woman dresses herself she pins a bunch of pink flowers in her corsage; when she goes out she wears pink roses; when she rests in the hammock she has a bunch of pink blossoms, and for afternoons she is a dream in spicy smelling carnations. She chooses pink flowers, and all her garnitures are pink.

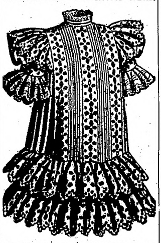
Pink is the becoming color. It is the color or backgrounds. The painter surrounds his sitter with a pinkish halo and the decorator, if he knows his business, will work a little pink into the draperies.

It may be that she is French in her tendencies, and in that case she wears a black gown with a touch of pink somewhere. Pink and black are effective. They are the kissable colors. One is pathetic, the other is tender, and the combination of the two is irresistible.

Dainty Garment for Wee Mite of Girl.

To Be Made of Nainsook with Trimming of Openwork Embroidery.

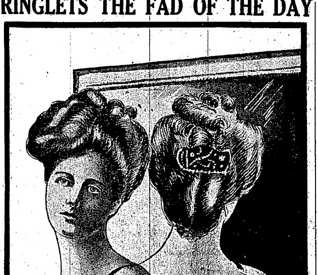
Nainsook is used for the dress, and open-work embroidery for the trimming. The fronts and backs consist of stripes of finely-tucked nainsook with openwork insertion. The sides are plain; at the lower part are two gathered flounces of embroidery put on rather full. The sleeves consist of a puff of nainsook gathered into a band of insertion, finished by a tucked frill edged with narrow embroidery. The full epaulette is of embroidery like the flounces. The neck is finished by a narrow band edged with embroidery.



DRESS FOR GIRL FROM TWO TO SIX YEARS.

Materials required: One and one-fourth yard nainsook 36 inches wide, four yards insertion, about 6 yards wide embroidery, one and three-fourths yard narrow embroidery.

RINGLETS THE FAD OF THE DAY



THE CROWN OF GLORY.

You can't have too many ringlets around your face. If it were possible I would advise all women to go back to the days when their grandmothers wore dancing curls upon the back of the head and around the ears.

Curls and little frivols of hair are so very becoming. If I had my way I would curl every woman's hair until her forehead lay a little mass of pin curls, while her ears were veiled in ringlets of the corkscrew variety pulled out into a careless abandon. Curls are delightful in any place and at any time.

If your eyes are very large you may wear your hair plain and pretty well drawn back from your face. If they are little you will need plenty of hair to help you.

The small eyed woman should wear a pompadour and she should dress her hair to look big and fluffy. She should never part it demurely nor should she draw it back plainly.

SOME GOOD DESSERTS.

Variety of Sweets Suited to Warm Days of Summer and a Japanese Fruit Ice.

For the woman with refined tastes, who is obliged to satisfy her desire for beauty and tasteful variety on a moderate income, housekeeping becomes a matter of nice balances, especially in regard to the table. Success is made possible, however, by a minute attention to details. Variety is the spice of life, and where the dull level of plain pie and pudding is varied with a delicious dessert, simplicity may be exercised in the rest of the menu, or vice versa, the elaborate dinner may have for its dessert a basket of apples or other fruit. Gelatine forms the basis of a large variety of refreshing desserts, of which I give a few:

Snow Pudding.—Dissolve half a box of gelatine in a pint of water, adding the juice of two lemons and a cupful of sugar. Bring to a boil, strain, and when partly cool, add the whites of two eggs, and beat till white. Pour into a mold, and when cold turn into a glass dish, and pour around it a custard made with the two yelks and one more egg.

Lemon Foam.—Soak half a box of gelatine in enough cold water to cover for two hours. Squeeze four lemons, and mix the strained juice with a large cupful of sugar. Beat the yelks of four eggs thoroughly. Add water enough to the yelks to make a pint, and cook with the lemons and sugar in double boiler till it thickens. Strain into a bowl, and when cool, but not stiff, add the whites of the eggs, and beat steadily till it begins to set. Heap irregularly in a glass dish.

Princess Pudding.—One pint of fine bread crumbs, one cupful of sugar, one quart of milk, the beaten yelks of four eggs, the grated rind of a lemon, a piece of butter the size of an egg. Bake until done, but not watery. Whip the whites of the egg stiff, to which add a cupful of sugar into which has been strained the juice of a lemon. Spread pieces of jelly over the pudding, add the beaten whites, and put into the oven to brown. To be eaten cold.

Raisin Pie.—Simmer three-quarters of a pound of raisins in half a pint of water. When cool, mix with an egg, a dash of lemon, a little sugar and a cupful of rolled cracker crumbs. Bake in two crusts.

Lemon Pie.—Have crust for pie baked. When cool, put into it the following mixture, made of two eggs, one teacupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one cupful of boiling water and one lemon. Put grated rind and juice of lemon, butter, sugar and boiling water together in a vessel, and let come to a boil. Beat yelks and cornstarch, and pour into the boiling mixture. When baked, add beaten whites, and brown.

Chocolate Pudding—Butter the size of an egg, half a cupful of sugar, the whites of four eggs, a cupful of rolled cracker crumbs, half a cake of grated chocolate. Flavor with vanilla, and boil in a mold for one hour.

Japanese Fruit Ice.—Make a pint of syrup, of sugar and a little water, by boiling until a little dropped into cold water will form a soft ball. Pour hot over the beaten whites of two eggs, and beat again until white. Mix with a quart of berries or the juice and rind of six lemons, and freeze.—Country Gentleman.

COOL HOME-MADE DRINKS.

Iced Coffee and Tea Nectar Refreshing, as Also Strawberry and Angel Frappes.

Iced Coffee.—Make two pints of good, strong coffee, and clear it with the beaten white and shell of an egg. Strain, sweeten and let it get cold. Add the juice of one lemon and set the mixture in ice for an hour. Serve in cups or claret glasses with a little whiped cream on top.

Tea Nectar.—Draw one and a half pints of strong tea for three minutes and pour off into a bowl. Sweeten to taste with sugar, the juice of a lemon and a wineglassful of brandy. Ice for an hour, decorate with thin slices of lemon cut in quarters and serve in small glasses.

Strawberry Frappe.—For one quart of ripe berries use four lemons, three cupfuls of sugar and three pints of water. Crush the berries with the sugar, and let them stand an hour before adding the juice of the lemons and the water. Mix well, pour into a freezer and stir for 15 or 20 minutes. Pack in ice for an hour or two and serve in glasses with or without whipped cream on top.

Melon Sherbet.—Boil one pint of water with half a pound of sugar for 20 minutes, then stir in a little gelatin melted in cold water. Add the strained juice of two lemons, half a pint of melon juice and then the beaten whites of two eggs. Whisk all together and partially freeze.

Angel Frappe.—Dip half a pound of lump sugar in the strained juice of some white currants and boil them to the "thread" point. Beat the whites of two eggs till stiff, then pour on the sugar and continue beating. Whip a pint of double cream, add a quarter of a pint of currant juice, mix all quickly together and freeze without stirring until nearly solid. Serve in tall glasses with a few white currants in the bottom of each.

Washing Bamboo.

Bamboo is improved by an occasional wash with cold water, but should be thoroughly dried afterwards.

To Keep Silver Bright.

An easy way to keep the silver bright is to immerse in sour milk for a time. Wash and polish.

HIS ONE WEAK SPOT.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way, I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored, the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"Mamma ,I want to see papa."

"No, dear," her mother replied; "your father is busy and must not be disturbed."

"But, mamma," the child persisted "I want to see him."

As before, the mother replied: "No; your father must not be disturbed."

"Mamma," declared her daughter, solemnly, "I am a sick woman, and I want to see my minister."

Precocious.

Speaker Cannon, on his seventieth birthday, referred in a jocular way to the precocity of th etwentieth century child.

"Why, before long," he said, "we shall hear of the baby that has just been weaned, turning to its nurse and saying:

"'I have had every reason to be satisfied with your past services, and shall not fail to recommend you among my acquaintances. Pray accept this dollar for yourself.'"

TOO BIG A FIELD.

Extinguisher Only Designed for Earthly Use.

Years ago, while Rev. Mr. Standaloupe was a student at the seminary, he undertook, one vacation season, to sell fire extinguishers.

His pleasing address and affability enabled him to make many sales. However, he encountered the usual rebuffs which are the experience of all agents.

The theological student had gained access into the office of a surly broker, and forthwith began expatiating on the deluging powers of his incomparable fire extinguisher.

"To hell with it!" roared the broker, fiendishly.

"Oh, my dear man," expostulated Standaloupe, "this extinguisher does not deserve the extreme virtue with which you credit it." —Harper's Weekly.

DIDN'T BELIEVE

That Coffee Was the Real Trouble.

Some people flounder around and take everything that's recommended but finally find that coffee is the real cause of their troubles. An Oregon man says:

"For 25 years I was troubled with my stomach. I was a steady coffee drinker, but didn't suspect that as the cause. I took almost anything which some one else had been cured with but to no good. I was very bad last summer and could not work at times.

"On Dec. 2, 1902, I was taken so bad the doctor said I could not live over 24 hours at the most, and I made all preparations to die. I could hardly eat anything, everything distressed me, and I was weak and sick all over. When in that condition coffee was abandoned and I was put on Postum; the change in my feelings came quickly after the drink that was poisoning me was removed.

"The pain and sickness fell away from me and I began to get well day by day, so I stuck to it until now I am well and strong again, can eat heartily, with no headache, heart trouble or the awful sickness of the old coffee days. I drink all I wish of Postum without any harm and enjoy it immensely.

"This seems like a strong story, but I would refer you to the First Nat'l Bank, the Trust Banking Company, or any merchant of Grant's Pass, Ore., in regard to my standing and I will send a sworn statement of this if you wish. You can also use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Still there are many who persistently fool themselves by saying "Coffee don't hurt me." A ten days' trial of Postum in its place will tell the truth and many times save life. "There's a reason."

A Cow in a Mining Camp

By Philip Merrill Mighels.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Hubbard, standing at the opening of his mine, saw a miniature whirlwind whisk a hat from the sage brush below on the hill. Immediately thereafter a young woman arose from a rock where she had been sitting to chase after her property. Laughing aloud, the miner ran down the hill and caught the hat.

"Well, I swear, I didn't know you was anywheres about, Georgie," he panted; "but I seen the whirlwind steal this, and here I come."

She coiled her hair on her head. It was wavy hair, brown where it started from the scalp, but golden for its greater length. "Where was you?" she answered. "I didn't see nobody."

"I was up to the claim," said he. "Was you resting here in the brush?"

"I was trying to be alone."

"Huh!" said he, "and I was yearning to see your pretty face."

She tossed her head impatiently. "Well, don't stand there till you take root and grow!" she snapped. "I've got to get back to camp before it's night."

They started westward in the brush, she with feverish haste.

They saw a swarthy man approaching. He spat away a cigarette, and showed his contempt as he gazed on the work-dusty form of the girl's companion.

"Well, Georgie," he slowly drawled, "haven't you shook him yet? I should think he'd know that he's a rank sucker. Ain't he dropped to your work?"

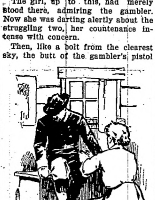
The miner's face was crimson as he confronted the sneering newcomer. "Look here, Charlie Dow, my fine gambler," said he, in a growl, "you're making undecent remarks about a lady which has promised to be my wife. I see you've got your gun on, but I ain't. You'll set it on the dump, if you're a man, for I'm going to give you a thumping."

"Chop off, will you!" said the gambler. "You ain't worth fighting. You're a squeezed lemon. Do you want to know where your last little bar of bullion went, which you gave to Georgie? Look at that."

He had hardly flashed the small billet of metal before the miner leaped upon him. The gambler jumped and attempted to draw his revolver; but the hand of Hubbard was there ahead, and flung it away.

The girl, up to this, had merely stood there, admiring the gambler. Now she was darting alertly about the struggling two, her countenance intense with concern.

Then, like a bolt from the clearest sky, the butt of the gambler's pistol suddenly descended on the back of Hubbard's head. The girl had dealt him a powerful blow. He dropped on his face. The gambler fell only to his hands and was quickly on his feet. He darted at once to the prostrate form.



HE FELT HIMSELF DIZZY, INTOXICATED.

"No, no!" cried the girl, shuddering. "Hurry up—git away!" She grasped Dow's hand in her own and dragged to get him off the dump. In the twilight the two hastened together over the trail to Thompson's Bar.

When Hubbard opened his eyes, the moon was shining coldly on the hills. The air was keen with frost. He arose stiffly and rubbed at a swollen spot on his head. He staggered as he dusted his hat and tried to think. Then he made his way down the slope to a cabin at the edge of Bullion Hill Camp.

The chinks of the cabin appeared to let in all the chill of the wind, except on the northern side, where the snow had plastered all the logs with a six-inch coating of ice.

Now and again on the puffs of wind came a mooing sound, fraught with suffering. Hubbard, taking a lantern, fought his way through the storm to a shed a hundred yards to the west. A bellow louder than any before came on the wind.

His light was reflected from four bright points, two the wild eyes of a trembling cow, and two more the new optics of a tiny flop-eared calf. The mother creature lay upon the ground, bellowing eagerly, a pencil of snow across her back, flung from a gaping chink in the boarding.

Hubbard hung the lantern on a nail. Then he emptied a number of ore sacks to blanket the freezing creatures. He lifted the calf near the mother's nose, and otherwise labored for the lives and comfort of both. He was back and forth from the cabin to the shed a dozen times; he poured hot drinks down the cow's throat all night. About four in the morning she died. Hubbard took the calf in his arms, covered it closely with the sacks and stumbled with it to the cabin. He placed it down before the fire and made ready for bed.

The miners came out of their bunks and stood with arms akimbo about the tiny animal, earnestly regarding its blinking eyes. One announced that they had named the calf the "Bully Boy."

The days that followed brought a storm of snow that is now famous in the annals of the Pacific slope.

The miners in the cabin hoarded milk for the little calf with jealous care, yet it was all gone by noon of the fourth day. The Bully Boy was hungry, and growing thinner on the diet.

The four men watched their Bully Boy in silence and despair. They had learned to regard it with an incredible affection. The red little body was peaked with bones and gullied with hollows, the legs were weak. On the seventh day, with fingers in the tiny creature's mouth, Hubbard carried it down to the store.

The miners there placed stroking hands upon the silken coat of the only creature ever born in Bullion Hill with a sort of awe. "Poor little Bully Boy!" was all they said.

That night, or, rather, at two o'clock in the morning, the Bully Boy, who had heretofore maintained a patient silence, gave voice to a solitary bleat. It was like a child's helpless cry:

"Mah-mah."

Hubbard dressed and went scuffling through the snow to the shed. In the cold and darkness he sat there for more than two hours, with his fingers in the mouth of the starving little creature.

"I'm going to Thompson's Bar," he said to the others in the morning, "for to fetch some milk."

"It's 20 mues over and 20 back,' said Skinny.

"I don't care if it's a hundred." He put on snowshoes and heavy clothing. Snow was falling when he started. The miners watched him going, and waved their hats as he stood for a second on the ridge of the hill.

The afternoon was well commenced at Thompson's Bar when, in answer to his knocking, the door of one of the cabins was opened to Hubbard, and a voice invited him to enter. He went in, to ask for tinned milk, beholding a woman shabbily dressed and careless in her appearance.

She ran her fingers through her golden hair, and smiled in his face. "Don't you know me, Hub?" she asked. "Am I changed so much as that?"

His face was burning hotly. "I reckon I know you, Miss Georgie," he answered in a husky voice. "I don't forget easy."

"Oh, I'm glad!" she cried, placing her hand on his arm, "for you always was my friend."

He drew away. "I reckon—I've got to be going," he faltered.

"Oh, you wouldn't go so quick?" she coaxed, gliding between him and the door. "You ain't a-going to treat me mean?"

In her eyes he saw the look that long before had made his heart thump and his brain reel. "I've got to get back to Bullion Hill to-night," he repeated doggedly.

"Oh, no!" she pleaded, touching his hand caressingly. "You are holding things against me, Hub dear, which you hadn't ought. I was terrible fascinated by Charlie Dow—you ought to know I was—and I didn't know what I was doing. You ain't a-going to hold that against a helpless girl? You're tired, Hub dear. Set down, and don't go to Bullion Hill to-night."

In his ears was the voice of Bully Boy, yet he was thrilled by the woman. She seemed more than ever warm and delicious to the cold man whose senses were clouded. He braced himself by a summoning of all his will.

"Where is he at?" he inquired.

"Who?" she said, "Charlie?—I don't know. He's went and left me—went with Spanish Mag. I didn't know what I was doing. It was you I was loving all the time." She looked in his face with eyes that blazed and dilated magnetically.

Her breath was hot against his cheek. She had drawn him slowly to a chair, and now her arms crept about his neck. She knelt at his side, her lips held daringly up to his own.

He felt himself dizzy, intoxicated. Her eyes were holding his gaze with an irresistible power. All the passion of his nature was stealing over his brain. Suddenly his look was concentrated on a locket on her breast. It was open, and in it he saw—the face of Charlie Dow.

From time to time, after dark, the miners went out to listen for Hubbard. Five o'clock and six came and passed without a sign or a sound.

Suddenly, out of the stillness of the snow came a muffled cry.

"M-a-h—m-a-h!"

They started oddly. From the drifts on the hill came an answer.

They rushed from the cabin and ran to the shed.

"Hey—little Bully Boy!"

"Here you are, little Bully Boy," they heard in a crooning voice. "Here's your old Hub—here's your fingers."

By the light of the lantern they saw Hubbard lying flat in the shed, beside the calf, his fingers in the mouth of the thin little creature.

Scattered from his arm were many tins of milk, cold and frosted.

"Well, Hub," said a miner, "I reckon you've saved his life."

"That's where you're off," said Hubbard, thoughtfully. "It was Bully Boy that saved me."

SHERBERTS AND ICES.

How the Former Originated and on the Making of Various Frozen Desserts.

Sherbet is a modern evolution of an ancient cooling drink common in the east from the days of the crusaders. Then, as now, it was iced and made from fruit juices slightly acidulated with lemon or tamarind juice and chilled with snow. By and by came European traders to the land of the rising sun, who first enjoyed sherbet au naturel. Then, enfeebled by the climate, they added alcohol to the original thirst quencher, but still drank it cold, chilled by snows. Returning north, it occurred to some wise traveler to alter the temperature ,so he added boiling water to the mixture of water, sugar, fruit juices and alcohol, producing thereby our modern "punch." The difference between a water ice and a sherbet is one of texture or body, the sherbet being thinner. Parfaits, biscuits and mousses are whipped cream with or without eggs. They are not stirred while freezing. In parfaits and biscuits the sugar and water mixture is cooked until it spins a thread, and if eggs are used the sirup is slowly beaten into the yolks or whites.

Water ices are fruit juices sweetened and frozen. When making an ice cook the sugar to a sirup before adding the fruit juice and water. The quantity of sugar must depend upon the fruit employed, whether it is sweet or acid. In making mousse a little gelatin is often added to give it body when removed from the mold, as it is frozen without stirring. A tablespoonful of granulated gelatin is used to a pint of cream. Mousse, parfaits and biscuits are always molded, usually in individual forms.

Abroad the term "ice" is applied to any frozen dessert, but in this country it usually means water ices. Ice cream is divided into two varieties—Philadelphia and Neapolitan. The ordinary (Philadelphia) ice cream is made with cream, sugar and flavoring, and the Neapolitan with custard of different degrees of richness. Both are stirred while freezing. In making Philadelphia cream scald half the cream and whip the remaining half. To freeze the cream raw gives a rough and grainy ice cream. For Neapolitan cream a boiled custard is the foundation. Be careful to scald the milk, and cook it with the yolks of the eggs first, then add the whites, beaten stiff, and cook again. When cool, add the cream, beaten stiff, and the flavoring. A good rule for custard is four eggs to one pint of milk and one pint of cream.

CARE OF REFRIGERATOR.

Soon as Anything Is Spilled, Wipe It Up, Keep Pipes Clear, and Plenty of Ice.

Essential to the proper care and use of a refrigerator are these three things: Clearing out the waste pipes, instant removal of anything spilled, and a full supply of ice. If the compartments in which the food is kept be wiped out carefully once a week, no crumbs, drops of liquid, or particles of food being left to accumulate meanwhile, there will be no need of other attention.

Once a week let the ice supply run low; then remove the ice, wash the flour under the rack upon which the ice rests, take out trap and removable drain pipe, and, with a cloth fastened to a rod or wire, clean out these with a strong solution of sal soda. Pour the same down the remainder of the waste pipe, making sure that the pipe is cleaned as far down as can be reached.

Keep the ice compartment filled with ice; a large body of ice keeps better than a small one and insures better circulation of air. Keep the doors shut. Keep milk in closed bottles or in a compartment by itself; also butter, as they quickly absorb the flavors of vegetables and other strong foods.—Chicago Tribune.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

The newest pincushion has a pert little bow on top made of ribbon to harmonize with the color of the cushion, the latter being covered and ruffled with lace.

The little Japanese girl is appearing on many of the new pillows. She and her omnipresent parasol may be had on the heavier linens, tinted and ready to be worked with silk.

Butterflies make beautiful dance favors, with their wings wide spread and sprinkled with gilt so that they glitter in the light, done in red, white or even black crepe paper and placed on the ends of wands finished in material to match.

A charming set of buttons for a lace blouse may be made of superposed frills of valenciennes lace gathered to the center and stitched to a foundation of net, with a tiny button or flat bead on the center of each to hide the join. These are, of course, not intended for "working" buttons, but only to serve for decoration.

Some of the handsomest buttons are are made in the ateliers of the dressmakers from original or imported designs. In this way the artistic gown has buttons in perfect harmony and buttons can almost make and easily mar a gown. The manufacture at home of original buttons is an easy and attractive task, the success of which depends on good eye for color, together with quick fingers and a due regard for exactitude of detail and finish.—Chicago Daily News.

SUFFICIENTLY IDENTIFIED.

She Was the Red-Headed Janitress, That Was Enough.

She walked into a branch bank on upper Broadway and pushed the check through the paying teller's window.

"You will have to be identified," said he. "I don't know you, madame."

"You don't, eh?" said the woman, with fire in her eyes. "Aren't you the father of the Smith family that has a flat in the Pileremin apartments?"

"Y-e-s."

"Well, I'm the red-headed janitress that your wife's always complaining about. When you left home this morning I heard you say: 'Emily, if our children get fighting with that old fury in the basement don't quarrel with her. Wait till I get home and let me talk to her.' Now, if you think you can get the best of an argument with——"

"Here's your money, madam," said the paying teller, and she took it and went.

Nothing Succeeds Like "EGG-O-SEE."

The man who preaches the best sermon; the man who tells the funniest stories; the man who keeps the best store; or the man who makes the best goods soon finds that people come to him. Merit is the best advertisement in the world. People speak well of things they know are good. They pass the good word along.

The best breakfast food is EGG-O-SEE, for it contains all the life-giving properties of nature's best food, which is wheat.

EGG-O-SEE is deeply in debt to the thousands of wives and mothers who use it in their homes, for these good women tell their neighbors about this great food.

Children and aged persons alike are friends of EGG-O-SEE.

Merit and common sense are the things that advertise EGG-O-SEE most. EGG-O-SEE is cheap. A 10-cent package contains ten liberal breakfasts. EGG-O-SEE is sold everywhere. Grocers must keep it if they want to keep their good customers, for good customers insist on buying EGG-O-SEE.

The fact that no preparation, no cooking is required, makes EGG-O-SEE very popular. Open the package; put as much as you like in a dish; pour on milk or cream and eat. It is delicious. It is wholesome. It makes you strong.

A lot of interesting facts about EGG-O-SEE have been published in book form entitled, "Back to Nature." This book also has a course of physical culture—fully illustrated. Anyone wishing this book will receive it free by addressing EGG-O-SEE Company, 10 First St., Quincy, Ill.

"Oh, I'm in no hurry," he replied, "but my creditors are. See?"

Tom—"What about him?"

Jack—He was sent to the insane asylum last week."

Sea Cow's Back as Marking Pad.

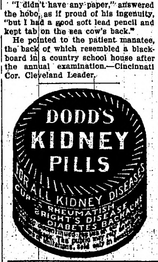
People who visited the zoo on the Fourth greatly annoyed the keeper of the sea cow, a new acquisition, by poking it with canes or pencils. Exhausted by his efforts to stop the practice, he engaged a tramp for 50 cents and told him to keep track of how many people looked at the manatee. At 6 o'clock the keeper looked up his substitute.

"There's been more than 5,000 people here," said the latter. I haven't time to reckon up the exact number yet, and won't until I audit my books."

"Where's the paper you kept your accounts on?" asked Stephen, the keeper.

"I didn't have any paper," answered the hobo, as if proud of his ingenuity, "but I had a good soft lead pencil and kept tab on the sea cow's back."

He pointed to the patient manatee, the back of which resembled a blackboard in a country school house after the annual examination.—Cincinnati Cor. Cleveland Leader.



FOUR YEARS OF AGONY.

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh—Had to Use Crutches—"Cuticura Remedies the Best on Earth."

"In the year 1899 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. At last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day, and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble. It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticuria Ointment and Soap was only $6, but the doctors' bills were more like $600. John M. Lloyd, 728 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

This Way, Diogenes!

When Jim Fisk was in his glory as a railroad magnate one day he was greatly annoyed by people asking for passes over his road for all sorts of reasons. He was well worked up, when a seedy looking individual asked for a pass, and asked sharply: "On what grounds do you ask for a pass?"

The applicant replied. "Because I do not want to pay my fare."

Fisk called a clerk and said to him: "Give this man a pass for anywhere and return. He is the first man that has told the truth to-day."

In the matter of the petition of Chas. Johnson, Felix Anderson and others for County Ditch No. 27 in the County of Red Lake, state of Minnesota:

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
County of Red Lake. }

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 29th day of May, A. D., 1906, signed by Chas. Johnson, C. Moren, Swen Johnson, Nick Eckstein, Ernest Schneider, Felix Anderson, Albert Anderson, Adolph Anderson and Wm. Landman praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county designated and numbered by the county auditor as County Ditch No. 27, the route of which is more fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the county auditor of said county; and said county auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county commissioners of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit: J. K. Wood, to make a survey of said ditch.

Now, Therefore, We, the Board of County Commissioners of said county, at a regular session held this day, do hereby appoint Robert A. Lee, Carl Johnson and Fred Zaiser, three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers; and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place for the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the county auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with the county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting.

In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefited or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefited or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any watercourse, and the location and value of such added land; the damage if any to any riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or travelled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and any other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said entire ditch, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not in their opinion, the estimated expenses of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and, if so stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905.

Farmers Must Take Advantage of Fine Weather—Storms Coming.

The forcast of Hicks for the month of August is one of the continual storms. He predicts storm periods during pratically all of the mouth. His forcasts are as follows:

Regular storm period between 7th and 12th, central on 9th and culminating from 7th to 11th, Greatly increased temperature and falling barometer. Black, blustering clouds, thunder and nigh winds, with possibly cloudbursts in scattering localities. Reactionary storms on the 15th, 16th, and 17th, rising barometer and respite from heat.

Regular storm period 19th to 23rd Indications point to heaviest and most general storms in August during and next Sunday, 19th to 23rd with crises on 20th and 21st. These dates are to be center of seismic period, hence maximum earthquake tendencies centering on or about 19th. The best outlook for rains over the great grain belts and other sections is during this period. Reasonable care should be taken against violent hail storms. Phenomenally high barometer may follow, northwesterly gales and unreasonable change to cooler, with frosts along the northern tier of states.

Reactionary storm period central on 25th, 26th and 27th and from 25th to 28th will culminate in high temperature, low barometer, cloudiness and more or less storms and rain over the county in general, the month proximately to end, with fair and cooler weather. The rainfall for the month promises to be hurtfully below the average.

Roof Leases.

The World To-Day magazine advises all persons who wish to invest money, to lease the roofs of the large buildings in their cities. These can be used for green houses, chicken farms, sun-bath parlors, hospitals in fact, for anything in which plenty of air and sunlight is needed. They have the advantage of central location and can usually be had at a low rent. A light sun-bath parlor would make a fine adjunct to any apartment house, hotel, or have a home of your own, you should drink golden grain belt beer at every meal. SOME REAL NOVELTIES

The Twin City Amusement Park's G. A. R. Week Attractions.

Those who visit during the G, A. R. national encampment and want to see something worth the while can find it at Wonderland, the big Twin City amusement park, which has over fifty amusement features in its "ten acres of fun for ten cents."

Aside from shooting the chutes riding on a scenic railway, taking the third degree, etc, there are some real novelties. One of these is the infant incubator institute, where by means of an artificial mother the lives of fully eighty-five per cent of immaturely born babies that otherwise must die are saved. Some of these babies weigh but two pounds when received, and are nursed to full development and health.

Then there is the Johnstown Flood, a realistic reproduction in miniature of that awful disaster, which has been a leading feature at several world's fairs. The Knabenshue air ship gives daily flights at the park, and the great centrifugal cycle sensation, "Globing the Giobe" is another special attraction.

Our Old Kentucky Home.

The public is always willing to patronize any good attraction and in this day of quick spreading news it is no easy matter to palm off an inferior play expecting the capacity of the theatre to be tested, and rob the people of their money. In order to to take away the least shadow of a doubt, the management of "Our Old Kentucky Home" offer this guarantee, to any one, that after seeing two acts of the play the privilege to have their money refunded if not satisfied. We test the capacity of theatres by honest dealing and by giving the people their moneys worth. You will enjoy the play, the music the specialties. All. At the Opera House Thursday, Aug. 16.

PLAY THE INDIANS TO A STANDSTILL

Local Ball Tossers Get onto the Trail of "Challengers of the World."

An Error by the Scorekeeper Ends the Game in Ninth Inning, 8 to 8.

By a mistake in assignments the sporting editor of the Courier was attending a church meeting Monday afternoon and the society reporter was the only available person about the office to cover the ball game between the Sioux Indians and the home team. This is what she saw:

"Do you know I never went to a ball game before in my life, no, not in my whole life and I felt perfectly foolish to think of going out there among all those men, especially when I had heard they sometimes get exsited over some play or even get cross with the man in civilians clothes who stands out in the center and say some awfully horrid things. But then I made up my mind not to care for I know reporting is not always pleasant and then, too, I saw some of the Indian boys down town in the morning and I thot they were perfectly splendid. One of them had such beautiful feathers in his hat that I couldn't help but think lady Indians, where they come from, must dress awfully stylishly. Oh, jolly, here I am rattling along and forgetting all about the game. Anyway I was very much surprised when I got out to the grounds. I was so surprised to find ever so many ladies there. I didn't know they ever went to ball games but Mrs. Brown told me she hadn't missed a game this summer. Isn't that funny, and she is such a dear, too. Do you know we had just gotten nicely seated where we could see everybody who came in, when Mrs. Jones—mother of the Joneses boys, who came in from their mill just to see the game, and she had the lovliest box of chocolates, I ate so many of them that I thot surely I would make myself sick. Then I began to wish I had brought sister Maude with me, even tho I was feelso ashamed of myself for not having put on my newest gown because all the other ladies were all dressed up in their white frocks. About that time someone,—now isn,t it provoking, I have actually forgotten his name and he was such a nice looking man,-walked right out in front and called out to the grand stand. I think he said something like, "play ball," but Mrs. Brown was telling me how she was going to have her newest skirt cut so I wasn't paying much attention to him. Anyway it sounded perfectly silly of him, for everybody must have known it was a ball game but it didn't seem to make a bit of difference to him, he just staid right there and I really don't believe any of the players made a move without his having something to say about it. Some people never do know enough to stop talking. Now there was Gertie Russel sitting right in front of me and she just talked all the lime. It attracted the attention of all the gentlemen around and I am sure they were ever so much more interested in the game. Anyway, I neyer did understand what the men could see in her, she's a perfect dowd and she had on one of those peek-a-boo waists, too, it was disgusting and if I hadn't been so interested in the game I certainly should have done something to keep her from distracting the attention of all the men in our part of the grandstand. I was just dying to tell dear Mrs. Brown what I thot of the whole proceeding but I was afraid some of the men might think I was jealous of Gertie. The very idea. I was just going to move away when some of the Indian gentlemen got into a dispute with the scorekeeper and one of them said "well you needn't cry about it" and everybody laughed but he was right for he looked so handsome in his yellow shooting jacket. After that I didn't see much of the game as Mrs. Brown was telling me all about her visit in St. Paul and all about her latest grandchild. I am sure it must be an awfully sweet baby. I was just going to ask how old it was, when somebody said something about Harry Healy running home. At first I thought the Indians had frightened him some way but everybody was clapping their hands and pretty soon they all got up to leave. It was a perfectly lovely game and the next time they have one I am going to take sister Maude and go early so we can have a nice long talk before the game begins."

For the edification of those who like to know what the exact score was the editor would add that owing to the mistake of the scorekeeper who announced a 9 to 8 score in favor of the Indians, the game was concluded in the ninth inning but when he came to look over the score later he found it had been a tie, 8 to 8, but the Indians had gone and it had to stand at that, tho the Indians seemed to have known it and weren't at all anxious to play it out. The score by innings.

INSURANCE TRUST GRAFT

Some Figures From Insurance Commissioner's Office.

The country towns are getting the worst of it on the fire insurance proposition. During the year 1905 the people of the incorporated towns of Minnesota paid $4,978,481.80 for fire protection and received for fire losses only $2,259,671.39—about 40 per cent. of the amount paid in premiums. If the last year had been exceptional there might be some justification for the exorbitant rates charged by the insurance trust, but statistics show that the companies have never returned more than 62 per cent. of the premiums, and the average for ten years is 49 per cent. In 1903 the ratio of losses to premiums was 37 per cent; in 1902 41 per cent. An average of ten years ought to be fair for the country towns of Minnesota. There is no danger of a fire calamaty that would effect the general average of losses seriously. In all the history of fire insurance the general average throughout the United States as the related to the country towns has been about the same. During the year 1905 the statistics for the towns of this vicinity give the following ratio of losses to premiums:

	Premiums	Losses
Ada	$ 9,027.46	$ 291.21
Argyle	4,465.83	53 26
Bagley	4,229.31	1,346.00
Bemidji	24,216.80	10,949.91
Blackduck	3,098.75	425.00
Crookston	37,125.78	2,875.60
E. Grand Forks.	28,326.87	4,607.71
Fertile	2,840,00	*
Fisher	1,303.64	*
Fosston	5,799.32	5,074.44
Hallock	8,924.40	877.00
McIntosh	3,013.37	2,102.82
Moorhead	25,792.66	5,133.56
Roseau	2,408.56	575.00
Red Lake Falls.	8,718.74	5.760.41
St. Hilaire	4,638.26	56.80
Stephen	4,311.89	40.60
Thief River Fals	19,526.11	3,412.15
Twin Valley	2,780.03	*
Ulen	3,035.67	*
Warren	8,602.40	1,278.64

*No loss.

There could be no better evidence than the list presented above that the towns and villages of southern Minnesota are paying exorbitant fire insurance rates. In no town given does the loss exceed the amount of premium, and the average ratio of losses to premiums is less than 25 per cent. It would seem that the legislature—if we can ever get one that is free from the taint of corporation control—should investigate the matter of insurance rates and give the people the relief to which they are entitled. We have been robbed long enough.

INSPECTING FARMS J. J. HILL CONTEST

Red Lake County Farms Compare Favorably with Any in the Northwest.

Inspectors Learn Something New in Weed Extermination in Terrebonne.

"We have had a treat today," said T. A. Hoverstad one of the inspectors in the J. J. Hill farm contest. Mr. Hoverstad and Thomas Shaw had spent the day, Tuesday, at the farm of Joe Laurent in Terrebonne and were taking the train from the city when Mr. Holverstad made that remark. Interrogated further, he said the treat consisted in seeing one of the finest farms they had so far inspected and had learned something new in the way eradicatin of weeds. Mr. Laurent was sowa mixture of barley and buckwheat. It was the first time they had ever heard of the plan but there were many evidences of its effectiveness and the farm was a remarkably clean one. Asked how Red Lake county farms compared with other parts of the state, Mr. Hoverstad said the comparsion must be favorable with anything they had seen. "I wish you would tell your readers," said Mr. Shaw, that in this particular part of the state, clover should be planted for there is money in it." "I have been at one farm," he continued, "where, from a sowing of four bushels to the acre, a profit of $25 an acre was taken off."

AT ST. HILAIRE.

Spectator: T. A. Hoverstad, of Dennison, formerly superintendent of the state experimental farm at Crookston was a visitor here last Thursday. Mr. Hoverstad is one of the judges in the James J. Hill farm contest and has spent the past two months inspecting farmers in Minnesota and North and South Dakato who have entered the contest.

Mr. Hoverstad informs us that about one hundred farmers in the three states have qualfied in the contest and that Peter Englestad and Norman E. Beebe, both of Rocksbury, have entered. Mr. Hoverstad inspected their farms on Thursday and made the Spectator a call when he informed us that in all his travels he had seen more and better red clover in this part of Red Lake county than in any place in the three states,

"If your farmers keep on the way they have been going for the past few years, it will not be long before it will take a rich man to buy one of your farms," said Mr. Hoverstad in parting.

AN INJUNCTION ISSUES

Thief River Falls Parties Can't Agree on Carnival Location.

Court Commissioner Toupin issued a restraining order yesterday and order to show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue in an action entitled Sam Cheely, G. G. Williams, A. A. Sweass and John Rogers against the C. I. Cash Carnival company.

The complaint alleges that the Carnival company is obstructing certain streets in Thief River Falls with tents and performances and that such streets are business streets, which interferes with traffic and constitutes a nuisance. The order was served yesterday and it is made returnable Friday.

It is understood the affair is a matter of jealousy among the saloonkeepers of Thief River Falls over favoritism of location and the order issued with the return day fixed, carries the matter over the time that the Carnival will be in Thief River Falls. The streets sought to be used by the Cash people are First, Second, and LaBree Ave. They will not be used.

G. A. R. Encampment.

For this event the Northern Pacific will sell round trip tickets to Minneapolis for $5.90. Dates of sale Aug. 11 to 14, return limit Aug. 31 with privilege of extension.

SIGN FOR STRIKE GIVEN ALL RUSSIA

ST. PETERSBURG WORKERS QUIT AT ONCE—GENERAL TIE-UP MONDAY.

FIRST STEP TO DICTATORSHIP

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS TO BE GIVEN CHIEF COMMAND OF ALL TROOPS.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 5.—St. Petersburg was in darkness last night. The employes of the electric lighting plants, always the earliest barometric record of political conditions, ceased work during the afternoon in obedience to the call for a general strike which was issued yesterday. This call already has been obeyed by 2,000 factory hands in the capital. It will be impossible, however, to predict the success of this universal political strike until Monday, as the workmen in St. Petersburg and the provinces have two holidays—Saturday, which is the fete day of the dowager empress and a great religious feast, and their regular holiday of Sunday.

Railroad Men Hold Back.

The other available index to the situation are the railways. Up to 2 o'clock this morning the railway men had not heeded the call for a general strike, except in the case of an insignificant bobtail line running to Sestroretzk and other shore resorts in the vicinity of St. Petersburg.

In the meantime the fate of the Stolypin cabinet sways in the balance, and Russia is on the verge of disorders which may lead to the reign of the military or the proletariat. It can be stated definitely that the first step toward a dictatorship may be taken Saturday or Monday by the nomination of Grand Duke Nicholas to the chief command of all the troops in Russia.

Practically Dictator.

This would virtually place him in control of all the disturbed districts of the empire. where martial law has been proclaimed.

This matter was a subject of earnest discussion during the interview between the emperor and Premier Stolypin yesterday, from which the premier returned in a greatly vexed state of mind. The revolutions at Sveaborg and Cronstadt and the mutiny on board the cruiser Pamyat Azova gave the tone to the conversation between his majesty and the premier. These events, although they have all ended fortunately, apparently have left a strong impression upon the mind of the emperor.

Premier Doesn't Like It.

The Associated Press has been informed from a high source that the nomination of Grand Duke Nicholas to the post of commander-in-chief, if made, will be announced as "for the purpose of harmonizing the activity of all troops, without reference to political affairs," but Premier Stolypin is scarcely disposed to regard the nomination in this high light.

One element of possible disorder for to-morrow has been removed by the decision of the widow of M. Herzenstein, the ex-deputy who was murdered at Terioki, to inter her husband at Terioki and to omit the services here and at Moscow.

Business Is Suspended.

Pickets of cavalry were the most conspicuous figures on the streets of St. Petersburg last night. Business houses generally have boarded up their windows, as they did in the great October strike. Practically all of the street cars have stopped running, and the cab drivers are threatening to cease work.

A dispatch to the Associated Press from Sestroretzk says that heavy reinforcements are being poured into that suburb, evidently in fear of an attack upon the government small arm factory.

Mutineers Will Be Tried.

It was announced at the admiralty that the drumhead court-martial proceedings at Cronstadt probably would be suspended witht the execution of the seven ringleaders who were condemned to death Thursday. The other mutineers will be subjected to trial by the regular court-martial, which will be suspended with the execution of lays.

It has now been ascertained that the death list on the Pamyat Azova included Capt. Sosinsky, two lieutenants, the chief engineer and the junior engineer, the surgeon, midshipmen and the chief petty officer. About fifty sailors were killed or wounded.

Mutiny on Bogatyr.

An incipient mutiny broke out yesterday on the Russian cruiser Bogatyr. It was immediately put down with the arrest of two hundred sailors.

Among the agitators the police are looking for are two ex-deputies.

Moscow Guards Grumble.

After the train on which the two men attempted to escape was surrounded, and during the search, a stranger started to run. On refusing to heed a call to stop he was shot down. One of the robbers shot at the officers, but missed them. The two prisoners were identified by Miss Jones and Roland.

GREELEY GIVEN COMMAND.

Will Succeed Corbin in Northern Division at St. Louis.

Washington, Aug. 5.—Orders were issued by the department yesterday assigning Maj. Gen. A. W. Greeley to the command of the Northern division, with headquarters at St. Louis, to take effect Sept. 16. MacArthur in India. MacArthur is expected to resume his command immediately; Gen. MacArthur probably will succeed Corbin as lieutenant general and continue to command the Pacific division.

ROGICH VOWS HE'LL GET EVEN

MAN HURT AT CAMERON DAM WANTS REVENGE ON MEN WHO DESERTED HIM.

GRAF SAYS HE CAN GET DIETZ

TELLS OF FORMER VISIT—DIETZ DECLARES HE WILL FIGHT TO FINISH.

Hayward, Wis., Aug. 5.—A sequel to the affair in which John Rogich, the Milwaukee man who was shot by John Dietz and his son Leslie, and who was left wounded in the woods by his frightened companions, may be enacted in Milwaukee when he returns to that city. He declares that he intends to even up scores with the men who induced him to become a member of the the sheriff's posse and then deserted him when he was injured and helpless.

Physicians state that something in addition to the medical attention he is receiving is responsible for his remarkable recovery, and they attribute this to the single purpose which held him up through his terrible experience in the woods—that of once more meeting his comrades.

Says He Can Get Dietz.

Milwaukee, Aug. 5.—A second party from Milwaukee may attempt to drag John Dietz, the fighting man at Cameron dam, from his stronghold. R. T. Graf, former policeman and at present a private detective, has announced his intention of organizing a posse here and attempting to accomplish the thing which hitherto has resulted in dismal failures.

"I am convinced that I can capture Dietz," he stated. "In 1905, when I went to the Thornapple river with seven deputies from Milwaukee and a number of detectives from Chicago, we were near his house for two days and could have taken him without difficulty on several different occasions.

Tells of Former Visit.

"Our instructions had been to wait at Cameron dam for further orders before making a move, however. When our orders finally came we were told to leave without making any attempt to arrest our man.

"The expenses of this expedition was paid by the United States marshal at Madison, and it was he who told us to withdraw when we were so near success. I have never known what the reason was. If I go after him again I will be armed with a warrant charging him and his sons with assault with intent to murder."

Will Defend Himself.

Winter, Wis., Aug. 4.—John F. Dietz, the farmer, is a peaceable man; John F. Dietz, the defender of Cameron dam, is a fighter, and he declared that he would fight to the finish. In an interview on the present situation Mr. Dietz said:

"Reports in the newspapers put me up as an outlaw, a fugitive and a murderer. It should not cause the public to have nervous prostration, however, to read that Dietz has killed whole armies. But rest assured that I will harm no one except in the necessary defense of myself, family or property, and that would be justifiable, for self-preservation is the first law of nature.

"Bear in mind that if anybody has trouble with me it is because they come here with that purpose in view.

Armed With the Right.

"I may possibly have violated some of man's laws, for they are so complicated that it is sometimes very difficult to discern what is lawful or unlawful, but I am satisfied that I hav not violated any of God's laws, for m conscience has been the rule and guide of my conduct in all transactions in this case. Armed with the right, with my family and God on my side, I feel that I am stronger than a multitude of corporation tyrants and all the thugs at their command."

HARVEST HANDS ARE NEEDED

RAILWAYS ARE OFFERING INDUCEMENTS TO SECURE LABORERS.

St. Paul, Aug. 5.—The railroads are making as diligent efforts to procure harvest hands as are the farmers. Besides granting unusually cheap rates to points in Minnesota and North Dakota, the roads are pursuing an extensive advertising campaign in all sections of the country. Harvesting has begun in earnest at some points, and there is a perceptible movement of men to the fields, but it will have to increase considerably before the supply will come up to the demand.

Harvest hand rates are in effect and will continue until Aug. 31. The three Northern lines have agreed on a $6.50 rate to most points in Minnesota and North Dakota, but rates are slightly more to furthest points. The cheap rates are granted where there are five or more in a party. Wages are exceptionally high, ranging from $1.75 to $3.50 per day. Harvest begins from Aug. 1 to 20.

The Soo line reports that 12,665 men are needed at points along its system in North Dakota and Minnesota. The Great Northern estimates that about 14,000 are needed along its lines in Minnesota and North Dakota, and the Northern Pacific reports about the same number needed in its territory.

NEW RATES WOULD NOT HELP FARMERS

PROPOSED SCHEDULE FOR THE BENEFIT OF STOREKEEPER OPPOSED BY RAILROADS.

J. J. HILL IS NOT SALARIED

HEARING BEFORE RAILROAD COMMISSION BRINGS OUT THE POLICY OF RAILROADS.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—The hearing before the railroad and warehouse commission on the proposed reduction in rates on certain classes of freight was resumed last Monday and during the four days of its continuance it was fairly established that what was going on was a contest between the farmers on the one hand and the country storekeepers on the other—and the situation was made the more striking by the fact that the representatives of the railroads contended for the interests of the farmers. The question before the commission is whether the rates on local package freight shall be reduced in accordance with a schedule that has been prepared. The proposed schedule is wholly in the interest of the storekeeper. If it is adopted the country merchant will be relieved of freight charges that may approximate $1,000,000 a year, but which will be distributed over an infinite number of small articles the prices of which will remain the same so far as the consumer is concerned. But, it wns concluded from the testimony of the railroad men, the loss of this amount of revenue would prevent the roads from the carrying out of the policy they practice of reducing, whenever practicable, the rates on grain and fuel—a policy that is persevered in because it promotes the prosperity of the farmers and tends to the ultimate increase of the amount of this class of freight carried. Incidentally it was shown that the proposed reduction, which would go into the pockets of the storekeepers in small amounts, would deprive the state of the revenue now accruing from tax on the gross earnings that would be wiped out. The evidence was conclusive that the railroads would suffer to the extent of about a million dollars a year; the state would suffer a loss of about forty thousand dollars a year in gross earnings tax; the farmer would be deprived of the benefits that would come directly from getting a higher price for his products by just so much as the probable reduction of the cost of carrying his produce to market. The sole beneficiary of the new rate would be the storekeeper.

All of these facts were adduced from the evidence of the witnesses examined and so conclusive was the testimony that at its close James Manahan, who has been conducting the case in the interest of the Hastings and other storekeepers, asked for an order from the commission for an examination of the books and records of the Great Northern Railway company, from which the statements of fact given by Vice President R. I. Farrington were drawn. Incident to the discussion that followed Mr. Manahan's request the latter caused a sensation by casting an aspersion upon the memory of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis. Manahan is from Nebraska, a newcomer in Minnesota, and is said to be slated for the Democratic nomination for attorney general. C. A. Severance of the firm of Davis, Kellogg and Severance, opposed Manahan at the hearing. In attacking the opposing counsel Mr. Manahan said:

Attacks Memory of Davis.

"I was not born rich, I did not marry money, but I will place my standing at the bar alongside of that of a firm of attorneys of which the junior member is here representing the railroads, the second member is making a pretense of attacking the Standard Oil company and the gentleman whose name is still at the head of the firm is representing the interests elsewhere of his old friends Russell Sage and Jay Gould."

The attack on the memory of Senator Davis met with a stern rebuke from Chairman Mills of the commission, and Manahan withdrew his remarks so far as they applied to the dead senator. An order was made for the production of the records.

Benjamin Campbell, fourth vice president of the Great Northern, was the first witness. He showed that the rates on grain for distances of from twenty-five to 400 miles into Minneapolis on the Great Northern were lower than for similar distances in other states. For instance, the rate to Minneapolis for the minimum distance was 4½ cents, while the rate for the same distance into Omaha was 8 cents and into Kansas City 6 cents. He also demonstrated that Iowa rates on grain into Chicago are from 113 to 123 per cent higher than the Great Northern rate from Minnesota points to Chicago the mileage being the same. His evidence went to prove the general policy of the road to make the lowest possible rate in carrying the products of the soil to market.

E. L. Patterson of Mankato criticised the proposed schedules for discriminating in favor of Winona and the Twin Cities as against his town. W. H. Davis and E. L. Englin alleged discrimination in local freight rates in favor of Minneapolis as against Stillwater. L. Sargent of Stillwater opposed a change of rates to the mileage basis, and W. H. Caldwell stood with him.

J. J. Hill Gets No Salary.

The testimony of Second Vice President Farrington of the Great Northern was exhaustive and convincing. He went into the whole matter of the cost of operation and maintenance of railroads; he showed that the gross and net earnings on local freight—which is in issue—had steadily decreased for ten years. He contended—and brought figures to support his contention—that local freight rates were too low now for the good of the railroads and the community at large. And, when Mr. Manahan became inquisitive as to the disposition of the revenues of the Great Northern, insinuating that great profits were made and exorbitant salaries paid to eat up the earnings, Mr. Farrington caused a sudden abandonment of the line of questioning by saying that James J. Hill had made it a rule to pay no dividend of more than 7 per cent per annum on the stock, and that as president of the company he was paid no salary whatever.

Mr. Farrington opened his testimony with an analysis of the conditions which reduced the ton mileage of local freight on the Great Northern in spite of the apparent prosperity of the state. He showed that in no one year since 1896, when the average number of tons of local freight hauled per mile of road was 174,613 tons, has the average tonnage per mile of road equalled that number. The nearest approach to 1896 was in 1902 when the amount was 93.20 per cent of the former year. The average earnings per mile of road operated in the state of Minnesota in 1905 was 92.24 per cent of the earnings on similar freight in 1896. He cited the figures to show that the decrease was general. Citing an array of figures showing a falling off in earnings per mile of road operated in the state Mr. Farrington said:

"It really seems that the more road we build in the state the less our earnings per mile of road are."

Sweeping Reductions Made.

Asked how he accounted for the apparent fact that the revenues of the road had fallen off a greater percentage than the tonnage, Mr. Farrington said the disparity was caused by reductions of rates on local business. He could not list all of the reductions that had been made, but he recalled a reduction made Jan. 25, 1902, of fifteen per cent on terminal class rates covering merchandise between points in Minnesota and North and South Dakota. He showed that by other reductions the class rates now in effect between St. Paul, Minnesota Transfer and Minneapolis and Minnesota points are over fourteen per cent lower than in 1896 and that the distance class rates are now ten per cent less than they were in the year named. The lumber rates from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and Superior are more than 16 per cent lower than they were ten years ago. Reductions on coal rates made the present rate from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and Superior to Minnesota points, on soft coal, 18 per cent and on hard coal over 20 per cent less than ten years ago.

The witness showed that even more sweeping reductions had been made on grain rates. He proved by actual computation that the rates on grain from Minnesota points to Minneapolis, Duluth and Superior had been reduced in ten years 21 per cent.

"These reductions in grain, coal and lumber rates have all affected the farmers," said Mr. Farrington. "Where the rate on grain has been reduced the farmer has received just that much more for his grain. The rates which it is now proposed to reduce will not benefit anybody but the country storekeeper. The farmer will have to pay just exactly as much for what he buys from the country storekeeper."

Road Creates Business.

Referring to the increase in cost of operation, Mr. Farrington quoted from tables showing the comparative cost of labor and material in 1896 and 1906. The figures showed an increase of twenty per cent in the cost of labor and from sixty to seventy-five per cent in the cost of material. In spite of the great increase in the cost of labor and material for maintenance there had been a general reduction of rates on local freights of at least 18 per cent. How has this been brought about? By the tremendous increase in the volume of through business, interstate business. It was a business that was created largely by the activity of the road. There were notable improvements in operation which militated to stand off the increase in the cost of labor and material. And the railroad exploited the natural resources of the country,—developed them. The prosperity of the farmer was essential to the continued welfare of the road. That prosperity could be promoted by increasing the price of farm products. That price could be increased by reducing the cost of transportation. All the energies of the road were bent to creating that additional business. There is no more grain shipped than there was ten years ago and the rate received for the handling of it has been reduced one-fifth. On the other hand, there has been an increase in amount of the freight that is more expensive to handle. But the road has expanded. It was found that return freight must be had for the cars that had borne grain east. The coast, first, and then the Orient was exploited to incerase the volume of business. The lumbering resources of Washington were undeveloped because of the high freight rates to the eastern markets. The rates were forced down to that point where the shippers could afford to enter the eastern market. The railroad made no money at first but it developed a paying business and by bringing the coast lumber into this market it held down the price. Lumber is high now, but what would it be if the coast competition did not enter the market? The state of Minnesota alone, it was shown, had not by its contribtion to the business of the company justified the reduction in freight rates, but it had benefited by the increase in the business of the system, and all the time the railroad had been paying increased amounts in taxes on gross earnings on this business that it had created. All this Mr. Farrington pointed in the course of his testimony, and now it was proposed to take away from the railroads a round million of dollars in revenue on freights that did not now pay high enough rates to afford a profit and this solely for the benefit of the country storekeeper. Asked if he had considered the effect of the proposed reduction in rates on the revenues of the state, Mr. Farrington said:

Where the Loss Will Fall.

"That is one thing that I think has been entirely overlooked. The testimony that has been given indicates that the amount to be lost by all the roads doing business in this state, should the proposed rates go into effect, will be about $1,000,000. This million dollars is going to be contributed to a few storekeepers. It is not going to help the jobbers or increase their business in any way; it is not going to help the farmers, because the price they have to pay for the little stuff they buy at the stores will not be decreased. It is going to help the storekeeper only.

"But it is going to reduce the taxes collected by the State of Minnesota $40,000 a year, and somebody has got to make up those taxes. The people who will have to make it up will be the farmers, the jobbers, the people who own little property in towns and who will not be benefited in any way. It is barely possible that the taxes paid by the storekeepers will be increased, but they can well afford to pay their proportion of the $40,000 if they are going to get $1,000,000 for doing it."

Mr. Farrington's testimony was very generally supported by statistical data. His points bristled with figures, all tending to the same end: to show that local rates were too low now in many cases, that no benefit would come to any considerable class from the reductions proposed, and that the rates contemplated would cripple the railroad in its primary object in ratemaking. To lighten the burden on the man whose prosperity was essential to the wellbeing of the railroad—the farmer. Mr. Farrington summed the case when, on cross-examination, he was asked by Mr. Manahan:

"If the profits on the interstate business became too large, would you reduce rates generally?"

"We would deem it good policy to reduce the rate on grain, coal, lumber and such articles," he replied, "because that would help the people and develop the country. That's why we object to the reduction of merchandise rates. A cut there will keep us from reducing grain and fuel rates."

As to the comparative cost of handling less than carload lots as compared with carlots, E. D. Sewall, formerly president of the Minnesota Transfer company, said that it cost about 30 cents per ton to transfer less than carload lots and for carload lots 8½ cents per ton.

H. A. Gray, comptroller of the Northern Pacific, showed the comparative condition of Minnesota business by calling attention to tables prepared by Thomas Japp, statistician for the railroad commission, in which it was demonstrated that there had been a decrease in the gross earnings of all roads in Minnesota from 1903 to 1905 and an increase in gross earnings on all roads in Iowa and Illinois. The net earnings in Minnesota had decreased 11.44 per cent and increased 4.09 per cent in the other states.

S. C. Stickney testified as to the cost of handling freight by the Minnesota Transfer company, of which he is president.

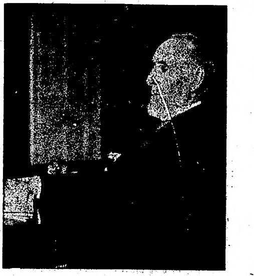
OPPONENTS IN BITTER CONTEST.



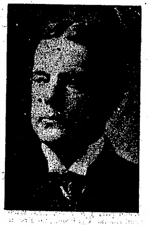
SHELBY M. CULLOM,

Senior United States senator from Illinois.

Rounding into the last week of the Illinois primary campaign, the interest of the politicians of both parties in the probable result is intense. In both the Republican and Democratic organizations the question of factional supremacy, as well as the nomination of candidates, is at stake. Whichever side wins in the coming struggle will have control of the party machinery in the presidential campaign of 1908.

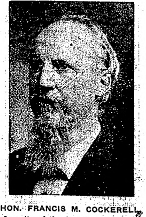
Among Republicans the result in Cook county will be awaited with deep interest by the leaders out in the state. The vote on the candidates of the United States senate in Cook county will be a large factor in determining the result.

As to the senatorial contest in Cook county opinions differ. By some of the close friends of Gov. Dineen it is declared that Yates will receive a vote that will surprise by its magnitude. On the other hand, the supporters of Cullom assert that the senior senator will have a large majority of the popular vote and will carry all but two of the nineteen senatorial districts in Cook county.



FORMER GOV. RICHARD YATES of Illinois, who is conducting a sensational campaign for Cullom's seat in the senate.

KEFPS UP STRENUOUS PACE.



HON. FRANCIS M. COCKERELL.

In spite of the fact that he is more than seventy-two years of age, Francis Marion Cockrell, former senator from Missouri, now a member of the interstate commerce commission, is one of the hardest workers in the public service. When a member of the upper house of congress, where he served for thirty years, Senator Cockerell was regarded as one of the most industrious members of that body. He was constant in his attendance upon the sessions of the senate, and never missed a committee meeting. Mr. Cockerell is taking these habits of industry into the interstate commerce commission, and has become so interested in the preparations now being made for the enforcement of the new railroad rate law that he has declined to take a vacation.

"I think I'll stay here all summer," said Commissioner Cockerell. "There is plenty to do here. It is true that the weather is hot as blazes, but then I am from Missouri, and I can stand it."

Mr Cockrell is one of the first to reach the offices of the interstate commerce commission every day, and the last to leave. His luncheon consists of two apples and a glass of milk, and this has been his midday diet for many years. Although he has been in harness for more than half a century, Senator Cockerell, judging from his appearance, has a good many years before him.

RANEY BROS.' RANCH IS SOLD.

Well-Known Property Goes to Iowan for $25,000.

The old Raney Bros.' ranch, just south of the Stutsman county line, in La Moure county, has been sold to John Engberg of Kiron, Iowa, who paid $25,000 for the property. It is one of the best known of the old ranches in this part of the state, and embraces 2,580 acres. Four hundred acres are meadow land and four hundred are under cultivation. The buildings can shelter several thousand head of stock and there is plenty of fresh water on the land. The Raney brothers were among the pioneer ranchers of the James river valley and have gone through all the experiences incident to fighting prairie fires, enduring blizzards and having their share of all the hardships of ranch life.

K. O. Holte of Sherwood advanced $120 to bring two people from the old country to North Dakota. They worked for him two days and skipped.

GOLD ON GOPHER FARM.

Pure Dust in Sand on Luckert's Place, Near Faribault.

Probably as rich gold fields as any discovered in which pure gold in the dust was found have been located in Newmarket township, sections 2 and 3, and range 112, twenty-six miles northwest of Faribault.

There seems to be no mistake or fake about these deposits, and that they are extensive as to area and depth, as samples have been sent to Rapid City to the government assaying establishment, and a thorough test made. The assay of the poorest samples shows $1.65 a ton, after being fingered by scores af hands and nearly half sticking to the fingers.

The gold is pure dust in sand and can be shoveled as easily as common sand, and the hills and valleys are full of it on ground comprising nearly 100 acres, some places as deep as forty feet.

The writer has seen the assay certificate, signed by the assayer, L. Mellinger, and Charles H. Fulton, president of the college of mines, Rapid City, S. D. We have spent several days prospecting there and have samples of the gold washed and some unwashed.

There is much of it which will test $4 to the ton of gravel and sand.

The owner of the land upon which the gold has been found is Sam Luckert, living one mile northwest of Elcoe, Minn. The farm comprises 240 acres, and deposits are found all over it in lesser richness. The land has been farmed for forty years by Germans and Scandinavians, and Luckert is a recent purchaser and discovered the gold while digging postholes.

ORE LEASE GOES CHEAP.

Eighty-acre Tract, Recently Abandoned, Sells for Only $1 Premium.

The state mining lease to eighty acres formerly held by the Onondaga Mining company in St. Louis county and recently surrendered to the state, was sold at public auction in the state auditor's office at a premium of $1.

Only two men had filed applications for the lease, J. M. Gray, who purchased it, and Luke H. Corcoran, both mine speculators of Duluth. Corcoran bid $25, and Gray raised the bid to $26. Of this amount, $25 is the state fee for the lease; the small balance is the premium. It is believed that the two men got together on the deal and that this is the reason for the ridiculously low premium. There have been a number of other applications for leases on the property, but there was a general misunderstanding that the applications had to be made July 16, and the only two bidders who appeared had filed applications on that date.

Mr. Gray announces that he will thoroughly explore that portion of the tract which has not heretofore been touched by drills. The property is believed, according to geological calculations, to be within the ore belt, and valuable mines are in operation in the vicinity, demonstrating that the claim is certainly in an ore district.

CROOKSTON IN THE THROES.

Campaign for a New Charter Getting to Be Something Fierce.

Crookston is in the throes of a hotly waged charter fight and as much interest is taken as could possibly be in the issue of a presidential campaign. Open-air meetings are being held each evening and the addresses of prominent members of the charter commission are listened to by large crowds.

The Commercial club has taken up the fight and is directing the campaign with such energy that the opponents of the measure are fighting for wind. Besides the open-air meetings, noonday and midnight meetings are being held in the vicinity of factories and manufacturing plants.

WILLMAR GRASPS OPPORTUNITY.

Commercial Club Committee Goes After Proposed New Seminary.

It is possible that a ladies' seminary will be established in Willmar, under the management of the Lutheran Free church. At a convention at Battle Lake in June Willmar was named with four other cities as a suitable location, and Rev. Mr. Michaelson of Willmar, with the assistance of the Commercial club, is making strenuous efforts to get the school. The following committee has been appointed by the Commercial club to take the matter in hand: C. A. Birch, chairman; W. J. Pinney, O. R. Berkness, P. C. Peterson and G. O. Sand. The only other school of this kind in the Northwest is at Red Wing.

County Division Laid By for Time.

The division of St. Louis county will not be attempted this year. Instead the county divisionists will exert themselves for the amendment of the county division law by the next legislature, so that the proposition to divide can be submitted to the electors without submitting the designation of a temporary county seat.

This course of action was decided upon at the convention of commercial clubs held at Virginia.

HORDES OF PESTS AT WORK.

State Entomologist Says Three Bad Species Are Abundant.

"Three serious pests are becoming alarmingly abundant this year, and promise no good," said F. L. Washburn, state entomologist. "Several complaints of the army worm attacking timothy have reached me from various sources in the state, and this pest of grasses and grains seems to be on the increase and may cause serious trouble next year. The army worm is a cut worm, and when it appears in large numbers, as it sometimes does, it travels about like an army in quest of food, hence its name. Like other cut worms, it turns into a moth, undergoing its changes from the caterpillar stage in the ground.

"When a farmer sees an army of these worms advancing slowly toward his grain field he can plow three or four or more furrows on the side from which the worms are coming, throwing the earth toward the advancing worms. The furrows check and hold the army worms, and they can be killed therein by the use of a little kerosene or kerosene and water, or straw can be spread over the furrows and then burned.

"A second pest, comparatively new here, and also likely to become serious, is the soft-shelled scale of the plum. They have been reported to me, and specimens received from plum, evergreens, spireas, various lilacs, elm, maple, apple and other trees and shrubs. This scale looks like an excrescence on the bark; it is round, hemispherical, and underneath the brown exterior is the insect iself, which secretes the scale.

"For the past two weeks eggs have been hatching in countless hundreds, and the young, soft-bodied scales are crawling out from the parent scale and spreading over shrubs and trees. Now is the time, therefore, to kill them by spraying, when they are easily killed. I have found that a 5-cent cake of soap dissolved in six gallons of water, and used when lukewarm, will kill these little felllows, and one or two applications will practically free a small shrub or tree of the pest. If one waits until these little scales settle down and secrete a hard covering, it takes much stronger caustics or oils, which have to be used when the tree is dormant, to kill them.

"A third pest is our old friend, the Hessian fly, whose ravages are well known here. It is a little early to note the effect of the Hessian fly in the grain fields, but field observers in the employ of this department have reported its occurrence in considerable abundance."

GREAT DAY WILL OPEN THE FAIR

Monday, Sept. 3, One of the Best of the Fair.

This first day of the state fair will be one of the greatest ever seen at an exposition. In the morning the great amphitheater will be dedicated in an address by James J. Hill. In the afternoon the two fastest stallions—trotting and pacing—in the world will go after their own records. During the same afternoon there will be a big racing and amusement program, including a $2,500 purse for a trot and the 2:09 pace, one of the fastest on the list. In the evening there will be another amusement program, concluding with the first performance of "Moscow," the pyrotechnic spectacle.

The fair management looks for the greatest crowd in the history of the fair on Monday. The half-fare rates on the railroads go into effect on the previous Saturday, Sept. 1, so that people from even the most remote parts of the Northwest can reach the cities in time for the events of this significant occasion.

Dan Patch is faster than ever. When he goes at the Minnesota state fair on Monday, Sept. 3, something great in speed may be looked for. This prediction is warranted by what Dan did the other day. Hersey had him out on the track at Savage on Friday, and in a very easy jog worked him out in 2:06 flat. This is faster than Dan has ever made this early in the season. Cresceus also is in good form and doing some miles at a good speed.

Dan Patch and Cresceus will not race each other at the state fair. As Dan is naturally a much faster horse than Cresceus, he would have to be handicapped considerably—in fact he would have to start back near the eighth pole and the horses would lack the stimulus of going side by side.

Each will go against his own world's record at different times in the afternoon, and Trainer Hersey will drive in each case. This arrangement really doubles the spectacle.

Anna Chounard has commenced an action in the district court of Becker county for a divorce from Joseph Chounard, the grounds being that he is convicted of a felony and is an inmate of the state prison. They are both Indians and lived on the White Earth reservation.

The man is serving a sentence of twenty years for manslaughter and was received at the prison March 31 last. He is twenty-six and she is twenty-three. They were married Jan. 9, 1900, and have a daughter two years old.

The Republicans must want Minnesota, from the talent that will be thrown in here this fall. Among the speakers expected are Secretary Taft, Congressman Littlefield, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Wilson, Senator Beveridge, Congressman Landis and McCall and Senator Dolliver. Make it a few more and the Democrats will elect a lieutenant governor too.

Bemidji is harnessing its water-power, Crookston and Red Lake Falls both have big dam plans in the Louisville country, Hibbing will get a thousand horse from the Sturgeon river, Big Falls boasts of its fine thirty foot fall, Koochiching is building the biggest dam in the northwest, Grand Rapids and Cloquet have been making money from their rivers and rapids for several years, and Duluth in three months will have ready for commercial use one of the finest water powers in the world. Are we very far wrong in claiming for northern Minnesota a great future as a center of manufacture?—Crookston Times.

AN "INTEREST"ING AFFAIR.

GIVING A SQUARE DEAL.

Le Sueur News, (Rep.): A whole lot of Democrats are giving the people a square deal in office. Enthuiasts should remember this when betting on results.

HARMONY IN HUGE CHUNKS.

Crookston Times, (Rep.): Funny campaign isn't it? Here is the Princeton Union hinting at disaffection and party disloyalty and here is the St. Cloud Journal-Press urging the party not to imitate its own horrible example of two years ago.

EDDY HINTS AT COLE'S DEFEAT.

Redwood Roveille, (Rep.): "The day has passed when party majorities mean certain political success," sagely remarks Frank M. Eddy's excellent Sauk Center Herald. Is Frank afraid somebody on the Republican ticket is going to be defeated in Minnesota next November.

NO EXODUS NOTICEABLE.

Appelton Press: Two years ago Hennepin gave Johnson 24,000 and and Dunn 15,000 votes, and as there has been no exodus of Sweeds from the saw dust city during the last two years, we fail to see how the trick will be turned; as on a bet, Bob has more personal friends there than the two Coles combined.

JAKE NOT ENTHUSIASTIC.

Windom Reporter, (Rep.): It is reeorted down this way that in spite of the speech Jake Jacobson made at the convention endorsing Cole that he is slyly putting the hooks into him. A gentleman tells the editor of the Reporter that he saw a letter from Jake which doesn't look as if he were supporting the late Populist whom the Republicans have nominated for governor.

THE INDEPENDENT VOTER.

Northfield News, (Rep.): The political situation in Minnesota seems to be, as near as one can judge about this: There are about 20,000 or 30,000 independent voters who will vote as they pleaee regardless of the party lash or the federal machine. They will not be governed in their choice of candidates by political machinist, railroad or lumber trusts or by the newspaper organs controlled by these agencies. This independent is the vote that will elect the next governor of Minnesota. Who will get it?

LANGUM'S HARMONY CONTRIBUTION.

Preston Times, (Rep.) (Sam Langum's paper): That Tom Shevlin set up a great "feed" after the Duluth convention to celebrate the defeat of Messrs. Jacobson and Lord seems to be pretty well established, but of what the feed consisted, the number of courses, the number of drinks etc., etc., seems to be shrouded in mystery and others seem to know more about it than we do. Here is a guess at it from the Le Sueur Democrat: "When Tom Shevlin gets to heaven he will probably hunt up old Belshazzar and settle the mooted question as to which feed cost the most money. We are inclined to bet on Tom. Because it is not on record that Belshazzar adjourned his delegates to another joint for the last course." Which causes Frank Day, who had his minions on the ground, to hint thus darkly: "And the story of the 'adjourned meeting' when published will make old Belshazzar look like a Y. M. C. A. agent."

HAD HER WISH; GOT THE FISH.

Rescued from a Huckster Bad, This Was a Lucky, Lucky Shad.

She was a woman fair to see, of tender heart; he was a husky huckster man whose stock in trade was shad. He swung a six-pound fish aloft and begged that she would buy; she felt a thrill run down her back; a tear was in her eye. "That shad's alive," the woman cried; "it makes my blood run chill. I'll buy it from you here and now. Accept the dollar bill."

The monger took the bill, of course; the lady got her fish; but never she at any time thought of a chafing dish. "Poor shad," she said in soothing tones, "I know you're living yet." And straightway to the pier she went and threw it in the wet.

All of which, according to a veracious reporter, occurred at Thirty-ninth street, near Broadway, yesterda. The lady is a member of the S. P. C. A., and when she saw a cruel man peddling a live shad she demanded that he desist. He refused, whereupon she bought the fish, and, wrapping it in a piece of paper, took it to the North river and returned it to its native element.—New York Times.

NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.55)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE PROOF SELF-HEALING RECORD TIRE CO CHICAGO U.S.A.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

The fact that S. S. S. is a purely vegetable preparation, containing not the slightest trace of mineral in any form, has been one of the strongest points in its favor during its forty years of existence. It is recognized everywhere not only as the best of all blood purifiers, but the one medicine that can be taken with absolute safety by the youngest child or the oldest member of the family. Next in importance to removing the cause of any disease is the condition in which the system is left after a course of medical treatment. Medicines containing mercury, potash or other strong mineral ingredients often do permanent injury by eating out the delicate lining and tissues of the stomach, producing chronic dyspepsia, unfavorably affecting the bowels and so damaging the system that even if the original cause of the disease has been removed, it is left in such a deranged and weakened condition that the health is permanently impaired. S. S. S. enjoys the distinction of being the only blood medicine on the market that does not contain a mineral property in some form. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks it is absolutely harmless to any part of the system, and while curing disease adds strength and health to every part of the body. S. S. S. removes all poisons, freshens and purifies the blood and gives better and more lasting results than any other blood medicine. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison and all troubles due to an impure or poisoned blood supply. Besides being the King of blood purifiers S. S. S. is the best and most invigorating of all tonics.

Democratic County Convention.

A Democratic delegate convention for the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, will be held on Saturday, August 25th, 1906, at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon of said day at the city hall in the city of Thief River Falls, in said county, for the purpose of selecting 10 delegates to the Democratic State Convention to be held in the city of Minneapolis, on Tuesday, September 4th, A. D., 1906, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor and other state offices.

Also for the purpose of designating a resident of said county who shall be recommended to the State convention for election as a member of the State Central Committee, and transact such other business as may properly come before said convention.

The primaries for the election of delegates shall be held in the usual voting places in the several precincts on Wednesday, the 22nd day of August, A. D., 1906, from 7 to 9 o'clock p. m.

By order of Democratic County Committee. —Geo. Tapper, Chairman.
Fred Borchers, Secretary.

The farther they get away from the convention, the less the republican papers have to say in favor of A. L. Cole.

J. Pierpont Morgan saved a man's life from drowning recently by throwing him a rope. Does he draw a Carnegie medal on that.

Prophets of Cole's election should study the life of J. Alexander Dowie, who is near death's door without having seen any of his prophecies come to pass.

Another Chicago bank has gone bump leaving 22,000 depositors to mourn the loss of over four millions. What is it they do to officials of that kind of banks in China?

Of Course its true that an idiot is irresponsible for the editorials in the Thief River Press but that is no reason why he should write himself down an ass every week in the year.

A horse on Frank Day's Martin County Sentinel: in last week's issue he copied a paid baking powder advertisment from some paper in the southern part of the state and, givinn due credit ran it as an item of news.

According to well founded reports, Representative James A. Tawney, vice chairman of the Republican national commitee, is and will be from now on a "progressive republican and opposed to the policy of standpattism." McCleary must soon begin to feel mighty lonely.

The Republicans must want Minnesota, from the talent that will be thrown in here this fall. Among the speakers expected are Secretary Taft, Congressman Littlefield, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Wilson, Senator Beveridge, Congressman Landis and McCall and Senator Dolliver. Make it a few more and the Democrats will elect a lieutenant governor too.

Bemidji is harnessing its water-power, Crookston and Red Lake Falls both have big dam plans in the Louisville country. Hibbing will get a thousand horse from the Sturgeon river, Big Falls boasts of its fine thirty foot fall. Koochiching is building the biggest dam in the northwest, Grand Rapids and Cloquet have been making money from their rivers and rapids for several years, and Duluth in three months will have ready for commercial use one of the finest water powers in the world. Are we very far wrong in claiming for northern Minnesota a great future as a center of manufacture?—Crookston Times.

AN "INTEREST"ING AFFAIR.

Minneapolis Telegram, (Rep.): According to some papers, the Duluth convention was an "interest"-ing affair.

GIVING A SQUARE DEAL.

Le Sueur News, (Rep.): A whole lot of Democrats are giving the people a square deal in office. Enthuiasts should remember this when betting on results.

HARMONY IN HUGE CHUNKS.

Crookston Times, (Rep.): Funny campaign isn't it? Here is the Princeton Union hinting at disaffection and party disloyalty and here is the St. Cloud Journal-Press urging the party not to imitate its own horrible example of two years ago.

EDDY HINTS AT COLE'S DEFEAT.

Redwood Roveille, (Rep.): "The day has passed when party majorities mean certain political success," sagely remarks Frank M. Eddy's excellent Sauk Center Herald. Is Frank afraid somebody on the Republican ticket is going to be defeated in Minnesota next November.

NO EXODUS NOTICEABLE.

Appelton Press: Two years ago Hennepin gave Johnson 24,000 and and Dunn 15,000 votes, and as there has been no exodus of Sweeds from the saw dust city during the last two years, we fail to see how the trick will be turned, as on a bet, Bob has more personal friends there than the two Coles combined.

JAKE NOT ENTHUSIASTIC.

Windom Reporter, (Rep.): It is reeorted down this way that in spite of the speech Jake Jacobson made at the convention endorsing Cole that he is slyly putting the hooks into him. A gentleman tells the editor of the Reporter that he saw a letter from Jake which doesn't look as if he were supporting the late Populist whom the Republicans have nominated for governor.

THE INDEPENDENT VOTER.

Northfield News, (Rep.): The political situation in Minnesota seems to be, as near as one can judge about this: There are about 20,000 or 30,000 independent voters who will vote as they pleaee regardless of the party lash or the federal machine. They will not be governed in their choice of candidates by political machinist, railroad or lumber trusts or by the newspaper organs controlled by these agencies. This independent is the vote that will elect the next governor of Minnesota. Who will get it?

LANGUM'S HARMONY CONTRIBUTION.

Preston Times, (Rep.) (Sam Langum's paper): That Tom Shevlin set up a great "feed" after the Duluth convention to celebrate the defeat of Messrs. Jacobson and Lord seems to be pretty well established, but of what the feed consisted, the number of courses, the number of drinks etc., etc., seems to be shrouded in mystery and others seem to know more about it than we do. Here is a guess at it from the Le Sueur Democrat: "When Tom Shevlin gets to heaven he will probably hunt up old Belshazzar and settle the mooted question as to which feed cost the most money. We are inclined to bet on Tom. Because it is not on record that Belshazzar adjourned his delegates to another joint for the last course." Which causes Frank Day, who had his minions on the ground, to hint thus darkly: "And the story of the 'adjourned meeting' when published will make old Belshazzar look like a Y. M. C. A. agent."

ITS MERIT IS PROVED

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Cincinnati Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

Mrs. Sara Wilson

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with female trouble, which caused me severe pain, extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid female tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you have suppressed or painful periods, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, pelvic catarrh, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, or some derangement of the organs. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A woman's vanity begins with her hat and ends with her shoes.

Same Habits.

She—"Your habits and preferences seem to have changed since our marriage. I saw you twice as often as I do now."

He—"Oh, I don't know; my habits are pretty much the same."

She—"I fail to see it."

He—"Well, I was hardly ever at home then, either!"

Reason for It.

"Why, Mr. Knox," said the landlady to the new boarder, "you have let a piece of butter fall in your coffee."

"I did it on purpose, Mrs. Hasher," replied the n. b. "I believe in compelling the strong to assist the weak."

In a Pinch, Use ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE

Wanted, Something Wet.

The North Dakota State Fair

Gave first prizes to the Dakota Business College of Fargo for the best professional penmanship, the best pupil penmanship and the most improvement in pupils' writing—in fact, all prizes given for good writing at the fair were won by Prof. Watkins' teachers and pupils, an endorsement of his work which cannot be overestimated.

Admissible Testimony.

A clergyman, recently returned from the West, brought this story: He was the guest of one of the pillars of the church in a rural community. Beefsteak was the pièce de resistance, and the guest sawed at his with such energy that its toughness was perfectly obvious.

Finally the host thought it necessary to do something to save his reputation for hospitality.

"It's fine meat," he remarked; "nice and tender, but, you see, we have to keep the knives very dull on account of the children."

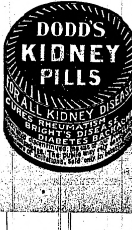
Verse to Fit.

"Say, Rhymster," called the editor, "can you write me a poem to order?"

"Certainly, sir. What about?"

"Oh, about twenty-four lines long and not more than a column wide."

And the poet went out groaning over the coarseness of the age.



THE Brangwyn Mystery

CHAPTER VI. (Continued.)

"Now," said Billery, "I'm coming to the point. I'm coming to——" His speech began to falter and a momentary glaze crept over his eye. "I must have a drink," he said. Behind a great screen of black and scarlet lacquer, inlet with an elaborate design of hammered silver, he found what he sought, and, after taking one copious draught behind the screen, he emerged with another in his hand. He sat down and resumed his speech, sipping from time to time. "This stuff," he began, indicating the gallipot and the cheap metal cigarette-box in which he had carried his own sample; "this stuff is modelling clay. You have had a good many hundredweights of it through your fingers in your working days. Now, at the time of the old man's disappearance hadn't you been working at a colossal statue of Boadicea?"

"I had built up the frame work that week and had finished molding the mass about it the day before my uncle vanished." He spoke with difficulty, moistening his lips with his tongue. "I know what you are coming to, Billery," he said. "It is Adolphe's story, too."

"I take it," said Billery, "that the old man was drugged. There was no sign of violence on the body. What happened was simply this. Aloysius cleared out a great mass of soft clay from that figure, placed the dead or unconscious old man in the cavity, built it hermetically up again, restored your work to something like the state in which you left it, and so went away."

"That is Adolphe's story," said Alexis, with an effort.

"Aloysius finished that statue, didn't he?"

"So far as it was ever finished, it was his work."

"What became of it?"

"I don't know. I went abroad. I was upset by my uncle's death. I was not in England when the old house was dismantled."

"What I want to know," said Billery, tripping on his words like a walker who loses his balance on slippery ground. "Look here, Alex. What do I want to know? I'll have a drink, old chap, then I shall remember. I know I'm welcome." He retired rather unsteady behind the screen, had his drink there, and come back carrying another. For the moment the new drink had sobered him, and he began to speak intelligibly as he crossed the room. "What I want to know is how that statue was conveyed into the cellar of the empty house. When I know that I shall have my chain of evidence complete and I shall bring that callous scoundrel to the gallows."

"Billery," said Alexis, "you won't do that?"

"By heaven I will," cried Billery. "He shall hang for it, the infernal villain. Hadn't the old man loved him and nurtured for years? My blood boils when I think that a fiend like that is allowed to walk about and pollute the air which is breathed by honest men."

He emptied his tumbler and placed it unsteadily on the table.

"Billery," cried Alexis, seizing him by the arm and shaking him, "you must not do this. Do you hear me? You must not do it. Think of the shame, the anguish, the disgrace of it."

"I dare not think of that. I must do my duty."

"Oh, Billery! Have I deserved this at your hands? That you should fasten this hateful accusation on the only man who bears my name. Have I deserved this? You strike a blow at me; you make the old name a byword and a horror. Why should you seek vengeance more than I? Leave the man to his own conscience."

"I shall do my duty," said Billery, collapsing suddenly.

"The brandy's too much for him," said Alexis, thrusting him angrily into a chair. "I never saw anybody like him. He'll behave with perfect intelligence to the last minute, and then he'll be extinguished as suddenly as a blown-out candle. Get up, you ruffian, and, if you must go to sleep, sleep on my bed. Look here, I'm expecting people, and I can't have you on exhibition in this state. Get up."

And being thus intemperately urged, Billery got up, lurched wildly this way and that, and was finally launched like a sack of coals upon the bed.

"Now go to sleep, you monumental ass," said Alexis, looking disdainfully down at him. "That's a pretty fellow to be holding fate in his hands," he murmured, as he left the room.

He was a great deal shaken by the events of the evening, and the double guess at the way in which a great crime had been perpetrated filled him with apprehension. Such mystery as there had been in his uncle's disappearance and in the discovery of his body seemed as if it were laid open now to the contemplation of the whole world. A guess which had sprung up in two minds acting independently of each other might spring up anywhere.

The brandy he had taken under the first infliction of the shock had dulled and stupefied him a little, now that its stimulative effect was exhausted, and he sat thinking dully of what was almost certain to happen in a very brief space of time. The timepiece on the mantel sounded its fairy call at each half-hour, but he still sat on brooding. It was past 10 o'clock when he went back to the room in which Billery lay asleep, and there attired himself for out of doors. When he had completed his preparations he switched out the light and was making for the door when something tripped him at the feet and brought him to his knees. He groped in the darkness for a moment, and then recovering himself, went out, softly closing the chamber door behind him.

He was feeling very miserable and upset, and when he reached his club he did what was for him a very unusual thing. He called for a bottle of champagne in the dining room, and emptied it there in solitude. The diners had all gone away to their several pursuits. The theater-goers had not yet returned, and the place was very solitary, eerie, and forlorn. There was a party in the card room, but he declined the place offered him, and, having lighted a cigar, allowed it to go out again, and sat so sleepy and stupid that some of the players rallied him upon his gloomy mood.

"I am not well," he said, in answer to one of them. "I have a beastly headache for one thing, and for another that fellow Billery—you know Billery—has invaded my flat in a state of complete intoxication and has exiled me from home. I left him on my bed sleeping off the effects of his potations. I think I shall ask them to give me a shakedown here. I left a kit here a fortnight ago."

"Oh, Billery!" said one of the players, shuffling at the pack. "Billery has been a hopeless case for years."

Alexis put his idea into execution and had a room prepared for him. He mounted to it, and ordered more wine there, and still sat brooding, with two people mainly in mind. The unwelcome guest now lying at his chambers was one of these, and his cousin Aloysius was another. There was a horror upon him which he could not shake away, a sense of something terrible impending which clogged his heart and weighed upon his lungs and afflicted him like a nightmare.

CHAPTER VII.

At the hour of midnight the sleek and respectable Gervase, who was Alexis Brangwyn's body-servant, and out on leave, was chalking his cue for a final hundred up at billiards with the marker at the Crown and Cushion when a friend of his, who valeted a gentleman on the floor immediately above Brangwyn's rooms, came in in some disorder, and, catching sight of him after a swift glance about the room, advanced hurriedly and plucked him by the sleeve.

"Come home at once," he whispered. "There may be something very serious the matter."

"What is it?" asked Gervase.

"Don't waste a minute," returned the other. "I can tell you all about it as we go."

Upon this, moved by something very serious in his friend's face, Gervase scrambled hastily for his hat and coat, threw down on the billiard table the payment for his score, and left the room.

"Well, what is it?" he asked again, half-running at the other's side.

"If your governor's at home he may be in a very queer way by this time. There's a smell of gas in his rooms that is enough to poison you. I'd half a mind to take the risk myself and break the door down. But I couldn't quite make up my mind to that, and I raced away on the chance of finding you at the Crown instead."

"How do you know it's in our place?" panted Gervase.

"You'll find there's no mistake about that when you get there," said the other. "You could cut it with a hatchet."

There was really no possibility of mistake as to the locality of the escape. The atmosphere about Brangwyn's door was dense and sickening, and Gervase had no sooner applied his latchkey than the odor rolled out on the stairway in an invisible nauseating cloud.

"For heaven's sake don't strike a light," cried Gervase. "Switch on the electric."

The chief apartment of the suite was empty. So was the dining room, as a single glance revealed. When the bedroom door was opened the first flash of light revealed a huddled figure fully dressed upon the floor. A sharp hissing sound came from the grate, where the gas, turned on full, was pouring into the heaped-up pile of asbestos balls. One turned off the poisonous flow, another drew wide the windows, and then both together dragged the recumbent figure into the corridor. In a minute or two a steady cool breeze was fanning through the building and the origin of the danger was rapidly being dispersed, but the unfortunate Billery gave no sign of animation.

"Who is he?" asked the man who had given the alarm.

"I think he's a pal of the governor's," said Gervase, "but I ain't sure. Strikes me he's a goner, whoever he is. I can't find no pulse, and he don't seem to breathe."

"I'll hook it for a doctor," said the other. "Put a bucket of water over him," he called, as he ran down the stairs. "That won't do him no harm."

The valet did what common sense prompted. He unloosed the unconscious man's collar, laid him flat upon his back, sprinkled him with water, and slapped his hands. By and by an inhabitant of the mansions came upstairs and stood upon the landing to look on. After an inquiry or two the new-comer volunteered to inform the police, and retraced his steps for that purpose. In quite a little while there was an assembly of curious people on the stairs. A peeler came tramping up among them, heavy-footed, solemn, and authoritative. Two minutes later a medical man was on the scene.

"There is no chance for him," he said, after a brief examination, "but we must have a try for it."

Half an hour's effort established the fact that Billery's vital spark had not yet departed; but it showed little animation. Breath and pulsations were just discernable, but there was no sign of a return to consciousness. In the meantime the policeman had drawn his notebook from his pocket and was engaging Gervase and his friend in an examination of the circumstances of the discovery.

"I think I know the gentleman now," said Gervase. "I've seen him here before, at long intervals. He was a bit shabby when I seen him last. I fancy my governor's been in the habit of doing him a kindness now and then."

"You don't suppose he was in them rooms for any unlawful purpose?" asked the officer.

"Well, of course," said Gervase, "you "you can't speak as to a man's purpose, but the governor knows him, and he's been here before."

"Who is your master?" asked the doctor, resuming the hat an dcoat he had discarded to attend on Billery.

"Mr. Alexis Brangwyn, sir," returned Gervase.

"Brangwyn?" said the doctor. "Anything to do with the mystery?"

"Yes, sir," answered Gervase. "One of the unfortunate old gentleman's nephews."

"Well," said the doctor, "if you think you would have your employer's authority for it, it would be the safest thing to have the man carried indoors. I'm rather afraid of having him moved at present. He want's fresh air and plenty of it, but the rooms are clear now. Keep him by an open window, fix his head well back, and see that his breathing isn't restricted. Take this bottle of ammonia and moisten his nostrils with a mere spot of it every few moments. I'll be back in a couple of hours or so to see how he's getting on."

So Billery was carried indoors again and the two practised men-servants undressed him and laid him flat upon his back on a couch beside an open window; and when they had him comfortably disposed Gervase conducted his comrade to his own room, and, having executed a modest raid on his employer's wine cellar and cigars, sat up with him until the doctor's return, making an occasional excursion into the room where Billery lay very still and ghastly in the shaded light.

"Whether he pegs out to-night or lives to be a thousand," he declared, settling himself comfortably after one of those visitations, "he'll never have a closer squeeze for it than this."

"No," said his friend, "you may take your Humphry Davy as to that."

In testimony to his own anxiety the doctor was back twice in the course of the night. Each time, after a survey of the patient, he said that it was "a close touch," and shook his head.

(To Be Continued.)

MIGHT BE TOO LATE.

Possibility of Resurrection Before the Burial.

The late Dr. Boardman used to relate this on himself: "I preached a funeral sermon at one time, and spoke longer than was my custom.

"The undertaker was a man of nervous temperament, and, as the afternoon was going, he began to be anxious to be on the way to the cemetery. He finally whispered to one of my members: 'Does your minister always preach as long as that at a funeral?'

"'Well, said the brother, 'that is a good sermon.'

"'Yes, said the undertaker, 'the sermon is all right, and I believe in the resurrection; but I'm afraid if he does not stop pretty soon I will not get this man buried in time.'"—San Antonio Gazette.

The Height of Meanness.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, the well known writer, was discussing the harsh treatment that a multi-millionaire had given his underpaid hands.

"Such treatment," said Miss Tarbell, "made my blood boil when I heard of it. It was mean. It was the height of meanness. It reminded me"—here she smiled—"of the conduct of a certain park policeman on a summer afternoon.

"This policeman, politely accosting a modest gentleman in an alpaca coat, said:

"'Beg pardon, sir, but could you lend me a lead pencil?'

"'Why, certainly,' smiled the gentleman, producing one at once.

"'And now your address, please,' the policeman went on. 'I saw you picking flowers a moment ago.'"

DAZED WITH PAIN.

The Sufferings of a Citizen of Olympia, Wash.

L. S. Gorham, of 516 East 4th St., Olympia, Wash., says: "Six years ago I got wet and took cold, and was soon flat in bed, suffering tortures with my back. Every movement caused an agonizing pain, and the persistency of it exhausted me, so that for a time I was dazed and stupid. On the advice of a friend I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and soon noticed a change for the better. The kidney secretions had been disordered and irregular, and contained a heavy sediment, but in a week's time the urine was clear and natural again and the passages regular. Gradually the aching and soreness left my back and then the lameness. I used six boxes to make sure of a cure, and the trouble has never returned."

If All Will Hang.

"Now," says an advertisement, "there are 6,000,000 wage earners in England, if all will hang together—" It is not quite how we should have put it ourselves. It rather reminds us of Franklin at the Declaration of Independence: "Gentlemen, we must all hang together or assuredly we shall all hang separately."—London Globe.

PHYSICIAN SAYS

Children Thrive on Grape Nuts and Cream.

A Mass. physician has found a cure for constipation in children—citing fifteen cases—by feeding them Grape-Nuts.

"Some time ago," he writes, "I became interested in your food, Grape-Nuts, as a cure for constipation in children. Having tried it in my own family, I have advised it in fifteen cases in which all suffered with constipation more or less severe. The result has been absolute relief in all.

"I write this that other children may be benefited."

How much better it is thus to bring about a healthy action in the bowels of growing children by natural means, than to feed them with improper food, requiring some kind of cathartic at intervals to overcome constipation.

Grape-Nuts gives energy to the entire nervous system including the nerves that cause the natural contraction and relaxation of the bowel muscles, that propel the food mass along.

It is predigested also, and the blood easily absorbs the food as it goes through the body, storing up vitality and force for the functions of all the organs.

Children especially, should get the right start as to habits of living. They should grow into bright, strong, cheerful men and women. Grape-Nuts solve the question of the start; a wholesome appetite will do the rest.

Children's teeth are benefited by chewing Grape-Nuts, also. Your dentist will tell you that a certain amount of exercise in chewing firm food, is necessary to grow strong, beautiful teeth.

Teeth need exercise just the same as muscles, if they are to grow strong and firm as nature intended. Grape-Nuts gives the exercise and also gives material from which good teeth are made.

BOY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Hands Pinned Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little boy was six months old he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chests and back, in short, the whole body was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed, we had to pin his hands down; otherwise he would scratch his face and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before. F. Hohrath, President of the C. L. Hohrath Company, Manufacturers of Silk Ribbons, 4 to 20 Rink Alley, South Bethlehem, Pa., June 5, 1905."

ONE IMPRESSION OF IBSEN.

Liked a Glass of Whisky, Flowers and American Women.

Ibsen, the son of a Danish skipper who retired from sea to keep a shop in Norway, and of a German mother, had the impulsiveness, says Truth, of one whose forebears had drunk deeply of beer and ardent spirits. He himself drank freely (but not to the tippling degree) of whisky, gin and grog.

I saw him take in the coffee room of the Grand hotel, where he held a daily levee, what I may call a Scotch glass of whisky, neat, and in about three-quarters of an hour a nip of gin. Most Norwegians of his years would not have noticed these potations, and they did not affect the poet's head in the least. I dare say that a spirituous stimulent unloosened the ideas that had been collecting in his head and enabled him to make a satisfactory start in writing, for he did not take up his pen to answer letters until he had taken the pick-me-up.

I noticed that he never took drinks with Americans who had made his acquaintance and that he preferred conversing with the fair Americans. They generally brought flowers to present to him on being introduced or on introducing themselves.

Ibsen had no meek modesty in receiving these acts of homage to his genius. Garden flowers, such as tea and La France roses, are not to be had for the asking in Christiania and I should fancy must be imported as cut buds. Ibsen liked carnations which have the perfume of the clove pink. On the day of my presentation I followed the American ladies in offering up a bouquet on the altar of genius—that is to say, on the little table behind which he sat, at the far end of the coffee room of the Grand hotel.

As an homme-pontiff I thought him immeasurably below Victor Hugo, but still extremely interesting, and somehow uncommon and striking, though he might have been a country lawyer, or a doctor, or a minister attentive to externals, carefully dressed in superfine black cloth, with a buttoned up coat, which gave his small figure a spruce appearance, and a cravat, immaculate in its whiteness and tied in a perfect bow.

I almost think he talked better than he wrote. Speaking of women, he said that in a hidebound community they rose far higher in mind and spirit than the male clods around them. They had always some fresh or original ideas to bring out and were really more inclined to heresy than attached to orthodoxy but were not prepared to fight for what they preferred. Their worst enemy was gentility, which prevented the moral sense and placed morality where it did not exist.

The French appeared to him in a better moral condition than the English. There was less self-deception in France and a far wider practice of austere and stoical virtue.

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

DO YOU KNOW

That kissing may be dangerous but who's afraid?

That where ignorance is bliss, knowledge is blister.

That you might think a handkerchief was a crying need. And it is.

That the pillar of a church very frequently turns out to be the nave.

That lightning never strikes twice in the same place—but what's the use.

That he is the pleasantest of all companions who always agrees with you.

That it is easy to be good when the opportunity for otherwise is lacking.

That a peek-a-boo would be awfully immodest if it were part of a bathing suit.

That a stitch in time isn't in it with a stitch in a needed place in your trousers.

That it isn't always a sign that a man is rich becaurse he doesn't pay his bills promptly.

That money doesn't grow on a tree but much of it is obtained by grafting, says an exchange.

That some people would never get far away from home if they made it a point to pay as they go.

That a bachelor says a tall girl can fool you a good deal about how thin she isn't in some places.

That in a world of criticism it seems strange that any one should draw a salary for being a critic.

That if there bad been an ice cream parlor in the garden of Eden, that apple would still remain uneaten.

That a Chicago writer says half the world worries because it isn't married; the other half because it is.

That no right-minded woman ever takes off her hat without putting up her hand to see if her hair is all right.

That we are told to let the dead past bury its dead. Some of it should be deodorized and then cremated.

That some brute of a man says it is all right to be kind to some women, but you have to whip the others.

That a New York priest says Pittsburg society is morally rotten. At this distance it looks as tho it was immorally rotten.

That if a man gets mad when you play a joke on him, it is a pretty good sign he is somethging of a pratical joker himself.

Tuat the isthmus of Panama is said to be a narrow strip of land connecting Central America with the United States treasury.

That a Kansas City man died from the shock when he learned that he had fallen heir to a fortune. We wish some one would try it on us.

That you might as well be out of the world as out of style. Just now this means you had better get a pair of white shoes and white hoisery.

That the Atlanta Constitution says a Minnesota census taker expresses surprise to find so many women who are no older than they were five years ago. Its a shame to allow a census taker to cover a territory more than once.

That it wouldn't be a bad idea to have the women of the town organize a sort of an auxiliary to the commercial club. They could do an excellent service in establishing and maintaing a permanent rest room for farmers' wives who come to town, often with young children, and have to sit around for hours waiting for their husbands.

That it is austonishing as well as disgusting how many able-bodied men follow a circus making a living with cheap catch-penny grafts and gambling devices. Instead of being allowed to ply their unwholesome tricks they should not be allowed in a town on penalty of the rock pile. No spmpathy with the suckers suggests this thought either.

That you can always tell whether a man is married or single when you see him go through a screen door. If he is married he approaches the door cautiously, glances nervously around, then takes off his hat and swipes it up and down the door two or three times. He then quietly opens the door about two inches, squeezes himself through and closes it with a quick snap. The length of time he has been married may be determined by the degree of fear and nervousness indicated in his countenance.—Ex.

FATHER ANSGAR LEAVES

Goes to Barnesville—Preaches Farewell Sermon Sunday.

Rev. Father Ansgar, pastor of St. Mary's church of this city, has announced to his congregation that he will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday and will leave shortly for his new field at Barnesville.

Father Ansgar came to Red Lake Falls from White Earth and has been in charge of St. Mary's church during the past seven years. In many ways he has endeared himself to the people of the city both in and out out of his church and irrespective of denomination. All will join in the general regret at his departure, particularly those of his congregation to whom, as priest and man, he has been more than friend.

Father Ansgar will be succeeded by Father Ambrose, who comes from Freeport, Einn.

Father Justin, of Tacoma, Wash., was in the city this week as a guest of Father Ansgar, leaving for his home last evening.

MAY NOT BUILD DITCH

Estimated Cost of Ditch No, 27 is Considered Too Much.

In the matter of county ditch No. 27, in the towns of Black River and Polk Center, petitioned for by Chas. Johnson and others the report ff the engineer and viewers has been filed with the county auditor.

The estimated number of acres benefited by the proposed ditch is 3875; the estimated benefits, $5,197.64; the estimated cost of construction $5,650.92; the estimated damages, $357.

A hearing on this ditch will be held by the board September 4, and it is very doubtful if the construction will be ordered and it is believed the cost of construction is too great as an assessment of at least $2 per acre must be made on much of the land affected. The report of the viewers shows but 34 land owners who will have to bear the expense of $5050.72.

See Dr. F. F. Fletcher, dentist, for special prices on plates.

CANDIDATE FOR SENATE

A Banker of Ada Will Break Into the Game.

Editor D. C. Lightburn and C. E. Ward, of Ada arrived in the city today and left for a trip over the east line in the interests of the candidacy of Editor Lightburn for the state senate from that district. He is backed by Messrs. Herringer, Ward et al., and will make a strong fight for the place. It developes however that in addition to the opposition of a Red Lake Falls man that Banker A. P. Hanson, of Ada has decided to enter the lists altho he has not actually filed as yet. Mr. Hanson it is generally conceded will make a very strong run as he is very well known has a barrel of money and has been identified with the successful political element in Norman county during the past few years. The race however promises to be a very warm one,—Times.

STATE INSPECTOR TO HELP CREAMERIES

Will Assist in Starting Them at Any Time Without Cost to Starters.

Creamery Inspector Winkjer Gives Valuable Information to Farmers.

The Courier is in receipt of the following communication from State Creamery Inspector Winkjer and it will be found of interest to those contemplating the starting of a creamery.

"There is a great development in the line of dairying in the northern part of the state at the present time and the healthy growth of this industry depends on the way the new creameries are established. If organized on the wrong basis, they may be a hindrance for the right progress of the dairy business. The State Dairy and Food Department has experienced men that will go to any place where a creamery is desired and give the farmers the benefit of their years of experience in this line of work and get the creamery started on the most up-to-date and successful plan. Anyone may write to the State Dairy and Food Commissioners and ask for a man or any special man to come and help in the organization, or you may write direct to the undersigned. There is no expense connected with any such help and you will get assistance that means money in your pocket."

Creamery Inspector,
Crookston, Minn.

FOUR MORE CANDIDATES

Republicans Seem Most Anxious to Get Into Office.

During the past week four candidates for office have given notice of their intentions by telling the county's auditor's office all about it and all of them, in fact all candidates who have so far filed, are republicans.

Lewis A. Nelson was in the city Monday for filing purposes. He wants the republican nomination for sheriff. He hails from Thief River Falls where he has resided for probably less than two years.

Another Thief River Falls candidate is J. B. O'Brien who also filed Monday. He is superintendent of schools at St. Hilaire and seems to think the county auditor's office will just about fit him so he proclaims his intention to seek the republican nomination.

Then there is C. W. Johnson, a prominent farmer of Poplar River. He would like a chance to be beaten by Joe Perrault for clerk of court and will contest for that honor with Harry Ives. It has been said, however not upon authority, that the two will canvass the county, speaking from the same automobile. Anyhow no one has so far been found who would venture a forecast of the outcome between the two.

Now comes Joseph Pigeon and would make the flight toward the commissionership of the 5th district via the republican route. His filing also, is of a very recent date.

There are more to come altho only about two weeks remain in which to file. No opposition has appeared in the democratic ranks to any of the present incumbents and they will take their own time to do the routine of filing.

READY TO BEGIN WORK

Commercial Club Adopts Constitution and By-laws

The commercial club held an important meeting Monday night and with the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, is now ready to proceed with the business for which it was organized.

The proposed constitution and by-laws, modeled for the most part on those of the commercial club of Minneapolis, were thoroly discussed and adopted with little change from the recommendations adopted at the previous meeting. One of the changes will make the annual meeting and election of officers on the first Monday in February. Another enlarges the plan of membership to include citizens in the vicinity of the city as well as the city itself A pertinent suggestian of the evening was the formation of a woman's civic improvment league. Nothing came of it but it embodies an excellent idea and may be given attention later. The committee on membership announced a list of 100 members. It was decided to keep the charter list open 60 days longer, after which, to gain membership, an applicant will have to be voted on and then it requires two-thirds vote to admit him.

CEMENT WALKS ORDERED

City Council Will Require Them on Certain Streets.

Under a resolution of the city council passed Thursday evening all sidewalks built or rebuilt within certain limits of the city must be of cement or stone.

The district specified in the resolution includes blocks 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 in Champagne & Dow's addition; blocks 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the original townsite; and blocks 1, 2, 3 and 4 Langevin's subdivision. This means Main street from the river to Fourth street and the property bounded by Main, First and Fourth streets and State avenue.

Another resolution was passed condemning certain sidewalks and requiring them to be rebuilt of cement. They include both sides of the court house and other property on Champagne avenue as follows: T. C. O'Leary, 100 feet; Anolde Bachand, 25 feet; and Joseph Perras 75 feet. The court house property fronting on Second street must have an 8-foot walk and the others on Champagne avenue must be 10 feet wide.

A WEATHER-PROOF FAIR

Minnesota State Fair May be Seen Rain of Shine.

The Minnesota State Fair is now almost independent of the weather. Its great buildings enclose many acres of floor space. They are connected by means of miles of cement walk. The street cars land passengers almost in the center of the grounds. And this year the great livestock amphitheater will make it possible to entertain vast crowds under cover so that even the amusement side of the fair is on a weather proof basis,

Monday will de a great day at the fair with Dan Patch and Cresceus as the amusement stars but every day of the week will be very good. The half fare rates on the railroads have been so arranged that tickets will be sold everywhere on the Saturday preceding the fair week, giving plenty of time to get to town by Monday morning.

THE COUNTY FAIR WAS A GOOD ONE

Exhibits, Attractions, Crowds and Weather Were All That Could Be Asked For.

Red Lake Falls Helps to Swell the Crowd and Enliven Things With Her Band.

The county fair held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week was a very marked success and the management is entitled to all manner of credit and encouragement for next year.

To begin with, the weather was perfect, the attendance large, exhibits good and attractions unuusually numerous. There could be no possible complaint that there was lack of amusement as between the Cash Carnival company's attractions, side shows and races there was something doing all the time. The exhibits were good tho not numerous from lack of exhibitors. It is a matter that will be improved upon with future fairs and greater settlement of surrounding country.

RED LAKE FALLS ATTENDS.

Red Lake Falls did the right thing by the fair in point of attendance as considerably over a hundred went up, most of them on Thursday at which time the band journied fairwards as guest of Frank Jeffers. There was no other band in attendance that day and the music of the Red Lake Falls organization was most acceptable. A parade was given in the morning, a short concert down town just after dinner and the afternoon was spent at the grounds. It was easily the musical attraction at the fair. So much so that even the Thief River Press was moved to say all in one issue: "The Red Lake Falls band presented a splendid appearance and rendered a brand of music that cannot be beaten."

It must not be forgotten that the most complete exhibit at the fair was that of—county officials.

It was stated last night that the only damage done the vessel was burning the paint off the woodwork in the locker.

The papers were served on Mr. Loeb by a New York firm of lawyers. They require him to make answer within twenty days in New York. Mr. Loeb will be defended by the department of justice.

SHORTAGE IS TWO MILLIONS

FORGED NOTES AGGREGATING $500,000 FOUND—PRESIDENT STILL MISSING.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Theodore Stensland, vice president of the Milwaukee Avenue State bank and son of the fugitive president of that institution, has come to the rescue of the 22,000 depositors, and it is the general belief of those who are endeavoring to straighten out the tangle that there is an excellent chance that all depositors will receive almost dollar for dollar. Stensland announced that he will turn over to Receiver Fetzner to-day all the real estate and personal property of Paul O. Stensland, his father. The son places a valuation of $600,000 on this collateral, and he stated that he had full authority to make the transfer.

According to Stensland, the property of his father is of such a character that it can be realized on without delay.

Cashier in Jail; Bail Is Refused.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Henry W. Hering, cashier of the Milwaukee Avenue State bank, which closed its doors three days ago, was arrested yesterday and will be refused his release on bail until his connection with the disappearance of nearly $1,000,000 of the bank's funds is cleared up. Paul O. Stensland, president of the defunct institution, is still a fugitive.

Hering was arrested yesterday afternoon, two hours after the time he had previously announced he would give himself up. He was taken at once to the office of Chief of Police Collins and put through a thorough examination as to his knowledge of President Stensland's alleged mismanagement of the institution.

Denies Responsibility.

Hering declared that he does not know where President Stensland is and that he has had no communication with him for over a week. The cashier strenuously denied the charge that he was partly responsible for the failure of the bank. Hering maintains that he never benefited a single dollar by President Stensland's peculiar system of banking.

Bank Examiner Jones and Assistant State's Attorney Oleson were present during the examination. Neither they nor the police officials were satisfied with the explanation given by Hering, and it was accordingly decided to refuse bail to Hering until the matter has been further investigated.

TELLER OF BANK KILLS SELF.

Driven to Death by Criticism of Neighbors and Life-Long Friends.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Frank Kowalski, for five years paying teller of the Milwaukee Avenue State bank, which failed last Monday, and for some time assistant receiving teller in addition to his other duties, shot and killed himself last night in his home here. Criticism by neighbors and lifelong friends, who accused him of a share in the downfall of the bank, is believed to have driven Kowalski to his death. For two days he had been despondent and the members of his family have kept a close watch over him.

The climax of his trouble was reached Thursday night, when a woman whom he had known for years accosted him on the street and accused him of being responsible for the failure of the bank.

Complained of Criticisms.

Kowalski complained bitterly of the suspicions of his friends, and declared that unless his character was speedily cleared he would take his life.

Kowalski's relatives assert their firm belief that he was innocent of any knowledge as to the mismanagement of the bank by President Stensland. When the bank failed Kowalski had $700 of his own money on deposit, and his immediate relatives had nearly $50,000. Had the teller known of Stenland's defalcations, they assert, he would at least have notified his relatives and would have withdrawn his own money.

Shortage Two Millions.

While the search for Paul O. Stensland, the missing president, is being extended to all parts of the country, Cashier Hering spent yesterday with the state's representatives and Bank Examiner Jones in examining the bank's collateral in an effort to determine how much the president is short. After an all-day search alleged forged notes aggregating more than $500,000 were found and are now in the possession of the state's attorney, who will use them in the prosecution of the officials responsible for their utterance.

Following statements made yesterday by Hering and the shortages found by previous investigations, it was asserted last night that it will be found that President Stensland's defalcations will aggregate nearly $2,000,000.

DARWIN HOPES TO SETTLE CONTROVERSY WITHOUT FURTHER BLOODSHED.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 12.—Oliver Darwin, an old resident of Black River Falls, who, it was recently reported, had been dissuaded from attempting to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Dietz affair, is here after having paid a visit to John F. Dietz at Thornapple dam, and yesterday he spent four hours in the offices of the Chippewa Logging company at Chippewa Falls in a fruitless endeavor to enact the role of peacemaker.

Mr. Darwin's arguments, the purport of which has not been disclosed, were heard by Mr. Ainsworth of the company, but Darwin received scant encouragement.

Mr. Darwin, who is a veteran in the logging and lumbering business, said that, having volunteered to seek a settlement of the controversy without further bloodshed, he went to Dietz's place, despite warnings and for humanity's sake. He reached the Dietz place Wednesday night. Dietz, according to Darwin, was quite willing to talk of a peaceful adjustment of the trouble.

Mr. Darwin is still hopeful that if he makes another trip to Dietz's homestead and another visit to the company's office he may bring about a settlement of the famous controversy.

Fortunately the rolls were not fully heated, nor were they clamped down tight, or probably she would have been killed. K. W. These amounts do not include the building expenditures.

SCORES IN BUTTER CONTEST.

Alex Johnson of New Ulm Is First, With Score of 98.

Alex Johnson of New Ulm wins this month's scoring in the butter contest conducted by the state dairy and food department. His score is 98. P. Christensen of Olivia is only a quarter of 1 per cent below him. M. P. Mortenson of Stockholm won third place, with a score of 97 1-2, and A. D. Fisher of New Richland is fourth, with 97 1-4. Christensen was first in the June scoring and third in the July scoring.

The butter was scored by J. C. Joslin of the state dairy and food department. Sam Haugdahl of St. Peter and H. A. Goetsch acted as critics, and will give the buttermakers instructions in improving their product.

A total of 193 tubs were entered. The butter was not as even in grade as at the previous contests, the high score being higher and the low scores being lower than at the previous contest.

FEWER ARE AT SCHOOL.

Supt. Olsen's Report Shows a Decrease of 584 in Enrollment.

There has been a marked falling off in the summer school attendance throughout the state this year, according to a report issued by State Superintendent of Schools Olsen. Not only has there been a decrease in the attendance but also a decrease in the number of schools, which undoubtedly has affected the enrollment. The total enrollment for this year is 5,497, while that of last year was 6,081, a difference of 584 students.

The number of summer schools in 1905 was forty-one, while this year there are thirty-two. During 1905 twelve schools were operated for a period of six weeks and twenty-nine for four weeks, while the attendance outside the state university and the normal schools was 3,443. This year there are ten schools that will take up the six weeks' course, and only twenty-two four-week schools. The attendance this year outside the university and the normal schools is 2,287, a decrease from 1905's attendance of 1,156.

This year there is an attendance of 3,410 at the state university and the normal schools, while last summer there was but 2,638. The increase in attendance is said to be due to the fact that by attending either the university or the normals in the summer it is possible to attain credits.

WOMEN TO VOTE.

County Attorney of Rock County Gives Opinion on Primary Law.

The question of whether or not women shall be allowed to vote at the coming primary election, which was raised by the recently published opinion of Attorney General Young, stating that women have no right to participate in the primaries, was definitely settled so far as Rock county is concerned by the announcement made by County Auditor Bruce that women will be allowed to vote, and that he will prepare the proper ballots to permit them to do so.

Auditor Bruce's decision was reached following his receipt of an opinion from County Attorney C. H. Christopherson in response to an inquiry as to whether or not he should prepare ballots for women for the coming primaries. The opinion of the county attorney is opposed to that of the attorney general. His view of the law in the case is that the intent of the law that women should participate in the primaries is every clear, and as this opinion coincides with that held by Auditor Bruce, the county auditor announced the decision above stated.

This decision, so far as Rock county is concerned, is final, as the county auditor has the power to decide whether or not the women shall be permitted to vote. The only recourse from the decision of the county auditor is through the courts.

MANY CASES ARE PENDING.

State Has Many Timber Suits That Are Awaiting Action by the Courts.

Attorney General Young announced that his department would commence without delay the prosecution of the timber trespass suits which the supreme court decision last week makes possible.

"While we have the lumbermen engaged in illegal traffic of state timber on the hip," said Mr. Young, "they will undoubtedly continue to fight, hoping if possible to cut the amounts we ask for the timber taken. The decision was of a sweeping character and was certainly most acceptable."

The state has a dozen or more suits against lumbermen pending, and these, together with the amounts sued for, are now being compiled for the benefit of the department, Gov. Johnson and the timber board.

As soon as Gov. Johnson returns from his vacation the timber board will likely be summoned to meet and the question of additional suits considered. There will be no compromising now. The state will insist on its pound of flesh.

Saved a Creamery.

While fighting a fire at the Iosco creamery at St. Peter, the buttermaker, J. C. Christianson, was seriously burned, but his heroism saved the plant from complete destruction. The fire was in some combustible material above the boiler and had spread to the roof before it was discovered.

To have waited to summon help would have been fatal, and the buttermaker began fighting the fire unaided. It had gained such headway that his task was most difficult, but he persisted in his efforts and finally succeeded in arresting its progress.

Several hours after the fire he was found lying on the floor of the creamery, completely exhausted. He will recover, but it will be at least a month before he can return to duty.

WARM LOVE LETTERS BY IBSEN.

Remarkable Infatuation of Cynical Old Man.

Ibsen had a heart after all. Even at the advanced age of sixty-one years it beat with the hot ardor of youth, and all for a shrinking maiden of twenty springs. This unexpected phase of the great dramatist's life is disclosed in a series of letters given to the world by Dr. George Brandes. They were addressed to Miss Emilie Bardach of Vienna, and are couched in the extravagant language of a schoolboy indicting his effusions to his first love.

When the letters first appeared they were received with incredulity, in spite of the fact that they were published by the reliable old Verdens Gang and were authenticated by Dr. Brandes. It seemed to the world that the man who could remain away from the marriage of his son to a daughter of an old friend was incapable of the affection so fervently breathed in the letters as they appeared in the papers.

It is generally regretted that Dr. Brandes, to whom they were intrusted by Miss Bardach, ever gave them to the public. While both the persons are wholly above suspicion, the letters reveal a weakness entirely at variance with the stern and unyielding character the old poet was supposed to possess.

Miss Bardach is now a mature woman of thirty-seven years, and lives in seclusion in Vienna.

She met Henrik Ibsen at Gossensass in the Tyrol, where she was traveling with her mother in the fall of 1889. A warm intimacy, or a warmer admiration, immediately sprang up between the two, and while they never met again, the attachment called out a series of most remarkable letters from Ibsen. Miss Bardach's letters have never been published, but they are doubtless of the same general tenor as those she received.

In the first place he launches out in a lament that she is so very far away and speaks of his inability to work as he should because his thoughts are elsewhere than on his work. A few passages follow:

"With all my heart I thank you, most esteemed fraulein, for the extremely kind and friendly letter which I received the day before leaving Gossensass, and which I have read again and again. That summer resort has worn quite a mournful look for the past week—or in any case, so it seemed to me. No sunshine more. All gone—vanished. The few visitors that remained could, of course, offer me no compensation—for the fair, brief days of summer.

"I took my walk in the Pflerschthal every day. There is a seat by the roadside where I am sure two people could converse with sympathetic feeling. But that seat was empty, and I passed it by.

"The great hall, too, I found gloomy and desolate. * * * Do you remember the great deep bay of the window on the right of the entrance to the veranda? It was a beautiful bay window. The flowers and plants with their intoxicating perfume still stood there as before. But otherwise—how empty—how lonely—how deserted!"

The reply to this pathetic letter must have been satisfactory, for the tone of the second letter is much more cheerful and lively. It might be said to be the most ardent of the twelve epistles.

"My imagination is lively and active enough. But it is always soaring away elsewhere. Thither where in working hours it has no business to be. I cannot repress my memories of summer. Nor will I. I go through my adventures again and again—and ever again. To transform all this to a poem is at present impossible.

"Ah, dear fraulein, * * * forgive me; you write so charmingly in your last. No, no. God forbid that it should be your last. In your last letter you write so charmingly: 'But I am not fraulein to you.' Well, then, dear—dear child—for that you are in any case to me—tell me, do you remember one day when we talked about 'follies' and 'madness?' Or, rather, I talked a lot about them. Then you, dear child, took up the part of teacher, and remarked in your quiet melodious way, with a far-off look, that there was nevertheless always a difference between folly and madness."

This letter closes with "Good night a thousand times." Whether the girl's mother or Mrs. Ibsen put a brake on the ardent writings which were exchanged is not known, but the latter ones are in a much calmer vein. Then there is another one breathing considerable passion and rhapsodizes as only a poem can. Finally, it dawns upon him that the infatuation has gone too far and the young woman in Vienna receives the following letter, which is intended to end their enjoyable correspondence:

"A long, very long while I have allowed your last letter to lie before me, have read and read it again, but never answered it. Receive to-day my heartiest thanks in a few words. And henceforth, until we meet again personally, you will hear but little from me by letter, indeed very seldom. Believe me, it is better so. It is the only right thing. I feel it as a matter of conscience, that I must suspend or restrict my correspondence with you.

"For the present you must occupy yourself as little as possible with me. You have other objects to pursue in your life; other feelings to which to devote yourself. And I—as I have already told you by word of mouth—can never feel satisfied with a connection kept up through the post. It seems to me that there is always something incomplete, something untrue in it. I see, I am painfully aware, that I cannot keep myself fully up to the right pitch. There is something that lies once for all in my nature. Impossible, therefore, to alter it.

"But you have such delicate perception, such instinctive penetration. You will understand all this in the way I have intended it. And when we meet again I shall explain it to you more exactly. Until then and forever you will remain in my thoughts. And even more than before, when this troublesome, incomplete business of letterwriting no longer disturbs them. A thousand greetings. Yours,

—"H. I.

A letter of condolence on the death of her father was signed, "Yours unalterably devoted, Henrik Ibsen." A little later he acknowledged the receipt of a dear letter and a picture, but requests that no more letters be received until circumstances are changed. Miss Bardach did send a telegram on the occasion of Dr. Ibsen's seventieth birthday, which was briefly but affectionately acknowledged.

HISTORIC OLD CHURCH.

Relic of Swedish Settlement in Pennsylvania.

While the Old Swedes' church (Gloria Dei) at Philadelphia and the Swedes at Wilmington have been frequently described, very little has been written about Christ church at Swedeland, Upper Merion, Pa., in the Schuylkill valley. The church contains many relics of pre-revolutionary days. From an historic standpoint it is one of the most celebrated churches in the country.

The Swedes of Upper Merion organized a congregation at the home of Gunnar Rambo in 1730, when the Rev. Samuel Hesselius, pastor at Morlatton, visited the settlement. It was not until June 24, 1760, that Christ church was dedicated. On that occasion the Rev. Karl Magnus Wrangel, who had recently arrived from Sweden, preached the sermon. The church went out of control of the Swedish Lutherans, but was not forgotten.

In 1876 Prince Oscar, now Prince Bernadotte, with a distinguished company, visited the old church and the next year King Oscar sent a fine baptismal font.

SPY ON FOREST FIRES.

Watch Tower Erected Near Swedish Boundary.

P. M. Anker of Fredrikshald, Norway, who is extensively interested in lumbering in mining in Norway, has caused to be erected a tower on Vedosfse hill in Aremark, near the Swedish border. A watch for forest fires is kept up day and night and every outbreak is promptly telephoned to the nearest authorities, the tower being connected with several places in Sweden and Norway. Not long ago the watchman discovered a forest fire east of Stora-Le in Dasland, Sweden, but the nearest forester was soon notified and he promptly set out with a force of men. This occasion called out the first kindly words for more than a year.

WASHINGTON'S RING

Exhibited by a Jeweler at Norrkoping Exposition.

A ring presented by Gen Washington to Marquis de Lafayette is one of the rare objects shown at the Norrkoping exposition. It is of gold with a miniature portrait of Gen. Washington. The ring is shown by L. J. Dahlberg, a jeweler, and he has the ring's history at his fingers' end. From Lafayette it went to Baron Stael von Holstein, Sweden's ambassador to France, from whom it descended to his brother, Maj. G. H. Stael von Holstein, in whose family it has remained since 1802. It is now owned by G. Frolen, a bank official of Gefle, Sweden, who obtained it from his mother.

Ruined by Frisco Fire.

Although the Astria Life Insurance Company of Stockholm was ruined by the San Francisco fire, all its obligations will be paid to the last cent. The Svea company, a large and substantial concern, has taken over the entire business of the unfortunate Astria company, and announces that it is responsible for all claims against the now defunct company. This action is calculated to give Swedish insurance companies a high reputation throughout the world.

Will Inspect Neutral Zone.

Col. Kornelius Blaim of the Austrian engineer corps has been named by the Swedish government as its representative in the control commission for the Swedish-Norwegian neutral zone. Col. Blaim, with Col. Schott of the German army, who was previously selected by Norway, will select a third member of the commission, after which that body will determine if the terms of the Karlstad treaty have been complied with.
